Johnson's suggestion has been frowned upon by the draft officials in Washington, and one of them said yesterday: "I suppose tennis players and leaders in other sports should be exempt with the ball players. Baseball players are exactly the sort of men the country needs as fighters; they make the best bomb throwers."

DIVERSE OPINIONS ARE HEARD.

Telegrams of Approval and Criticisms Reach Ban Johnson.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Officers of the American League were deluged here today with messages, some of them approval and many of them criticisms over the announcement by B. B. Johnson, President of the league, that exemptions for 144 players in the league would be asked from the National Government.

Baseball men were divided in their opinions of the advisability of the applications. President Tener of the National League denounced it as unpatriotic. August Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission and President of the Cincinnati National League Club, favored the move, if necessary to maintain baseball at its present standard.

Those who had expressed themselves tonight were:

For exemption—August Herrmann, James Dunn, owner of the Cleveland club; A. R. Tearney, President of the Three I League; Harry H. Frazee, President of the Boston Red Sox; Thomas J. Hickey, President of the American Association; Edward G. Barrow, President of the International League; James Price, President of the Newark Club, and A. C. Anson, former manager of the Chicago National League Club.

Against—John K. Tener, Charles A. Comiskey, President of the world champion Chicago Club of the American League; Jacob Ruppert, President of the New York Americans, and Benjamin S. Minor, President of the Washington Club.

President Johnson today insisted that the ball players and club owners might just as well have the test now and know whether they were going to be able to keep the men. "If players are drafted indiscriminately, baseball cannot go on," he said. "If the Government should take nine or ten men from one club and none from another the game would be a farce. If we pooled players there would be a cry of syndicate baseball, so that is out of the question. We must face the situation. If the clubs are to continue, they must have players. In many cases the drafting of one player would ruin a team."

W. AND J. LINEUP IN DOUBT.

Metzger Is Trying to Brace Attack for Notre Dame Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 22.—The Washington and Jefferson eleven practiced in the rain this afternoon in final preparation for the Notre Dame game Saturday. Coach Metzger has turned College Field over to the Notre Dame team for tomorrow afternoon and will give his men a light signal drill earlier in the day. Word from South Bend is that Captain Degree will play here Saturday against W. & J. The Notre Dame captain was rated last year as one of the best kickers in the West, and in practice this week has been showing his 1916 form. Coach Metzger continued today to shift his players about trying desperately to get a scoring combination, and said he would not be able to name his lineup definitely until Saturday morning.

Notre Dame supporters hereabouts are offering even money on the Westerners. The Indiana manager has secured hotel accommodations here for twenty-two players, the team having left South Bend tonight and being scheduled to get here late tomorrow morning.

N. Y. U. PRACTICES IN GYM.

The New York University football team yesterday displayed a revival of spirit, and in spite of weather conditions, which necessitated indoor work, showed good form. The freshmen practiced outdoors, in preparation for the game with Columbia freshmen, at University Heights. Although working indoors, the 'Varsity used a wet ball.

A long blackboard talk by Coach Wall took up the question of meeting the plays Columbia is expected to use tomorrow. The interference for end runs received especial attention, too. Another phase that received most attention yesterday was the protection of the ends, who go down under kicks.

FORDHAM IS CONFIDENT.

Anticipates No Difficulty in Defeating Naval Reserves Tomorrow.

Rain, and a soggy field, did not prevent the Fordham football players from holding an outdoor drill yesterday afternoon. The treacherous gridiron, however, did not allow of a stiff scrimmage, and the team simply tried out signals. The Bronxmen have not had an extended scrimmage since the Cornell game, but the team is in good shape and confident of easily defeating the Naval Reserves from the Pelham Bay station tomorrow afternoon on Fordham Field.

The same lineup as faced Cornell will be used tomorrow with the possible exception that Crovat will be able to start at quarter. Frank Frisch will not play and it is probable that he will be out of the game for the rest of the season.

The chances of another Rutgers-Fordham clash are considered slim. McDonald, the New Brunswick manager, threw a damper on the proposed game yesterday when he stated that as Rutgers had already decisively defeated Fordham, there would be little interest in the contest. He also added that the game must be played at the Polo Grounds.

LIGHT WORK FOR CADETS.

Field a Quagmire and Coaches Bar Scrimmage Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The Army went through another football practice this afternoon in preparation for the final game of the season with Boston College, on Saturday. The regular playing field is covered with a thick layer of straw, and the workout was held on the Cullum Hall gridiron. The men floundered in mud. The coaches, fearing to take chances under such conditions, allowed only the lightest kind of work.

Olyphant and Monroe practiced drop kicking and goals from placement. The Army Captain sent several sailing true from difficult angles. The linemen came in for special attention today. Luce, Smith, Adams, Stokes, and Knight were all in the lineup. Yeager was missing again, his leg injury keeping him on the side lines. He will probably be back by Saturday. Walker, Wickes, and Olyphant made up the back field. Murrill and Barrick alternated at quarter. The Cadets will have only signal drill tomorrow.

BOXING ON TRIAL TODAY.

Magistrate Nash to Hear Case Involving Membership Plan.

A hearing of the charges against the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn for conducting a boxing show under the club membership plan last Saturday night, after the expiration of the Frawley law, will be held this morning at 9 o'clock in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn. Magistrate Howard Nash will preside.

John Weismantel, proprietor of the club, was arrested last night. Others taken into custody at the same time were Andy Neiderreiter, Secretary of the club; Harry Ferris, Edward A. Flay, and J. Sell, ticket sellers; Johnny Dunn, announcer; Jack Russo, Augie Ratner, and Shamus O'Brien. The warrants were issued by Magistrate Nash. Warrants are also out for Dummy Jordon, Tommy Elm, and Red McDonald.

The arrests were made by Inspector McDonald, aided by Sergeant Seeney, Sergeant Smyth, and Patrolmen Wogard and Gandolsi. The men were taken to the Ralph Avenue Police Station and were released under $500 bail, which was furnished by Thomas A. Clark, a builder of 178 Seeley Street.

If the ruling of Magistrate Nash is against the club management, it will practically mean a cessation of club membership boxing in the metropolitan district in that it will set a precedent, although there may be some among the more venturesome of the local promoters who will attempt to stage a show. If, on the other hand, judicial approval is received, the metropolitan promoters will most probably hold club membership exhibitions on an extended scale.

AMATEURS APPEAR IN RING.

Eight Bouts at New York A. C. Tourney End in Knockouts.

Of the eighteen bouts decided last night in the preliminary session of the New York Athletic Club's amateur tournament, eight ended in decisive victories for the successful boxers. The majority of these bouts ended in the first round, but, despite this feature, it was well on to midnight when the last bout was completed.

Last night's bouts marked the initial show of the Winged Foot Club since the expiration of the Frawley law, and it was the most successful tourney of the season to date. The officials of the club, instead of charging the members admission, solicited voluntary subscriptions from the spectators for the War Library Fund for Soldiers and Sailors. Soldiers from Fort Jay and sailors from the Pelham Bay naval stations made the collection by means of subscription cards and the sum of $319 was realized.

Among the victorious boxers was Anton Ens, Paulist A. C., who won from T. Hughes, Ozanam A. A., in one round of their bout in the 125-pound class. Ens's body blows forced Hughes to quit. The Paulist A. C. lad recently won the Crescent A. C.'s intercity tournament in this class.

FOOTBALL, POLO GROUNDS, Sat., Nov. 24, 2:30. Camp Devens vs. Camp Upton. Tickets at J. B. Crook & Co., Sporting Goods, 549 Fifth Av., at 45th St. Admission $1.00; reserved and box seats, $2.00.—Advt.

FACULTY BAN HITS PRINCETON CUBS

Sweet and Scheerer Barred from Freshman Team for Game with Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 22.—With Sweet and Scheerer, quarter back and full back respectively of the Princeton freshman eleven, ineligible because of failure to maintain proper standing in their studies, there is very little optimism in Princeton concerning the outcome of the contest with the Yale freshmen on Saturday at New Haven. Sweet and Scheerer as well as Chapman and Hawke, two substitutes, were declared ineligible following the freshman tests. Their loss upsets entirely the work of the Tiger back field, and leaves the team without a punter.

The tests did not bring calamities alone to the youngsters, however, for Keck Jacobs and Opie, who were ineligible to play football on entering college, were given permission to play by the Faculty. They will probably play part of the game against Yale.

It has been necessary for Coach Dawson to make a new back field combination as a result of the loss of Sweet and Scheerer. Hopkins has been moved to quarter back from the second team. Raymond and Herzog have been playing at the halves, while Penny and Bell have been alternating at full back.

In an effort to discover a punter to take the place of Sweet, all the members of the eleven have been given an opportunity to try their luck at kicking. McCaull, Davis and Herzog have been receiving instruction under Trainer Fitzpatrick, and one of these will probably do the kicking against Yale.

OFFICIALS MAY SEE GAME.

Cupid Black Will Face Rutgers with Galaxy of College Stars.

Rear Admiral N. R. Usher, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, is to be a guest of honor at Ebbets Field tomorrow afternoon, when the Newport Naval Reserves meet the strong Rutgers eleven. Captain H. F. Bryan, commandant of the Second Naval District at Newport, has sent an invitation to Rear Admiral Usher and other officials at the navy yard. Special boxes are to be reserved for them on the navy side of the field. It was said at the navy yard yesterday that Admiral Usher would surely attend unless official business prevented.

Captain Cupid Black of the Newport team yesterday gave out the full list of players in his squad. It is undoubtedly the greatest collection of college stars ever brought together for a football team. Besides having plenty of high-class material for his regular lineup, Black has capable substitutes for every position.

The complete list of players is:

Tackles—R. H. Dunn, Michigan; Paisley, Michigan; R. G. Dunn, Michigan; Trier, Dartmouth; Grotemat, Colgate; O'Keefe, Holy Cross; Bigelow, Harvard.

Centres—Callahan, Yale; Hutchinson, Yale.

The gates at Ebbets Field will be opened tomorrow at 12 o'clock and the game will begin promptly at 2:30 o'clock. All Brighton line trains will stop at Consumers Park. The early demand for tickets indicates that a crowd of from 15,000 to 20,000 will see the game.

QUIET DAY AT RUTGERS.

Long Signal Drill the Only Practice for Football Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 22.—George Foster Sanford gave his Rutgers team a work out on Neilson Field this afternoon in spite of the rain. There was no scrimmage, but Sanford and Nash put the men through a long signal drill, perfecting the plays which will be used against Cupid Black's Naval Reserves on Saturday.

DEVENS TEAM HERE TODAY.

Haughton's Eleven Will Arrive Tonight for Tomorrow's Game.

The Camp Devens football team, in charge of Percy D. Haughton, will arrive here tonight from Ayer, Mass., and will go at once to the Hotel Astor, where the players will abide until the time comes for them to start for the Polo Grounds, where they will meet the eleven from Camp Upton tomorrow. The Camp Upton team, led by Frank Glick, will come in from Yaphank tomorrow morning, accompanied by a large delegation of troops. At the Harlem stadium on Saturday, the Upton rooters will hold forth in the stands on the south side of the field, while those on the north side have been reserved for those who will cheer for Devens.

The exhibition drill, which will be given by the soldiers from Camp Upton, will start at 1:15 and the game will start at 2 o'clock.

COLUMBIA IS HOPEFUL.

Houlahan Returns to Lineup and List of Regulars Is Complete.

With all its regulars in the lineup again, Columbia's hopes are soaring high as the New York University game approaches. Houlahan, who has been incapacitated since the Hobart game, nearly two weeks ago, put on his uniform yesterday and reported for the signal drill in the gymnasium. He is the last of the injured 'Varsity men to return to the field. During the signal and forward passing drills Houlahan alternated at full back with Rosen, who for the first time since his injury took active part in the practice.

LAME START FOR SQUASH.

Only Three Matches Played in Annual Fall Tournament.

Squash tennis emerged from its many months of solitude yesterday afternoon, when the first tournament of the season, the annual scratch event, began at the Squash Club. The opening, however, was rather inauspicious, the incursions made by the war into the ranks of players being manifest by the small entry in what is usually an enthusiastic event. There are only twenty-one players entered in the tournament, but many of them are contestants of note, as F. S. Hyde of the Harvard Club, A. W. Riley of the Princeton and Squash Clubs, J. W. Appel of the Harvard Club, J. Ontavia of the Harvard Club, and F. S. Keeler of the Columbia Club.

There was a lame start to the tournament, however, for the sum total of matches actually contested for the first day was two, and one other went by the default route, which may be frequently in evidence as later rounds are played. R. Goepel was one of the victors. In a first-round contest he defeated R. L. Strebeigh of the Columbia Club in straight games at 18—15, 15—12. The other victor was R. C. Coburn of the Harvard Club. He defeated E. S. Avery of the Metropolitan Club at 15—10, 15—3. G. E. Ells of the Harvard Club came through the first round by the default of E. W. Putnam of the Columbia Club.

AIRMAN FINISHES IN VAN.

Troise Brings Viau Colors Home First in Capitol Handicap.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 22.—Wilfrid Viau's Airman captured the Capitol Handicap, at a mile, which was the feature of the racing card this afternoon. Smaller fields than usual went to the post in most of the races, and there were only five engaged in the handicap. Troise had the mount on Airman, and cleverly brought him through in the stretch to defeat Shooting Star and Right, both well played in the mutuels.

The Viau-Carman combination met with a setback in the Flight Handicap, at six and a half furlongs, which attracted some speedy sprinters. Carman's usually dependable Startling met with more than his match in J. F. Sweeney's Hauberk, which showed his best form, and won by a small margin in the good time of 1:20 2-5. Little G. Walls had a successful day in the saddle, riding three winners, while Troise again was astride of two victors.

TOP PRICE IS PAID FOR BROTHER DAVID

Interest in the Old Glory sale in Madison Square Garden was well maintained until the last of the fast steppers was disposed of last night. Since the opening on Monday the sale has been a meeting place for men of the harness horse world, and there were many notables present on the closing day. Former Senator J. W. Bailey of Texas dropped in, and though he sold out his whole stud several years ago, showed a disposition to keep in touch with the sport.

He still is President of the American Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, and while at the Garden purchased Baroness Bell, a mare that he bred himself, for $380. Other well-known enthusiasts noticed were: Nathan Straus, David Bonner, Samuel McMillan, Andrew W. Smith, Dave McClary, De Witt C. Flanagan, and W. H. Gocher, Secretary of the National Trotting Association.

Walter R. Cox of Dover, N. H., one of the shrewdest owners and trainers, who has been picking up moderate priced horses all the week, saw a big racing prospect in Brother David, a 3-year-old son of Axworthy that has trotted a mile in a race in 2:08. Other owners also were anxious to obtain possession of Brother David, which bids fair to be near championship class, but once Cox had set his mind on the colt he made the others dizzy with his bids, and Brother David was knocked down to him for $3,025, the biggest price of the day and the second highest figure of the sale.

Another speedy performer went to New England in Al Mack, by McLintock, which has been raced by the Brook Farm for the past three years and has taken a mark of 2:05½, besides setting a record at Goshen for three heats over a half-mile track. W. D. Hunt of Brookline, Mass., captured this prize for $2,500.

F. S. Schurter of Ellenville, N. Y., who owns Directum I., bought The Savoy, the largest money winner of the year, for $2,350, last night.

JAFFE IS CHESS VICTOR.

Defeats French Champion, Janowski, After Eighty Moves.

For the first time in six games Charles Jaffe was able yesterday to wrest victory from David Janowski of Paris, chess champion of France, in their match of ten games up.

Honors were even at the time of adjournment, when forty-nine moves had been recorded, but Jaffe was left with a knight against a bishop for the ending. After resumption, Jaffe played so well that he forced the Frenchman to give up his bishop for a pawn, and finally won the game after eighty moves had been made. Of the six games played, Janowski has won three, Jaffe one, and two have been drawn.

READY FOR TITLE CHASE.

College Harriers Will Compete for Championship at Van Cortlandt.

The team which will represent Cornell in the annual intercollegiate cross-country championship at Van Cortlandt Park tomorrow will arrive in this city early this morning and stop at the Waldorf-Astoria. Some time during the day the athletes will be taken on a walk over the course they are to traverse on their run tomorrow. The team this year, while lacking the services of the athletes who made up last year's championship aggregation, is nevertheless expected to prove a formidable contestant for the title. Harvard will not be represented with a 'Varsity team, making the first time in many years that the Cambridge collegians have not contested for the title. The officials of Yale have also declined to send a 'Varsity team for the tenth running of the championship. Both of these colleges, however, will be represented in the freshman chase which will precede the 'Varsity event.

Pennsylvania will send a strong team of harriers for the championship, as will Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which won the New England cross-country title last Saturday. Dartmouth, Columbia, and C. C. N. Y. will be the other colleges represented. In the freshman race teams from the following colleges will start: Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Syracuse, Columbia, and C. C. N. Y. These institutions nominated their harriers some time ago, but entries are open up to the start of the race

Each college is allowed to enter twenty athletes for the 'Varsity run, and in this respect Cornell and Massachusetts Institute of Technology lead. Each has entered the full quota, while Dartmouth has fifteen men and Columbia, Pennsylvania, and C. C. N. Y. have thirteen, twelve, and seven respectively.

Richmond Golfer to Meet Phillips in Semi-Final at Pinehurst.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 22.—The Autumn golf tournament at Pinehurst was brought down to the semi-finals today. All divisions played over the No. 2 course. In the feature match of the day Franklin H. Gates, winner of the Carolina tournament, was defeated by F. J. D. MacKay of Richmond, 4 and 3.

Gates started out by winning the first two holes and then knocked MacKay's ball into the cup at the third for a winning 4 in an attempt to get round a stymie. MacKay squared the match at the fourth, where he holed a run-up shot of over sixty feet and had things practically all his own way from that time on, winning five of the remaining eleven holes of the match, while Gates took only one.

MacKay will meet H. G. Phillips of Pinehurst in tomorrow's semi-finals. The other semi-finalists will be C. L. Becker of the Ekwanok Club and Gordon F. Wood of Richmond.

OUIMET PLAYS TOMORROW.

Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford will meet Oswald Kirkby and John G. Anderson over the links of the Englewood Country Club tomorrow. The match will begin at 9:30 in the morning and 1:30 in the afternoon. This event will be Ouimet's last appearance this year on the golf links, and, if he is sent abroad before the Spring, it may be the last time for many months before golfers of New York will have the opportunity of seeing him perform. The proceeds from the match will be devoted to purchasing military supplies for soldiers.

TURKS CHANCELLOR BEST CAT IN SHOW

Highest Honors at Atlantic C. C. Exhibit Go to Mrs. Clarkson's Blue Feline.

Mrs. Edward Clarkson's beautiful blue cat The Turks Chancellor carried off the honors of the best in the show at the sixteenth annual exhibition of the Atlantic Cat Club, which ended yesterday in the sun parlor of the Hotel McAlpin. The victory is considered a remarkable one, as the son of Turks Cap was shown for the first time, and previous to his entry in the competition in which he gathered twenty specials and the additional honor of being the best novice he had been the household pet of Mrs. Clarkson at Tivoli-on-the-Hudson, where she maintains one of the best kennels of chows in the country.

The Turks Chancellor had carried all before him on Wednesday, and was the general favorite when the best in the show special came up for decision, and in which he had to meet the winners of all other classes. Miss E. G. Hydon, who judged the event, said that there was no question of his superiority, and that, in her opinion, the young cat is better than his noted father, Turks Cap, which was imported by Mrs. C. W. Chapin, and never was defeated.

The honor of the best of the opposite sex to the winner fell to Mrs. Herbert Shipman's Lalita, a chinchilla of fine color and pretty face, which had defeated the Misses Champion's Argent Lady Brilliant in the open class. Another distinguished cat that was entered for specials only, and did not compete for best in the show, was M. Johnson's champion White Magic. In addition to taking ribbons for the best white and best of any solid color, champion White Magic had the distinction of defeating The Turks Chancellor in the special for the best coated cat. There was a special for short-headed cats, and this was captured by the Greenwich Kennels' champion Greenwich Burnham Chang, one of the two of Siamese breed entered.

SEE MILLIONS LOST IN WAR CHARITIES

Experts Blame Lack of Supervision of Relief Organizations for Losses.

STATE CONTROL FAVORED

Charles F. Johnson of Board of Charities Wants Legislature to Extend Its Powers.

Irresponsible war relief organizations mismanaging their affairs in the absence of official supervision have deprived soldiers and civilians in the allied countries of millions of dollars contributed for relief work since the beginning of the war by persons in New York State, in the opinion of men qualified to make an estimate of the money diverted from the purpose for which it was intended. Mushroom organizations whose affairs have been mismanaged have been responsible for the loss of much money, and unscrupulous promoters and agents, often employing the names of prominent persons who have carelessly allowed the use of their names, have pocketed, in the aggregate, hundreds of thousands of dollars, it is maintained.

Among those who said yesterday that the estimate putting the total loss to relief work at millions of dollars was not too large was Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, whose office has enabled him to keep in close touch with the situation. Mr. Johnson expressed emphatically the belief that all charitable organizations, including war relief bodies, should be brought under State control through special legislation or by some other effective means.

"No one knows just how much has been lost through inefficient and dishonest relief organizations," Mr. Johnson said. "My observations throughout the State have convinced me, however, that the sum has been very large, and I am strongly of the opinion that the collection and disbursement of money by individuals and societies should be carefully regulated by the State. At present there is no system of regulation. The State Board of Charities is one of the nearest approaches to a supervising body and we can investigate and act only in the case of organizations which receive money from the State or any city in it. As asylums, hospitals and homes are about the only charitable institutions which receive public money, we are unable to touch the war relief organizations. The powers of this board should be extended by legislative action or some other provision should be made to protect the people against the dishonest and the incompetent.

Rich Harvest for Promoters.

"As conditions are today any man or group of men may organize a war relief organization, say a Society for the Relief of Patagonian Orphans, and collect money from any one willing to give. The chances are they could obtain the use of the names of prominent persons who would not investigate their undertaking, and they could distribute coin collection boxes, open bazaars and fairs, send out begging letters, and engage in personal solicitation to their hearts' content. They might collect, say, $5,000, send 50 cents to Patagonia, and appropriate the remainder as 'expenses.' This is the kind of thing that has been going on for a long time, and the tragic recklessness with which the public has responded to every appeal for money has given dishonest promoters opportunity for a rich harvest.

"And, in addition to the dishonest organizations, there are numbers of mushroom societies managed by amateurs which have wasted precious money by their incompetence. If every war relief and charity organization could be officially supervised, and every fair or bazaar compelled to operate under a license that would necessitate supervision, most of the misappropriation of funds would cease."

Officials of responsible relief organizations have long desired regulation, so that those abusing the confidence of patriotic and sympathetic persons may be driven from the field.

A step in the direction of regulation was taken yesterday afternoon, when the General Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen held a public hearing on the proposed Dowling-Wendel ordinance which would put all charity entertainments and bazaars, except those promoted by religious and fraternal bodies, under the control of the Department of Licenses. There was no objection to the proposed ordinance, and it is probable that the committee will recommend its passage at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen next Tuesday. This measure, however, would regulate only entertainments and bazaars. The more serious danger from organizations obtaining money through solicitation would not be affected.

Evidence of Money Misapplied.

Barry C. Smith, Secretary of the Bureau of Advice and Information of the Charity Organization Society, who has done all in his power to thwart dishonesty and incompetence, has obtained evidence that a large total of money contributed for relief work has been misapplied, and he, too, believes that the State and city authorities should regulate the activities of those who collect funds for supposedly philanthropic purposes.

Many persons, Mr. Smith said, had an erroneous opinion of what the Charity Organization Society could do, and he explained that the society had no authority to investigate any organization, but was limited to expressing or denying its approval to such bodies as chose to submit their affairs to examination by the Bureau of Advice and Information. In order to clear up misunderstanding as to the bureau's past and present activity, and to show the need for official supervision of war relief organizations, Mr. Smith made a statement, which follows in part:

The Bureau of Advice and Information issued on Aug. 1 a bulletin of war relief charities which had submitted evidence of responsible management, including satisfactory financial statements. This bulletin has been revived from time to time. It has included only those organizations engaged in actual relief work connected with the war. It does not cover propagandist, educational, or purely patriotic societies. Many of the war relief charities participating in Hero Land are listed in this bulletin. In addition there are certain participating organizations which are not engaged in relief work so far as known to the society, and which are favorably known to the bureau. Such are the American Defense Society and the National League for Women's Service.

We assume that the management of Hero Land has ample evidence of the legitimate character and responsible management of every organization which it has admitted to the bazaar.

The Bureau of Advice and Information of the Charity Organization Society is in no sense an indorsing agency. The bureau has long foreseen the possibility of there arising serious question concerning some of the many war relief charities. It was for this reason that it undertook some months ago to make as comprehensive an investigation as possible, and to issue this bulletin on war relief. Its purpose in this action has been primarily for the protection of the members of the Charity Organization Society and of the Merchants' Association. We feel most strongly that proper legal supervision of all war charities is a thing to be desired.

Mr. Smith added that the bureau had bulletined Hero Land, the allied bazaar which opens at the Grand Central Palace next Saturday, because John Moffat, the Executive Chairman of the Management Committee of the bazaar, had assured him that proper financial accounts would be demanded from all organizations participating in the fair. Mr. Moffat confirmed this statement, saying that the bazaar's management committee would not only insist on the financial statements, but would exercise close supervision over every cent received at any booth in the Palace, and would permit no society to take any money from the bazaar until it had submitted a satisfactory statement of its proposed disbursement of the money.

Speaking yesterday at the hearing before the General Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen, President Dowling of the board said:

"During these times when every one is trying to do something for the soldiers an interesting class of money-makers has sprung into existence. A great part of the fault for this very deplorable condition can be laid at the door of prominent men of charitable inclination who permit their names to be used by war charity experts who go in for 75 per cent. profit for themselves."

Aroused by reports of conditions, District Attorney Denis O'Leary of Queens has started an investigation of all relief organizations operating in the county. The investigation started yesterday with an examination of the books of the Ladies' Relief Association of Corona, Inc., which was incorporated on March 12, 1912, and recently disbanded. Isaac Weichselbaum, who made the complaint, told the District Attorney that he learned from his wife, a member of the organization, that at the time the organization was disbanded seven members divided between $650 and $700 between them as a means of disposing of the funds left in the treasury.

ASKS GRAND JURY'S AID IN INQUIRY ON BAZAAR

Swann Also Demands Return of Fees Collected by Solicitor, and Stops New Scheme.

In addition to asking assistance of the Grand Jury in the investigation of a certain phase of the financial affairs of the Army and Navy Bazaar, which, it was said, would probably result in the return of an indictment today against one of the active promoters of the bazaar, which was intended to provide comfort kits for thousands of soldiers but netted only $754 of the total receipts of $71,000, District Attorney Swann ordered one of the solicitors for donations to return funds which he had received in fees. Another solicitor refunded his fees, $100, which he delivered at the District Attorney's office in the form of a Liberty bond.

Mr. Swann widened his inquiry concerning similar enterprises for raising "patriotic funds" by starting a half dozen or more investigations of societies and individuals connected with the promotion of money raising schemes, one of which he put out of business within an hour. Among the complaints that reached him regarding another benefit fair was one from officers of the 71st Regiment, who asserted that $20,000 in certified checks, the proceeds of a benefit for dependents of the members of the command, had been withheld from them.

This benefit for the regiment took place at the Hippodrome on Sept. 23. Lynn W. Thompson, a former officer of the regiment, and now acting as its attorney, asked Mr. Swann to bring about the payment of the rest of the proceeds. He will inquire into this today, and has ordered R. K. Forsyth and Walter E. Fisk of 200 Fifth Avenue, who had charge of the regimental souvenir program and advertising, to produce their books and tell their side of the transactions.

It is expected, however, that the claim of the 71st Regiment may be one for the civil courts [illegible] the Committee of Arrangements [illegible] regiment, headed by Captain W. R. Fearn, with Forsyth & Fisk, allowed the advertising agents 70 per cent. of the receipts for their share.

George F. Sweeney, who was employed by the Army and Navy Bazaar on a basis of 50 per cent. commission of receipts obtained by his efforts, was ordered by the District Attorney to refund by noon today all moneys he had accepted as fees on donations made outright to the bazaar.

In his defense Mr. Sweeney issued a statement in which he declared his contract with the committee of the Army and Navy Bazaar called for 50 per cent. as his share of all moneys received, whether in the form of advertising, subscriptions, or contributions. When he left the office of the District Attorney he had not announced whether he would oppose the request of Mr. Swann. The returned Liberty bond of $100 was made by one of the solicitors employed by Sweeney.

The League of Loyal Americans, Inc., with Milo T. Bogard as Executive Director, 170 Broadway, who had letterheads bearing the names of Major Gen. Leonard Wood, U. S. A.; Lieut. Commander J. F. Wright, U. S. N., R. L.; Captain John A. Anderson, N. G. N. Y., R. L.; John Winthrop Herbert, as members of the advisory board, and Elihu Root and a score of other well-known men as charter members, none of whom had given permission for the use of his name, was put out of business by Mr. Swann. After Bogard had admitted that he had not received permission to use the names he had on his stationery he was instructed to call at the District Attorney's office.

Assistant District Attorney Kilroe then read some of the other names Bogard had listed, which included Robert T. Lincoln, United States Senators J. W. Wadsworth, Jr., and William M. Calder, Robert Bacon, Coleman T. du Pont, ex-Senator John C. Spooner, John B. Stanchfield, Alton B. Parker, Justice Alfred R. Page, Ogden Mills, Adrian Iselin, Judge Norman S. Dike, John H. Flagler, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, and when he asked Bogard if he had been permitted to use the names he answered in the negative. Bogard said he was not now using these letterheads.

A photograph which had been sent from Police Headquarters to the District Attorney's office was then laid before Bogard. "Is that a photograph of yourself?" Kilroe asked. "It is," replied Bogard. Mr. Kilroe then told Bogard that the photograph had been taken from the Rogues' Gallery. After Bogard had heard some incidents of his career recounted he announced his willingness to "shut up shop." It appears he had incorporated the "League" on May 29, 1917. Letters from three prominent men indorsing the objects of the organization, which Bogard said was to "spread patriotism," were found among his effects.

Another organization which Mr. Swann took under consideration because of the report to him that large fees had been paid to solicitors was the Emergency League Relief Fund. No charge of any kind has been made against this organization except that it had paid 60 per cent. to solicitors during the benefit held at the Waldorf on Nov. 16. The league had arranged to hold another benefit on Sunday, at the Hippodrome. Mrs. William Cumming Story, President of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who had a booth at this bazaar, told Mr. Swann she would call at his office today to tell what she knew about the league's operations.

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo wrote to Mr. Swann yesterday complaining that while the City Magistrates always held fraudulent solicitors for funds when proper evidence was presented, the defendants usually managed to free themselves ultimately by appeals to higher courts.

Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, said yesterday that the company had had nothing whatever to do with the Army and Navy Bazaar. Because Edward S. Moore, Assistant Secretary of the company, was Treasurer of the bazaar, some persons received the impression that the company was backing the promoters of the affair. Mr. Sabin said that Mr. Moore had accepted the position of Treasurer entirely in his capacity as an individual. Mr. Moore himself admitted this, adding that he had taken the postion after receiving what he had been justified in considering reasonable assurance that the bazaar would be properly managed. He attempted to prevent the alleged misappropriation of the bazaar's funds, he said, and made public the financial statement which told of the finances of the bazaar.

THE PHILHARMONIC IN 'TAM O' SHANTER'

BRAHMS'S FIRST SYMPHONY

Sibelius's "The Swan of Tuonela" and Prelude from "Tristan and Isolde" Also Given.

Mr. Stransky, who is now devoting more of his attention to Brahms than he has done in former years, tried another symphony of that master in the Philharmonic concert in Carnegie Hall last evening. It was his first in C minor. More success attended this performance than that of the D major symphony recently, although it could not in all respects be called a fine interpretation of a masterpiece.

The first movement and the last were the most effectively played; and indeed it is difficult to miss the vehement power of the first movement, the Olympian grandeur of its introduction, or the splendid and passionate virility of the last, with its magnificent coda. The first was played with a considerable dramatic accent, with a due freedom of tempo, with a careful balancing of the instrumental choirs whereby the true orchestral color of Brahms is to be achieved. There was effectiveness in the last movement also.

Mr. Stransky was less successful with the andante and allegretto movements, which were played without much regard to their subtle expressiveness, or to finish of phrase and the true melodic significance. These are things that do not play themselves.

Mr. Stransky is paying also much attention this season to the work of American composers, and put another one on the program last evening, George W. Chadwick's symphonic ballad, "Tam O'Shanter." This, like Mr. Hadley's symphony recently heard here, was written for and first played at the Norfolk Festival. It is a musical delineation of Burns's poem, and follows closely the lines of that gruesome tale.

This gives, of course, ample scope for the composer's talent for musical description and delineation, especially in the violent and macabre vein, which he has employed not only with much skill and variety of resource, but also without forgetting that he is, first of all, writing music and that musical values are not to be sacrificed. Even so, the finest portion of the work is the reflective close, in which the themes that have served for delineation now fulfill a higher and more purely musical function. The piece is written with great skill in the treatment of the orchestra. It was sympathetically and intelligently played by Mr. Stransky, and there was much applause. Mr. Chadwick was in a box, and was called upon to rise and acknowledge the applause several times.

The program contained also Sibelius's atmospheric piece, "The Swan of Tuonela"; Dvorak's Scherzo Capriccioso, and the prelude and final scene from Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde."

'MADAMA BUTTERFLY' SUNG.

Mme. Farrar Again the Cio-Cio-San of Puccini's Popular Opera.

MADAMA BUTTERFLY, opera in three acts, (in Italian;) book by L. Illica and G. Giacosa; after the work of John Luther Long and David Belasco; music by Giacomo Puccini. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Cio-Cio-San	Geraldine Farrar
Suzuki	Rita Fornia
Kate Pinkerton	Minnie Egener
B. F. Pinkerton	Paul Althouse
U. S. Consul Sharpless	Antonio Scotti
Goro	Albert Reiss
Yamadori	Pietro Audisio
The Uncle-Priest	Louis D'Angelo
Yakuside	Francesco Cerri
The Imperial Commissary	V. Reschiglian

Conductor, Roberto Moranzoni.

The patriotic moment that is nightly a feature of the Metropolitan Opera House season now, when "The Star Spangled Banner" is played by the standing orchestra to a rising audience in the first intermission of each performance, found more than one echo last night in the opera itself, which was the popular and, in origin, partly American "Madama Butterfly." Mme. Farrar, who reappeared in her rôle of Cio-Cio-San, and who had snatches of the anthem in the Japanese wedding music and later scenes, should be naturally no less devoted to her country's air than was Signor Puccini, the Italian composer. Mr. Althouse had the tenor part of Lieutenant B. F. Pinkerton, and Mr. Scotti, acting an American rôle as Sharpless, gave to the Yankee Consul gentlemanly bearing and distinction.

In and out of the Nagasaki house, there were new touches and details of staging from the hands of Ordynski and Armando Agnini, who reinforced Siedle and Setti with the company behind the scenes. Moranzoni conducted this opera for the first time, and with discretion that avoided emphasizing some hackneyed phrases. Louis d'Angelo, as the Buddhist priest, was also new in a cast that included Rita Fornia as the faithful Suzuki, Minnie Egener, as the American wife, Reiss and Audisio, Cerri and Reschiglian, among a motley of quaint Oriental figures. The audience was again a large one.

"AUTOLOVE" IS MELODIOUS.

Jean Gilbert's Operetta Produced at the Yorkville, with Mizi Gizi.

One of the most melodious scores to be brought across the Atlantic in several seasons, the work of the French composer Jean Gilbert, reached New York last night via the stage of the Yorkville Theatre, the home of Adolf Philipp's German productions. Gilbert is already known in this country as the composer of the music for "The Queen of the Movies," produced here four or five seasons ago. The score of the new production, "Autoliebchen," which is understood to antedate the composition of the other work, is replete with lilting numbers and in every way superior.

In its original form the piece was known as "Dix Minutes d'Auto," and was produced with success in Paris and Berlin five or six years ago. Its story, dealing with such recognized operetta material as the complications growing out of a masked ball, is slight and unimportant, and in no way fitted to be a setting for Gilbert's tripping score. At the Yorkville the piece is used as a starring vehicle for Mizi Gizi, long a German favorite here.

HALTS 'STARGAZER' OPENING

Beth Lydy, Prima Donna, Suddenly Withdraws from Cast.

The sudden defection late yesterday afternoon of Beth Lydy, prima donna in "The Star Gazer," prevented last night the scheduled premiere of that piece at the Plymouth Theatre. Miss Lydy, according to report, had several disagreements with John Charles Thomas during rehearsals and out-of-town performances. It was announced at the offices of the Shuberts, producers of "The Star Gazer," that a postponement of the premiere was made necessary by the illness of Mr. Thomas, but it was later admitted that Miss Lydy had withdrawn from the cast. No reason for her withdrawal was assigned by the management.

An understudy was obtained for the part last night and the piece is now announced for presentation on Monday.

Greta Torpadie Sings.

Greta Torpadie, soprano, a young singer of delicate and charming style, gave her recital in Aeolian Hall last evening to an audience that wanted most of her program twice over. Loeffler's "The Peacocks," despite ornithological absurdities in the printed book of words, proved rather a duet of voice and piano, Richard Epstein playing an accompaniment of harp-like swirls that swept the keyboard. This was encored, as also were four songs by composers present in the house, Schindler's "Wondrous May," Kramer's "Green," Rubner's "Pierrot," and Buzzi-Peccia's "Sweet Suffolk Owl."

Miss Torpadie sang a very beautiful "Sommeil de l'Enfant Jesus," by Gevaert, and among her Scandinavian airs, Sigurd Lie's "Snow," with Langemuller's "The Swan" on recall, and for final encore, "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny."

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, NOV. 23, 1917.

A LENINE-GERMAN PEACE.

LENINE and his Bolshevist accomplices continue to furnish evidence that they intend nothing less than the absolute ruin of Russia in subjection to Germany. They protest that they do not desire a separate peace with Germany, that they have planned a general armistice, entered into upon the initiative of the Russian "Government" in the hope that at the end of three months the peoples of the various belligerent countries, if not their Governments, will insist upon peace. What is the value of their assurance that no separate peace for Russia is sought? At the same time that they notified the Ambassadors of the allied nations at Petrograd of their intention, or even before that notice was sent, they ordered General DUKHONIN, the Russian Commander in Chief, "to negotiate for an armistice" with Germans. The General refused and was promptly deposed for his disobedience. The order to General DUKHONIN is conclusive proof of the dishonesty and bad faith of the persons who call themselves the Government of Russia, and should serve as a warning to the allied nations of the impossibility of having anything to do with them.

If they had intended a general armistice they would have waited for replies from other Governments, in order that action might be taken in concert. That did not suit their purpose. They instructed their own commander to negotiate for an armistice, which is the same thing as beginning negotiations for a separate peace between Russia and Germany. This is but another confirmation of the firm belief entertained in Petrograd that LENINE and TROTZKY are agents of the German Government. Members of the Provisional Government are convinced that this is true, the actual proof has thus far escaped them, as it would naturally be difficult to secure it. A Paris dispatch published yesterday declares that the French Government has in its hand "absolute "proof that NICHOLAI LENINE, the "Bolsheviki Dictator at Petrograd, "was sent to Russia by the German "spy system and is a creature of the "Prussian propaganda service." If the French Government has that proof, it must, of course, make it public, and without delay. The mere assertion that proof is in hand will not convince the Russian dupes of LENINE, and it is in that quarter that the conviction must be pressed home.

Loyal Russians of intelligence, of course, foresee where the Bolsheviki are leading the country. Separate peace, for which LENINE and TROTZKY instructed the Russian Commander in Chief to open negotiations with Germans, would open the way to the establishment of German control over the destiny of Russia. It would put an end to the hopes born of the revolution that Russia might be built up as a great, independent commercial power, for Germany would speedily attach the vast Muscovite dominions to her projected economic group extending from the Baltic through the Balkans to the Persian Gulf, so that not merely the resources of Russia but her commercial development would be controlled in the German interest. The breaking up of what was once the Empire would be the natural result. Ukraine, where the German and Austrian propaganda has been active, long ago made known its desire for independence. Finland has done the same, and the whole of Poland, it is already planned, is to become a Teutonic dependency. Russia as a great power will be split up and disappear if the German plan is carried out by her Bolshevist agents. They are hurrying her on the road to ruin, and their traitorous work can be arrested only by the establishment of a strong central Government. For that a man is necessary, a man of greater firmness and stability of purpose than any the revolution has yet brought to the fore.

THE TWO WONDERLANDS.

Miss MARY GARRETT HAY, Chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party of New York City, has made the clearest and most impressive declarations of unconditional feminist patriotism, taking precedence of even the Greatest Issue of All Time:

> If the whole fate of my country hung on one man, and that man could save the country, but was opposed to the Federal amendment, I should vote for him.

What sublimity of calm courage, what a great choice and great refusal! The force of feminist devotion could no further go.

It would be wrong, however, to regard seriously the first artless proceedings and pronouncements of the woman suffrage leaders, exulting in, yet visibly embarrassed by, their new boon. The just commentary comes from a parallel world:

> The chief difficulty Alice found at first was in managing her flamingo; she succeeded in getting its body tucked away, comfortably enough, under her arm, with its legs hanging down, but generally, just as she had got its neck nicely straightened out, and was going to give the hedgehog a blow with its head, it would twist itself round and look up in her face with such a puzzled expression.

One more excursion into that parallel country:

> "Really, now you ask me," said Alice, very much confused, "I don't think." "Then you shouldn't talk," said the Hatter.

"This piece of rudeness was more than Alice could bear." It is more than anybody can bear; but it has its value for students of the two Wonderlands.

THE IMPOSSIBLE BATTLE.

Far off in Flanders the fighting was going on, but along this quiet sector things had been for many months almost as peaceful as home. A raid now and then, just to remove the impression any one might have gained that it was an armistice. There was a perfect galaxy of reasons why nothing was to be expected. For one thing, this was the strongest part of the Hindenburg line; it was impregnable. If the British were ever to attack it, they would need all their strength; they could not be slamming away in Flanders at the same time. They would need so much preparation that all Hindenburgia would be on notice weeks ahead, and have time to get armies there, if necessary. For another, this war had demonstrated the fact that no attack could be made without extensive notice by artillery, and very little notice would be enough to brace up the Hindenburg line at Cambrai.

Upon a line impregnable in itself, impossible to attack without the most formal sort of notice, and long acknowledged to be invincible both by British repose in front of it and British activity elsewhere, fell the eye of a German General considering from what point it would be safest to remove artillery. He wanted to send guns to Italy. Of course he decided that this was the point above all others from which it would be safest to take them. He took them. That, doubtless, explains why the German artillery fire was so weak when the storm burst.

The Hindenburg line was protected by infinite barbed wire, which cannot be removed except by artillery. The whole situation bristled with impossibilities. The impregnable line was broken, the barbed wire was removed without artillery, the British did not give the inevitable notice, the absolutely essential barrage was not made, cavalry attacked artillery and beat it, there was no air reconnoissance, infantry rescued tanks from cannon—in short, if there was a single impossibility that did not become fact within the first forenoon of the British advance, it will take a conjurer to produce it. General BYNG did not equip a fleet of submarines with stilts and make them walk at the head of his army, but lovers of the impossible will have to be satisfied with that; nearly every other impossibility ceased to be.

The part the airplanes usually play was omitted entirely. In place of a barrage there was a charge, but a charge of massed tanks. With all the tanks have done, this massing of them into an army to take the place of artillery and almost of infantry is something new under the sun. "The "Tank Corps expects every tank to "do its damnedest" was the watchword of its commander at the outset of what must be called the first tank battle ever fought. They came surging out of the mist at 6:20 A. M., and although the Germans are used to the sight of tanks, they never saw a tank army before. The correspondents record that in their bewilderment the Germans stood still and let the tanks waddle over them and crush them into the ground.

"Who ever saw a dead cavalryman?" The jeer of our infantrymen in the great American war was never answered until SHERIDAN rose to answer it. There has been the same feeling in this war, but some British Sheridan has spoiled the joke for all time. "Sabering the gunners at their pieces"—there is something incredibly ancient and far off in the sound of that phrase, and to find it in today's dispatches makes us rub our eyes; it seems to belong back somewhere in the Crimea, or in the War of 1812. Finding their mission at last, and liking it, the cavalrymen exceed their instructions, like the infantry at Missionary Ridge, and go dashing ahead with the work laid out for the infantry; they conduct the charge proper, and their greater speed leaves the infantry in the rear while the cavalry take villages all by themselves.

Impossibility of impossibilities, the Hindenburg line is smashed, smashed at its strongest point, smashed at the one place where friend and foe called it not merely strong but impregnable. All the other impossibilities, the tank army, the vanished barbed wire that no shell had struck, the cavalry at infantry work, all shrivel in size beside that. Not only is the line itself smashed, but its supporting line is smashed, and the British army riots on in the rear of both, redeeming French territory that France never expected to see except after the sickening devastation of another "strategic retreat." In one day Sir JULIAN BYNG made nonsense of all the military lessons of the war, proved the continued existence of the old-fashioned warrior, and established himself as the artisan of all that can't be done.

NO DEFENSE OR EXCUSE.

In a statement about supplies for the Belgian Relief Commission Mr. HOOVER said a few days ago that many thousand tons of foodstuffs sent from our ports had been lost by the sinking of relief ships. This leads the German Government to defend the destruction of these ships by its submarines. It authorizes a news agency to say that by existing arrangements "the carriers of food to the "suffering Belgians have been re-"quired to avoid the danger zone." Some "disregarded the warning and were sunk."

> Therefore, if Belgian civilians starve, it is because British selfishness drives the Captains of relief vessels to seek only to disregard rules made for their safety.

Germany knows that there could be no reasonable excuse for the sinking of these ships. After three had been destroyed, the Commission sent an urgent protest to Berlin. Whereupon the German Government promised that other relief ships should not be attacked. Written and officially signed guarantees of immunity were given to commanders of the vessels, with maps and directions showing the route which should be followed. But the guarantees were worthless. To the submarines they were mere "scraps of paper." Relief ships carrying them and going in the prescribed "safe route" were sunk. In addition, their sailors were killed in lifeboats by gunfire.

Even if these vessels had been in the danger zone, attack upon them could not be excused, for their character and mission were shown by great banners and posters on their sides, on deck, and aloft. And there is no warrant for the allusion now to the selfishness of "British" Captains, for a majority of the torpedoed ships were Norwegian. In a recent report Norway's Government speaks of their fate. The Commission and all who were interested in its work soon realized that the German Government's guarantees of safety had no value. Germany now unwisely reminds the world of this dark chapter in the record of its submarine piracy. It should wish that the sinking of relief ships might be forgotten.

THE IDEA!

Santa Claus could not have been looking over Commissioner WOODS's shoulder when he wrote that very practical letter on the subject of the presents to make glad the hearts of children, waifs, strays, and the neglected ones, in the police stations at Christmas this year. The best Commissioner did not consult the Saint. President WILSON and Mr. HOOVER will never confess that he consulted them. War is war, and this is the worst of all wars, but Santa Claus must not be numbered among the casualties. Certainly he will not come round if he is to unload at police station Christmas trees nothing but clothes and food and other uninteresting things like them.

Necessaries are all very well in their way, (let them be included;) but the child's mind can't conceive of a Christmas without toys, candies, and other accustomed indulgences. Commissioner WOODS, ethically far out in his reckoning, however patriotic his intentions, intimates that candy will not be welcome, because the nation is skimping in sugar; and that toys had better be withheld, because the measure of value should be adjusted to something more practical; for instance, to "clothes and food." Yet he plans "to make the occasion as festive in spirit as before." It can't be done with such unseasonable limitations. The children will rebel. Santa Claus will strike. And those who want to make the children happy as usual will rebel and strike, too.

Shall the small boy and girl who press their cold noses to the shop windows be denied the joys that they are even now dreaming about, with Christmas only a month off? The toys of yesterday, today, and forever: immortal Little Boy Blue, the flaxen-haired doll with heavenly blue eyes, the painted top that makes music as it spins, the harlequin ball, the Noah's Ark and its animals issuing two by two, the red express wagon, and the many endearing beasts to be drawn around with heads a-sway? And all those toothsome and tinseled things that there would be no Christmas without?

Really, Commissioner WOODS cannot expect to be heeded. What possessed him to utter his ukase? A festive occasion, indeed, with all the rapture left out! People can do as they like, but we know what they will do. So far as the children are concerned, it is Santa Claus's annual proclamation that they will give heed to.

JUDGE HYLAN.

Judge HYLAN's strategical silence during the campaign was followed, after his election, by a reasonable dose of speech. The public is glad to hear from him; and it is possible that his communications to it may be looked for as eagerly as was Mayor GAYNOR's series of piquant letters on Things in General, his famous essay on Cats, for example. Not that anything frivolous has come from Judge HYLAN so far. On the contrary, his habitual mood is one of becoming gravity and earnestness. If the cynical see only a Knight Errant's chivalrous scorn of possibilities in his proposed excursion to Albany to move the Republican hard-hearts of the Legislature to repeal legislation to which he objects, the mass of the community, always disposed to be fair to an official entering on his novitiate, will judge him ultimately by his deeds.

His words so far since election, leaving out of consideration those that relate to the Tammany Fairyland, which was the scene of his campaign, have indicated a full appreciation of the responsibilities of the post to which he has been called by so impressive a vote. He has said that he is as loyal to the country and the flag as any man, "as firm and determined in support of every act of the Government." He has spoken of his "tremendous task." He regards it as his "main duty" to "see that for every dollar "the people are called upon to contribute full value will be returned in "the upkeep and development of our "institutions." He has said that he is and will be no man's man, but his own boss.

All officials-elect talk in that strain, but it is the right strain, all the same. Especially to be welcomed and applauded is Judge HYLAN's insistence upon economy. While he sees economy in a partisan light only or mainly at present, and views with alarm the scattering of the people's money "with an utter disregard of value" by the present city administration, any check that he suggests on that scattering, if it be not a purely Tammany figment, will be dear to the business and pocket of the taxpayers. When he essays to lop off or wipe out items in the budget of 1918, he is on the right track; he has the right spirit, even if his specific proposals appear less plausible than the easier generalities of saving.

He has fallen on a time when saving is a duty and necessity, but in this world of mere human and highly political creatures "extravagance" is usually confined to the ins. The outs are Poor Richards so long as they are in the cold. When they have once toasted their toes at the public hearth they are apt to turn into soft Campanians, into Coal Oil Johnnies of the public moneys.

The Tammany economists have spoken their high resolve to watch the city administration with the eye of a famished fishhawk until 12 P. M., Dec. 31. Will they be as virtuous when the plant is theirs?

We would not darken with the faintest penumbra of disbelief the white austerity of Judge HYLAN's determination for a rigidly economical administration. Tammany's passion for economy is history. So is the Tammany abhorrence of making money inside and "on the side" out of the city. Some sort of municipal Utopia is to be created, if Tammany believes what it said in the campaign. Tammany has promised impossibilities. Does Judge HYLAN sincerely promise them and others still? The hungry wolves look up and are not fed; such a tableau of perfection Judge HYLAN seems to be announcing. The wolves appear as happy as the affable archangel, entirely unmoved by Judge HYLAN's rigor. There is no quiver, unless it be a suppressed grin, on Mr. MURPHY's Roman lineaments. Mr. MCCOOEY looks at peace with the world.

Still, Judge HYLAN is to be judged by his work. Meanwhile, why insist on discounting his fair words? He has opportunity to make a signal career, albeit at the expense of Tammany mutiny and rage. He has said that "the wide-open town," once a concomitant of Tammany victory, is no more. Will the wide-open treasury hospitable to Tammany hands reappear? Judge HYLAN means well. Doubtless he will gradually recover from Rockefellermania, a campaign disease into which he has relapses. He will succeed an administration which has made the highest mark of intelligent, honest, and fruitful municipal achievement. Ambition and self-respect should keep him from fatal concessions to "the boys."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Expert Criticises the Experts.

Wartime food problems are by no means as simple as is thought by a good many of the people now giving more or less of consideration to them, and especially are they not as simple as is thought by not a few of the people who assume the rôle of experts and present solutions of the problems that are accepted with pathetic confidence by large sections of the general public.

One of these experts reduces everything connected with foods to a question of heat units—the so-called calories—and a food that contains, or produces, more calories than another is pronounced better than that other. A rival expert is interested only in protein, which is building material, not fuel, and he makes that the whole basis of his computations. One who studies both of these qualities poses as notably comprehensive in his views, but even he does not see everything or everything that is important in relation to foods.

This was well brought out in an address, much praised by The New York Medical Journal, that was recently delivered by Dr. CARL ALSBERG before the Harvey Society. Dr. ALSBERG said that it was not enough in wartime to decide the composition and relative values of foods, but into the account must also be taken such questions as, How much of each of the several foods can be raised on an acre of land? and, How much labor is required to raise each of them? The answers to those inquiries may be such as to make it judicious, when labor is scarce, to grow one food rather than others, even though it is intrinsically inferior to those others from the standpoint of the analytic chemist.

No food, unfortunately, combines all good qualities, and there is none which, if eaten exclusively, would not lead to starvation, or at least to serious injury of the body. Dr. ALSBERG admits, however, that wheat comes nearer than anything else to being a perfect food, but MACAULAY noted that bricklayers did not wait for NEWTON to teach them that if they jumped from high scaffolds they would break their legs, and humanity did not delay its appreciation of wheat until its merits were announced by scientists.

Dr. ALSBERG further declared that, in times of scarcity, it did not pay to feed to animals food that human beings could eat—that the waste was greater in the case of swine than in that of steers, and that, in general, the waste was greatest in the case of any animals past the growing stage.

Demanding a Sorry Privilege.

It is difficult to write in terms of moderation of the proposal, made in apparent seriousness by the head of one of the major leagues, that a certain number of professional ball players—eighteen for each club he thought would be enough—should be exempted from military service. That adds to the now much discredited, and highly discreditable, plea of "business as usual," the worse one of "pleasure as usual."

In behalf of this amazing proposal to keep at home a large body of young athletes whose training is of direct applicability to the tasks of modern war, the only argument presented is that baseball, as played by professionals, amuses and interests a considerable fraction of the public and so tends to promote the general cheerfulness by distracting the minds of the civilian population from their sorrows and losses. There is something of superficial plausibility in this argument, but it rests on several false assumptions and will not bear analysis.

Judging from the amount of pacifistical talking and writing now to be heard and seen, there is great need that we should think of the war, its effects and its possibilities, not less than we do now, but more. What many of us need is fixation, as the psychologists call it, not distraction, and gravity, not cheerfulness, is the mood that best becomes us. It is a notable fact, too, that it is from the business end of baseball, and not from the playing end of it, that the demand for exemption comes. In the colleges, the players of baseball and of other athletic games have volunteered almost to a man, not at all anxious, seemingly, about the gloom they will leave behind. All of their anxiety, if they have any, concerns the gloom that would be in store for the whole nation if its men of military age and capacity manifested their tender consideration for the non-fighting civilians—and for themselves—by devoting their strength and their skill to keeping us from thinking about the war.

Some of the professional ball players have volunteered, others have submitted gracefully when drafted. The majority of them, however, have manifested no obvious eagerness to join the colors, and their inaction almost justifies the suspicion that they will not be as indignant as they should be when they hear of the ignoble privilege which has been asked for them.

Proceedings Quaintly Antiquated.

At another time than this the trial of Mrs. DE SAULLES for the shooting of her divorced husband would attract much attention. It would deserve it, too, for the case brings into action many of humanity's primordial emotions and motives and raises questions of deep social interest in every civilized community. Some of those questions, and especially the question whether the admitted homicide was on any grounds justifiable or not, are at present forbidden subjects of discussion out of court. No such immunity, however, belongs to the methods of criminal procedure illustrated at the trial, particularly as comment on those methods, even though adverse, is not criticism of the Judge or the other officials whose only duty is to carry out the law as it is.

That is the justification—and the only excuse—for selecting a jury by a process of which the least fault, though a great one, is the amount of time it consumes and the amount of energy it worse than wastes. Its far severer condemnation lies in the fact that the result of this process is not to get a jury either notably intelligent or from whom notable ability to consider evidence and nothing else can be expected. What between the efforts of the prosecution to get a jury that will convict a woman, and those of the defense to get one that will not, the chances, and almost the certainties, are that the jury finally secured will be—well, to characterize it gently, not notable for anything at all except an amazing indifference to, and ignorance of, current happenings held important and interesting by everybody with a mind ordinarily active.

This method of selecting jurors is a survival of days when every one of its peculiarities was admirably adapted to existing conditions. As all of the conditions have changed, the method is now absurdly wrong, but we go on using the method for no other reason than that it once was all right. And that is no reason at all!

More Ways to Save Coal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would that letters from the people in your columns might crowd each other out in backing daylight saving as a safe, sane and simple method of conserving coal. In addition, if there is a real shortage of coal the owners of private greenhouses should be requested to close them for the period of the war. This would save many tons of coal burned that one family may be furnished with cut flowers or a delightful place in which to entertain a friend. Let rich and poor alike enjoy the beauty and perfume of the exquisite plants in the public greenhouses.

TEACHERS OF PACIFISM.

Much Harm to the Youth Can Be Done in Early Training.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see that public sentiment is being aroused against those teachers in public and private schools whose sympathies are pro-German or whose views are so impregnated with pacifism as to make them unfit to teach American boys. I have taught for nearly fifteen years, and I know how dangerous the influence of pacifism upon immature minds can be. When President Wilson issued his first call for volunteers the discussion of the doctrine of non-resistance, even as an academic question, should have entirely ceased. The idea of free speech, however, was grossly abused by many pacifist teachers, who have kept alive this discussion, to the utter demoralization of many a youth. Free speech was never meant to apply except among those of equal maturity, and a teacher who takes advantage of the immaturity of youth, which is so generous in its enthusiasms, to promote views dangerous to the welfare of the State should be placed where he can do no actual or potential harm.

There is a certain type of young man who seeks notoriety by adopting extreme views because he views life from the side lines. He is generally unwilling to get into the game of life, which he dimly sees from lofty and secluded heights, and, consequently, he develops a state of mind which is destructively rather than constructively critical. Such a mind finally gets to see so much of the sham or the counterfeit that it is blind to any good in the world. The best cure for many pacifists would be hard work, physical as well as mental, so that they would have less time for flirting with radical views. Pacifism does offer a clever argument, from an academic standpoint, and it is the cleverness of this argument that often infatuates the listener. It is like the young man who believes himself in love, until the rapidity with which he transfers his affections proves conclusively that he is in love only with the idea of being in love. In the one case the national welfare suffers and in the other the young lady's happiness, if she is apt to be serious-minded, but in both cases the objectives suffer. One can understand the appeal of pacifism to this type of mind, which, it must be assumed, is possessed of indications of maturity, if no more; but how a red-blooded youth of fifteen years or over can accept such views is unintelligible. The law of youth is the law of absolute right or absolute wrong. Between the ages of 16 and 20 the rational processes are not sufficiently developed to take a middle course between these two extremes. The holding of ultra-radical views is likely to be more of an affectation than a reality, and a boy pacifist is just as much an anomaly as a boy who claims that his religion is spiritual rather than moral. In the language of Jeremiah Rood, "it can't be done."

I offer these thoughts to you as one who believes that at present he can do more in a munitions factory than in a classroom, although by this I do not mean to disparage the efforts of any real red-blooded teacher who has stuck to his job—they need all the help and encouragement they can get.

Suffragists Defy the Constitution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article this morning commenting upon the action of the State Woman Suffrage party is admirable, but, in your interest in the patriotic issue, you seem to overlook, as do the women themselves, the constitution of the State of New York.

The report of the Committee on Resolutions, as published this morning, contains the following recommendation:

> In view of the likelihood of the immediate submission of the Federal amendment to the State Legislatures for ratification, we should campaign against the nomination or election of candidates for the New York Legislature and campaign against candidates for Congress who will not agree to indorse the Federal amendment, providing the Federal amendment has not passed before the next Congressional election, which takes place in 1918.

Section 1 of Article 13 of the constitution of the State of New York provides that members of the Legislature shall, before they enter upon the duties of their office, take and subscribe an oath which contains the statement that such member of the Legislature has > not directly, or indirectly, paid, offered or promised to pay, contributed, or offered or promised to contribute any money or other valuable thing as a consideration or reward for the giving or withholding a vote at the election at which I was elected to such office, and have not made any promise to influence the giving or withholding any such vote.

This last requirement would seem to be a serious bar to the proposed program outlined by the report of the Committee on Resolutions. SUFFRAGIST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Whatever reasons, based on the natural fear and hatred felt by the Republic for everything savoring of monarchy and aristocracy, may have once existed for prohibiting our officers and enlisted men from wearing foreign decorations won by distinguished valor and extraordinary achievement, these reasons have long since ceased to exist for us, and it seems both an injustice and an absurdity to retain a prohibition which puts our brave soldiers and sailors at a disadvantage as compared with those of our allies in this great war for the freedom and security of all nations. HENRY PREBLE.
New York, Nov. 21, 1917.

A FREE WOMAN, NOT A PACIFIST

I'm glad I am no Pacifist—
That banners floating free
From every flagstaff, every tower,
Mean everything to me—
Honor and sacrifice and truth,
A Nation's loyalty!

I'm glad I am no sheltered thing,
Too safe to understand
The hunger pangs, the ghastly need,
Of that invaded Land!
I'm glad they called us, glad we gave
An eager helping hand!

I'm glad the Hun has taught us this—
To fear the Egoist,
To fight the brute who'd hold the race
Beneath a mailed fist,
To hate those ghouls who bayonet
"The women who resist!"

Today we ask no coward's peace!
We'll pour forth all we own—
Money and life and love and youth—
That we may now atone
For those unseeing, leisured years
Before the Truth was known!

Dear God, I'm glad that Truth is writ
Across your flaming sky:
This is a war to liberate
All Brave Ones who defy
The maddest War-lord of all time,
The blackest tyranny!

I'm glad I am no Pacifist!
Old Glory floating free
Beside those friendly foreign flags
Means Home and Hope to me,
And more—in time, through all the World,
It means Man's Liberty!

ELIZABETH NEWPORT HEPBURN.

PRAISES NEW YORK HOTELS.

Washington Reports Meat Consumption Cut 116 Tons a Week.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Hotels in New York City, by the observance of meatless Tuesdays and wheatless Wednesdays and by other self-imposed restrictions, saved more than 116 tons of meat and 60 tons, or about 620 barrels, of flour last week, according to an announcement made by the United States Food Administration tonight. When the movement is under full headway it is believed that the hotels and restaurants of New York City will conserve at least 300 tons of meat and 1,200 barrels of flour weekly.

The statement of the Food Administration follows:

"From figures received by the Food Administration, showing immense savings in meat and wheat through the scrupulous observance of meatless Tuesday and wheatless Wednesday and other conservation measures they have adopted, it is clear that the New York hotels and restaurants are doing far more in proportion than the homes of the nation to save the foods America must ship to the European nations who are fighting its battles against Prussian autocracy. If hotels and eating places in other cities were doing as well as those in New York, and if private homes were saving with equal care, the amounts of wheat, meat, fats, and sugar that would be gained for shipment to our allies would be enormous.

"The savings of wheat in the larger hotels and restaurants in New York City are already yielding well toward a thousand barrels of flour a week and more than a thousand tons of meat, and this in spite of the fact that the movement has hardly more than fairly started, and new establishments are joining every day.

"Actual figures received show that in the hotels and restaurants of New York City on Tuesday, Nov. 13, the saving in meats amounted to 193,545 pounds, or 96.75 tons.

"The saving of wheat flour on Wednesday, Nov. 14, was 101,295 pounds, or 50.6 tons, or 517 barrels.

"Through taking certain meats from their daily menus and refusing to serve meats at banquets a further conservation was effected by hotels and restaurants, swelling the total quantity of meats saved by them in New York during the whole week of Nov. 12 to 232,254 pounds, or 116.12 tons.

"By the use of whole or partial substitutes for wheat flour, particularly in bread and pastries, the saving in wheat flour for the week is increased to 121,354 pounds, or 60.8 tons, or about 620 barrels.

"Provision dealers who supply New York hotels report a considerable decrease in sales since the adoption of meatless Tuesdays. One firm, which supplies only hotels of the better class with choice meats, reports a decrease of 50 per cent. in orders for Tuesday. A wholesaler selling to both butchers and hotels reports a decrease of 10 to 15 per cent. in weekly sales. A firm selling in several States to a great variety of trade reports the following decrease in Tuesday orders since the adoption of meatless days:

"In hotels, 30 per cent.; in restaurants, hospitals, and institutions, 25 per cent.; in schools, 25 per cent.; to retail trade and homes, 12½ per cent.

"Meatless Tuesday and wheatless Wednesday were not actually suggested to hotel and restaurant proprietors until early in October, when the propaganda for a beefless Tuesday was just beginning to take effect. Many hotels began the meatless day only the first Tuesday in November, and in many others Tuesday of this week is the first meatless day to be observed.

"The saving of meats in New York will show enormous increase this week. It is estimated that hotels and restaurants in that city alone within a fortnight will be saving a minimum of 300 tons of meats and 1,200 barrels of wheat flour per week. If the hotels and restaurants of the whole country save in the same proportion that those of New York are saving, John McE. Bowman, Chief of the Hotels Division of the United State Food Administration, believes that in this one industry alone the savings will be sufficient to furnish several shiploads of meats and wheat each week for our armies and allies."

On the recommendation of the Food Administration, ex-Judge Robert S. Lovett today issued a priority order directing that cattle feed consigned to Texas and New Mexico should receive preference in rail shipments over all commodities with the exception of coal, foods for human consumption, and a few other wartime essentials.

TO FORCE MEATLESS DAY.

James B. Regan Favors National Edict to Compel Food Saving.

James B. Regan of the Hotel Knickerbocker said yesterday that he believed that there should be a national edict setting aside Tuesday as meatless day throughout the country, and that this edict should not only be enforced by the Federal authorities but that the offenders against it should be punished by fine or imprisonment. Mr. Regan declared that there were between 50 and 100 restaurants in the vicinity of Times Square that were conducted by Germans, Austrians, and Hungarians whose natural inclinations were pro-German. A Federal commission to control the kitchens of all hotels and restaurants was also advocated by the proprietor of the Knickerbocker.

"The hotels of this city," Mr. Regan asserted, "are doing their best to try and conserve the food of the country, but are handicapped to a large degree by restaurants of this type. The conserving of meat on meatless Tuesday would be helped to an immense extent if a national edict were issued throughout the country that no meat should be served on Tuesday, and this order enforced by the Federal Government, so that any one breaking this law would be punished, either by a heavy fine or a term of imprisonment. It is useless in these times to ask the hotels and restaurants which, to a very large extent, consume the meat supply of the country, to abstain from serving meat on Tuesday, unless they have co-operation.

"A large number of owners of hotels and restaurants are loyal American citizens, and are desirous of doing their best to help the nation, but unfortunately there is always an element in human nature which has a tendency to sell their merchandise to their best advantage, regardless of any condition. If an order such as I speak of is issued by the Federal Government, enforcing this measure, there is no question at all in my mind that it would eliminate to a large extent the delay of gathering statistics which only scrape the surface, and does not effect any material benefit. In my opinion, the amount of saving in beef, veal, mutton, lamb, and pork, if handled in the way I have mentioned, by the Federal Government, would be an enormous saving in tonnage of meat.

"In addition, there is a waste of foodstuffs in the kitchens and pantries of hotels and restaurants. Men of well-known experience and ability, who understand the operation of kitchens and food commodities, such as J. P. Martin, Oscar of the Waldorf-Astoria, Mr. Hurley of the Belmont, and men of that type, of which there are any number throughout the country, should be appointed in the form of a Federal commission, and have full authority to control the kitchens of hotels and restaurants, and evolve a remedy for the waste of foods at the present time."

Mr. Regan praised the work of John McBowan of the Biltmore in giving his time and ability to the Government to help food conservation.

ACT ON EX-QUEEN'S ESTATE.

Speaker Holstein Appointed Administrator of What Liliuokalani Left.

HONOLULU, Nov. 22.—H. L. Holstein, Speaker of the Hawaiian Legislature, has been appointed temporary administrator of the estate of the late ex-Queen Liliuokalani.

A suit started two years ago by Prince Kalanianaole to have himself declared heir to the estate, valued at $200,000, is still pending. The Prince, a cousin of the late ex-Queen, and Congressional Delegate from Hawaii, was left $5,000 by the terms of the last will filed. The bulk of the estate was left in this will, which Kalanianaole charges is a forgery, to Theresa Wilcox Belliveau, who says she is a cousin of the ex-Queen.

HOOVER BOARD PLANS MILK INQUIRY HERE

New Commission Organizes and Decides to Open Investigation on Monday.

HOPES FOR LOWER PRICES

Moskowitz Seeks Co-operation in Opening Yards to Sell Coal Directly to the Poor.

The Milk Commission appointed by Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Administrator, on Wednesday met yesterday in the office of the local Food Administration, 124 East Fifteenth Street, perfected its organization, selected counsel, and decided to open on Monday in the City Hall an investigation into the milk situation here and in the State at large. The commission intends to make its inquiry thorough, and it will take up the distribution of milk here to see what can be done to decrease the cost of getting milk to the consumers. It will also inquire into the cost of production. The Dairymen's League agreed not to raise December prices, at the request of Administrator Hoover, and in spite of the opinion of many farmers that this meant a loss. The farmers have the assurance that, if the inquiry about to be held shows that the raising of December prices was justified, they will later be allowed to cover losses sustained in December.

Dr. W. H. Jordan, Chairman of the commission, announced after the meeting that the commission will follow the lead of the Mayor's Committee and hear the producers first. The public hearing will begin at 10 A. M. Monday in the City Hall. Dr. Jordan in the interval will serve notice of appearance on those whose testimony is wanted. He announced also that Frank W. Stevens, former Chairman of the Public Service Commission for the Second District, had consented to act as counsel for the commission.

Hoover Representative Presides.

If the suggestion contained in a letter written to the Mayor by Commissioner of Markets Henry Moskowitz is carried out the city will establish yards in certain parts of the city where coal will be sold in small quantities. Mr. Moskowitz said that he had asked Alfred Wiggin, State Fuel Administrator, to co-operate with him and the Association of Coal Dealers in mapping out the territory for the distribution of coal, and that the Administration assist the city in inducing dealers to sell at their yards in small quantities at yard prices.

"In many such quarters of the city," Commissioner Moskowitz wrote, "the situation may be relieved by the successful accomplishment of this purpose, but in many districts the territory served by each yard is so extensive that only a part of its residents would find themselves able to take advantage of this opportunity. In such districts and wherever coal yard dealers refuse to sell in this manner, it will be necessary for the city to establish stations where coal may be sold in small quantities. The larger coal dealers have so far given evidence of their willingness to co-operate with the Fuel Administration and no difficulty is anticipated so far as they are concerned."

Wants to Establish Coal Stations.

The Commissioner also has asked the approval of the Board of Estimate to grant sufficient funds to begin the establishment of coal stations. The estimates of cost are now being prepared. In making this request Commissioner Moskowitz has been guided by a report just made by Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein, who found that several hundred coal dealers had been unable to obtain a sufficient supply to meet present needs. The situation, he says, is grave, especially if a sudden cold snap should occur.

In the week which ended Nov. 17 Mr. Wallstein's investigators visited 182 dealers and 190 consumers. The average sales were 8,327 pounds. The coal cost them on an average $8.777 a ton or $.4438 a hundredweight, and was sold at an average price of $12.49 a ton or $.6247 a hundredweight. His report continues:

> Customers claimed to pay an average rate of $12.805 per ton or .64 per cwt., which by the cwt. is $1.53 cents more than the dealers claim. According to dealers their gross profit on a ton is $3.61 or $.181 per cwt. The average dealer's receipts amount to $56.83 per week and his payments for coal to $40.16, leaving a gross profit of $16.67, out of which must be paid rent, light, and other expenses. Dealers average 70.5 customers to each. The average customer burns during the season 207 pounds of coal per week at an average cost of $1.34. Last year the average customer paid for his coal at the rate of $11.74 per ton or $.587 per cwt. This year he is paying at the rate of $1.065 more per ton or $.053 per cwt., according to his own statement. Many dealers complain of difficulty in getting an adequate supply of coal. This is particularly noticeable on the west side of Manhattan where a strike against the wholesalers was in effect ten days ago.

Commissioner Moskowitz announced that Dr. Stephen S. Wise had been named as one of the members at large on the Committee on Organization of the Food Council.

City Food Administrator Williams has received word that many of the small restaurants are making no attempt to observe meatless or wheatless days. While the matter is to be investigated, Mr. Williams requests the patrons of such places to reason with the proprietors and if they fail to do as requested to refuse to patronize the offenders. The Administration intends also to investigate complaints that stores are forcing combination sales with sugar.

Hospitals "Doing Their Bit."

What the hospitals of the State are doing to conserve food is told in a letter to Mr. Williams from Everett S. Elwood, Secretary of the State Hospital Commission. He said the conference of Hospital Superintendents had voted to increase the allowance for fresh fruits, and that it was determined to try out in one or more hospitals the substitution of eggs for meat at least once a week and the substitution of oysters and poultry for meat at least two or three meals a week. It had been further decided, Mr. Elwood said, to make as extensive a use as possible of substitutes for white flour.

There is to be a conference at the State Food Commission's office tomorrow on the proposed combination for co-ordination of work between city, State, and National Food Administrations. John Mitchell, the Chairman, will probably go to Washington on Monday to confer with Mr. Hoover on the matter.

Christopher Murray, who has just been appointed Commissioner of the Department of Weights and Measures by Mayor Mitchel, assumed the duties of his office yesterday afternoon in the Municipal Building. Frederick H. Tighe, who has been Acting Commissioner since Joseph Hartigan resigned as Commissioner to take charge of a department with the Liberty Loan Committee, will remain in the department as Deputy Commissioner.

The coal shortage in Newark has become so serious that Mayor Gillen, head of the Health Department, has evolved a plan whereby wholesale coal dealers will honor tickets issued by the department to persons urgently in need of fuel. These tickets will entitle the bearer to buy 1,000 pounds of coal at once, thereby giving him preference over others who are not in serious need. The health officials told the Mayor that great hardship was found among the poor and sick because of the lack of coal. A number of wholesale coal dealers have agreed to the plan.

WANTS A WOMAN ON SERVICE BOARD

CALLS IT POLITICAL MOVE

Charles B. Hubbell Will Also Be Appointed to Succeed Major Hodge.

Announcement made in Albany yesterday by Governor Whitman that he would appoint F. J. H. Kracke, now a Commissioner of Plant and Structures under Mayor Mitchel, a member of the Public Service Commission for the First District, to succeed Colonel William Hayward, who has entered the United States military service, brought a spirited protest from former Senator William M. Bennett. Mr. Bennett accused the Governor of using the Public Service Commission for political purposes, and took him to task for not appointing a woman, as had been suggested by him.

The Governor also announced the appointment in the near future of Charles B. Hubbell, a New York lawyer who at present is a member of Governor Whitman's Prison Commission. He will succeed Major Henry W. Hodge, who has turned from the Public Service Commission to take up engineering work with General Pershing's forces in Northern France.

"I observe," said Mr. Bennett, "that shortly after the receipt of my letter of protest against the appointment of Frederick J. H. Kracke, Governor Whitman reiterated his intention to appoint that gentleman as a member of the Public Service Commission. It is about time that members were appointed who are friends of the public. The appointment of Mr. Kracke is an insult to the women, because they are entitled to representation in a matter so vital to the welfare of all citizens.

"I would recommend to the Governor that he pay a visit to the Fourteenth Street and Forty-second Street express stations in the rush hours and personally witness the discomforts and insults to which the women are exposed during those hours. The voters are getting tired of having their public officials riding about in automobiles paid for by the city or State, as the case may be. The strap hangers are in the majority, and I would suggest to Governor Whitman that he take a lesson from the recent Mayoralty election and fill the other vacancy in the commission by appointing a straphanger. (The other vacancy referred to by Mr. Bennett is the one to which Governor Whitman announced that he would appoint Mr. Hubbell.)

"I would suggest to the Governor that the present moribund condition of the Public Service Commission of the First District calls for the appointment of a woman member who will bring some life and energy and new views and human interest and some sympathy for the public to the commission.

"Mr. Mitchel tried to use Mr. Kracke as an instrument to play politics when he had the Legislature create the Department of Plant and Structures. Instead of having the Bridge Department and the Dock Department consolidate, Mr. Mitchel had the Department of Bridges enlarged into the Department of Plant and Structures with the idea of having placed under Mr. Kracke the supervision, maintenance, and repair of the buildings in all city departments, except Bellevue and allied Hospitals, including such control buildings now under the control of the five borough Presidents. This attempt to create a great political machine under Mr. Kracke failed to help the Mayor, and in my opinion a similar attempt of Governor Whitman will not help him. The whole city would be grateful to Governor Whitman if he would stop playing politics with the Public Service Commission and appoint an active, energetic, and intelligent woman to fill the other vacancy.

"Apparently Governor Whitman, who with Charles E. Hughes and United States Senator William M. Calder turned the city over to Tammany Hall, has failed to learn his lesson from their overwhelming repudiation by the people."

Governor Whitman at Albany declined to comment on the suggestion of Mr. Bennett. It is not likely that either of the appointments will be formally announced until after the departure of Colonel Hayward, who is in command of the Fifteenth New York (negro) Regiment, for Europe. The new appointments will be made, according to Governor Whitman, with the understanding that the incumbent resign upon the relinquishment by Colonel Hayward and Major Hodge of their army commissions.

The appointment of Commissioner Kracke will give Brooklyn three places on the Public Service Commission to Manhattan's two, while the three other boroughs will have no representation. The Governor's action in making the appointment in some quarters was ascribed to political reasons. Commissioner Kracke has been closely affiliated with the Governor politically, and last year was manager of his primary and general campaign. The appointment is regarded by some as part of a political move to combine the Republican forces in Kings County under the joint leadership of Commissioner Kracke and State Controller Eugene M. Travis, who has pooled his political interests with those of Governor Whitman, thus freezing out Jacob A. Livingston, the Old Guard Republican leaders of Kings, and put a quietus on the Gubernatorial boom of Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey of Brooklyn. Governor Whitman is to address a meeting of the Kings County Republican Committee on Dec. 11.

It was learned last night that the Queens Chamber of Commerce had sent a letter to Governor Whitman on Tuesday urging a Queens man for one of the vacancies on the Public Service Commission. The Borough of Queens has never had a representative on the commission.

"We believe," read the letter, "that if the Borough of Queens had been represented on the Public Service Commission this large territory would not be in the position today of paying taxes for the construction of rapid-transit lines in Manhattan and the Bronx which extend to the Westchester County line and give greater benefits to such cities as Mount Vernon, Yonkers, and White Plains, which pay no taxes to New York City."

Mr. Hubbell is a New York lawyer, who was President of the Board of Education before consolidation. He was also President of the first Board of Education after consolidation. He has been a member of three subway commissions by appointment from the Appellate Division. He has been active in politics for a number of years. He lives at the Hotel Gotham, in this city, and has a country home, Brookside Farm, near Williamstown, Mass., where he was born.

BAR RIVERSIDE DRIVE TO GERMAN TENANTS

Order Expected to Put Enemy Aliens Out of Buildings That Give Views of Harbor.

MAY SEIZE ALL BINOCULARS

Finger Printing and Registering Germans Under Consideration —Secret Service Arrests.

Wealthy subjects of the Kaiser now living in apartments or private residences in Riverside Drive, or occupying apartments in streets further from the river, from the windows of which the river and harbor are visible, will probably be ordered to vacate their homes within the next week. Whether or not the order will make all of Riverside Drive a barred zone has not been decided. There is every reason for saying, however, that practically all of the Drive south of Grant's Tomb will be a barred zone. The principal naval anchorages in the North River are off Seventy-ninth, Ninety-sixth, and 110th Streets, and Germans whose apartments look out upon those stretches of water will probably be the first to move.

Another matter intended to make more effective the regulation of enemy movements which is under consideration calls for the finger-printing of every male German subject in New York of and above the age of fourteen. If this proposal is approved the work of taking the finger prints of more than 130,000 Germans will be intrusted to the Police Bureau of Identification. It is expected that the Police Department will have charge of registering enemy aliens, and that every German will be called upon to give a complete history of himself from the time he arrived in this country until the present time, as well as certain data regarding his business and other activities in Germany or elsewhere before coming to New York. After the registration is completed the man will receive a registration card bearing his photograph, which will serve as a passport to zones other than those along the waterfront or in the vicinity of military and naval posts, and munition plants.

Put Germans Out of High Buildings.

It can also be stated that the Federal authorities have under consideration an order which will move enemy aliens who have business offices in high buildings overlooking the harbor or rivers to buildings from which such views are not available. There are hundreds of Germans occupying such offices at present. Some of these buildings border the waterfront, while others are many blocks inland. It was pointed out yesterday that a German occupying an office on any of the upper floors of the Woolworth, the Singer, the Metropolitan Tower, or other high office buildings could keep track of everything that goes on in the busiest parts of the river and the upper harbor, provided he supplied himself with a pair of good binoculars. It was rumored yesterday that enemy aliens would be forbidden to have distance glasses in their possession.

The police began yesterday the work of notifying Germans doing business along the waterfront south of Twenty-third Street to arrange for immediately vacating their offices, stores, saloons, warehouses, or homes. Every German doing business on the riverfront between Twenty-third Street and the Battery received his orders yesterday, and was informed that he had about seventy-two hours in which to comply with the Government's instructions.

The office of United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, in the Federal Building, was visited yesterday, as it has been every day since the President promulgated the new regulations, by scores of German subjects anxious to learn whether or not they could not be excepted from the rule. A German-American who has an office in the Whitehall Building wanted to know, for instance, if he could keep in his employ two German subjects. The office of this man offers one of the best views of the harbor to be had in the city.

"You can keep them in your employ if you wish," replied Marshal McCarthy, "but you will have to employ them in some other part of the city. They will not be permitted to remain at work in the Whitehall Building or in any other of the barred zones."

Another who called represented a private detective agency. He said the agency had a German among its employes who is helping guard a manufacturing plant in the Newtown section of Brooklyn. This plant has Government contracts. He was told to replace the German with a bona-fide, loyal American and to do it immediately.

Secret Service Kept Busy.

While the Federal and city officials were busy completing their plans for the enforcement of the Presidential regulations, Secret Service agents were busy in all parts of the city and in New Jersey rounding up Germans who continue to defy those regulations. Several arrests are said to have been made in Hoboken, all of them in the vicinity of the Government piers. It was reported that two men were taken into custody on the piers and that one of them was a member of the crew of an overseas transport. Federal officials would not discuss this report. Another report, which was not verified, was that a German was arrested on the East River front with a bomb in his possession.

Every merchant ship arriving in New York is immediately boarded by Government agents and every member of the crew subjected to an examination. Four Germans have been found among the crews of vessels plying between New York and coastwise ports, and West Indian ports, this week. Every German found in these crews is immediately arrested and taken to Ellis Island.

A sugar-laden ship arrived from Matanzas, Cuba, yesterday, and Government agents found in the crew a German who gave his name as Georg Plexnies. At first the man refused to admit he was German, but finally made the admission that he was a German subject. He is now in the internment prison.

Another man arrested yesterday was Max Juetner, a member of the crew of one of the seized German ships. He was found on an East River pier and was taken to Ellis Island.

Franz Johann Dorl, former editor of the pro-German publication known as Issues and Events, who is a friend of von Bernstorff and who during the first two years of the European war was one of the most bitter of the pro-German writers working for the German propagandists in the United States, was arrested on Wednesday night and ordered interned for the period of the war. Dorl is a native of Berlin and a graduate of the University of Berlin. He has lived in the United States for more than fifteen years, but has not become a citizen. As a Government agent put it yesterday, "He has made his living here for all these years, has enjoyed the protection of our laws, but remains to this day a loyal subject of the King of Prussia."

Dorl was arrested by Inspector Tunney of the Police Headquarters Bomb Squad. He appeared greatly surprised when told he was to be interned, and when asked why he had been so active in the United States in behalf of Germany replied that he had worked to "keep the United States out of the war." He protested that his activities ceased when Congress declared war on Germany. Dorl had an office at 271 Broadway. In that office the police found four cabinets of letters and other documents, all of which were seized. They also found some chemicals, which Dorl explained were used in a process for hardening concrete. Dorl is also a chemist.

Paper Still Pro-German.

When Dorl edited the paper now known as Issues and Events it was called The Vital Issue. The Vital Issue was a weekly, and during the months it was published it had a large circulation among Germans and German sympathizers in the United States. In its columns Dorl and other German propagandists defended the German way of making war and defended the activities of Bernstorff, Dernburg, and other heads of the German propaganda.

At the office of Issues and Events, which is now published at 25 West Broadway, it was said yesterday that Dorl severed his connection with the paper several months ago. The present editor of the paper is F. F. Schrader, a former associate of George Sylvester Viereck, and for many months prior to the entrance of the United States into the war one of the principal contributors to Viereck's paper, The Fatherland, which, like Issues and Events, was one of the stanchest defenders of Bernstorff and the German propaganda in this country.

In its edition dated tomorrow Issues and Events will appear with a front cover which shows a salaried worker trying to escape from a pack of hungry dogs. A woman, presumably the man's wife, is crouching beside him on the brink of a precipice which is labeled "Cost of Living." One dog is labeled "Hunger" and another "Debt." The paper prints a long article which is captioned "Lord Northcliffe's Candor."

"It has been hinted," the article states, "that a widespread secret campaign is on to reconcile the American people to annexations in Palestine and Mesopotamia on the ground that they have become necessary to defend the Armenians from the ferocity of the Turks—in other words, to ween them from their faith in the President's declarations against annexations and territorial dismemberments."

There are other articles, and practically all of them have a distinctly "pro-German" twang.

HERMANN SIELCKEN REPORTED TO BE DEAD

Broker Who Cornered Coffee Market in 1907 Had Been Living in Germany During War.

The death in Baden Baden, Germany, of Hermann Sielcken, who was a member of the firm of Crossman & Sielcken, is reported in a censored letter which reached this city several days ago. Though the name was blotted out by the censor, references to the death led his friends to believe that Mr. Sielcken was meant. He sailed for Germany on Feb. 2, 1914, and was last heard from in last February, when he was reported to be in failing health at Baden Baden. He was about 77 years old. The firm of which he was a member was reorganized on Sept. 22 of this year by direction of the State Department, since Mr. Sielcken was a German living in Germany.

Mr. Sielcken was a native of Hamburg, Germany, and, coming penniless to this country about fifty years ago, he engaged in the coffee trading business, in which he later made a fortune estimated at several millions. When George W. Crossman, his business partner, died in January, 1913, he bequeathed $1,000,000 to Sielcken "as a token of friendship." The venture in which Sielcken was reported to have made the most money was in the coffee corner of 1907, when he raised $10,000,000 to finance the American end of the deal, the Brazilian Government floating $75,000,000 in bonds. Mr. Sielcken piled up coffee in New York warehouses until the price more than doubled. The Government charged a violation of the Sherman law, but an adjustment was effected with Brazil and the coffee was ordered sold.

PLEA FOR JEWISH CHARITIES

Federation Tells of Great Increase in Maintenance Costs.

Felix M. Warburg, President of the Federation of Jewish Charities, issued an appeal yesterday to carry on the work of eighty-four societies, for which it collected during the last year $2,300,000. This is a greater sum than was ever raised previously for these institutions, but was short of $200,000. In his circular, Mr. Warburg says:

"For 1918, the outlook is serious. The cost of living is still increasing, stocks of food and of coal bought at lower prices are exhausted and must be replaced now at far higher prices. To carry on the same work in the past, to meet only the most urgent needs, our institutions must have at least $2,900,000 for 1918. The federation must provide funds for the care of thousands of orphans, aged and infirm, widows, the sick in our hospitals, besides the tens of thousands that apply to our dispensaries.

"We cannot allow the charitable, educational, and philanthropic agencies built up by Jewish endeavor through fifty years of effort to be crippled or disrupted."

Among the eighty-four institutions benefited by the funds of the federation are all the important Jewish charities of New York, including Mount Sinai Hospital, Lebanon Hospital, the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, Hebrew Technical Institute, Jewish Big Brothers, Montefiore Home, the Educational Alliance, and many sisterhoods associated with the synagogues and temples.

A MODERN FRENCH RECITAL.

Henry Eichheim and Sam Charles Play Faure, Debussy, and Ravel.

Henry Eichheim, violinist, formerly a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Sam Charles, pianist, both of Boston, journeyed to New York to give a recital yesterday in Aeolian Hall of modern French music, in which they claim a position as specialists. They began with Fauré's sonata for violin and piano, now no longer in the modern vanguard, and played also Debussy's sonata for the same instruments, one of the composer's latest productions, which had been first revealed to New York a few days ago by Mr. Eddy Brown. Mr. Charles played four of Debussy's solo pieces for piano and two of Ravel's.

Mr. Eichheim has many good qualities as a violinist, which he brought to bear upon Fauré's and Debussy's music; intelligence, a sense of proportion, repose, a good technical equipment in bowing and finger work. But a warm and beautiful tone was not among them yesterday, nor was there evident all the grace and finesse that this music needs to have its best effect. And Fauré's sonata needs a good deal from the player. Mr. Charles's performance was fluent and pleasing; it caught not a little of the charm of Debussy's pieces.

'Six Months' Option' Begins Nov. 29.

"Six Months' Option," a comedy by Ancella Anslee, will begin an engagement at the Princess Theatre on Thanksgiving Night, Nov. 29. The new piece is being produced by Dorothy Donnelly, and the cast includes Stanley C. Ridges, W. T. Clarke, Mrs. Jacques Martin, and Jane Marbury.

To Help Negro Soldiers in War.

An entertainment to call attention to the needs of thousands of negro soldiers now serving will be given at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre on Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Circle for Negro War Relief, of which Mrs. Emilie B. Hapgood is the head. Among those who will appear will be Bert Williams, John Barrymore, Grace La Rue, Norman Trevor, Harrison Rhodes, and Burr McIntosh. There will be no charge for admission.

GRANT B. SCHLEY, FINANCIER, DEAD

IN MANY BIG OPERATIONS

Figured in Inquiry When Senators Were Charged with Speculating During Making of Tariff Bill.

Grant Barney Schley, head of the brokerage firm of Moore & Schley, and a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1881, died yesterday at his home in Far Hills, N. J., in his seventy-third year. He had been in failing health for several years and had not taken an active part in the direction of the affairs of his firm for the last ten years.

He was born at Chapinsville, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1845. He attended the Canandaigua Academy, and in 1861, at the age of sixteen, he became a clerk in the express office of Wells, Butterfield & Co. at Syracuse, and five years later, when the Adams Express Company was formed by the consolidation of various companies, young Schley was sent to New York to take charge of the money order department of this company. In 1874 he was a clerk in the First National Bank, where he remained for six years, resigning his position as head of the foreign exchange department to enter the brokerage business with Ernest Groesbeck, under the firm name of Groesbeck & Schley.

In 1885 the late John G. Moore, at the suggestion of a number of capitalists who were associated with him in the Mutual Telegraph Company, entered the brokerage business, and Mr. Schley became one of his partners. He was active on the floor of the Stock Exchange for many years, and played a part in many extensive financial operations, numbering among his clientele many of the wealthiest men in the United States, among them H. H. Rogers, William C. Whitney, Thomas F. Ryan, William Rockefeller, Oliver H. Payne, and John W. Gates.

In 1894, when certain Senators were accused of speculating in sugar stocks while a tariff bill was in the making, Elverton R. Chapman, who was then a member of the firm of Moore & Schley, braved a jail sentence for contempt when he refused to reveal to the investigating committee the names and accounts of customers of the firm. The firm of Moore & Schley played a part in many extensive market operations.

Mr. Schley was a Director of the American Smelting and Refining Company, the Chihuahua Mining Company, the Coal Creek Mining and Manufacturing Company, the Electric Storage Battery Company, the Elliott-Fisher Company, the Northern Pacific Railway, the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and the Republic Iron and Steel Company. His clubs were the Union League, Metropolitan, New York Yacht, Jekyl Island, Bankers', Automobile Club of America, the France-America Society, Essex Fox Hounds, Somerset Hills Country Club, and he was also a member of the Agricultural Association, the Academy of Political Science, the Economic Club, and the Archaeological Society.

In 1879 Mr. Schley married Miss Elizabeth Baker, sister of George F. Baker. His wife died several years ago. He is survived by two sons, Grant B. Schley, Jr., and Kenneth Baker Schley, and a daughter, Mrs. Max Howell Behr.

FT. MYER TURNS OUT 900 NEW OFFICERS

RANK IN THREE CLASSES

All to be Placed on Active Duty at Once—Robert L. Gray of Brooklyn a Major.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Colonel Charles W. Fenton, commandant of the Fort Myer training camp for reserve officers, on authority from the War Department, announced tonight the names and grade of approximately 900 men who are to go into active service immediately following three months' of intensive training. Instructions also were telegraphed by the Adjutant General tonight to all other training camp commandants directing them to make public the names of the men to be commissioned at their camps.

The highest rank given at Fort Myer was that of Major. One Major was commissioned out of the eight companies of infantry. This went to Stuart S. Janney, a Baltimore clubman, who saw fighting in 1898 with General Funston. The board which recommended these to be commissioned consisted of Colonel Charles W. Fenton, Colonel W. J. Glasgow, Lieut. Col. E. S. Wheeler, and Major H. Clay Supplee. Two Majors of field artillery were also commissioned. They were Robert L. Gray of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Robert B. Johnson of Washington, D. C.

The commissions were issued in three classes, known as A, B, and C, based on the order of standing of the candidates. This is important as it will indicate the man's seniority in the service.

Men in Class A are recommended to be commissioned and called to active duty at the close of the camp, Nov. 27, to fill existing vacancies in the national army or to be attached to regular army organizations for duty. They will be on leave of absence until Dec. 15 to enable them to buy uniforms. On that date they will proceed to the various stations of the national army and regular army to which they are assigned.

Men in Class B are recommended to be commissioned eventually as provisional Second Lieutenants in the regular army. It is recommended that at the close of the camp they be commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Officers' Reserve Corps and attached to regular army regiments for duty and subsequently commissioned in the regular army as vacancies occur.

Class C includes all other men from the camp who are recommended for commissions. Men commissioned from this list will be commissioned in the Officers' Reserve Corps or national army, called to active duty and assigned as additional officers to various units. For men on this list no vacancies exist at the present time, but they will be assigned to fill vacancies as they occur, in the meantime serving on active duty as indicated above.

September Interborough Figures Show Fewer Riding on Elevated.

According to figures filed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company with the Public Service Commission, 31,996,857 passengers traveled on the subway division of the company in September and 26,804,968 on the company's elevated lines. This was an increase over the same month in 1916 of 2,626,431 on the subway system and a decrease of 1,855,368 on the elevated lines.

ASKS CITY TO REVOKE PERMITS TO CENTRAL

NO SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT

Points Out—That Company Might Stop Operation of Trains and Defy Public Authority.

The report of the joint committee of the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate announcing that no agreement could be reached with the New York Central Railroad Company for the west side improvement will be submitted to the Board of Estimate at its meeting today. For the purpose of clarifying the situation, and in explanation of the committee's request that permits given the company for the occupation of the city's streets be revoked, Public Service Commissioner Hervey, Chairman of the Committee, gave out a statement yesterday.

He explains that any acquiescence in the agreement of 1916 would confirm the company's claim as to exclusive ownership to its right of way, and would relieve it from all control by public officials; that the company's right of way north of the city was purchased from private owners, and that an effort has been made by the company to hold as absolute privileges granted by the city authorities.

If these alleged exclusive rights were admitted by the city, Mr. Hervey said, the company could suspend the operation of its trains, defy all public authority, and even though it lost its charter, could still continue in business as a public carrier. He is of the opinion that the public rights can be preserved only by the most drastic action. His statement reads:

"The action of the Joint Conference Committee became a logical next step in the solution of the west side problem following the flat refusal of the New York Central Railroad Company to discuss or consider any proposal of the committee for the settlement of the west side problem which departed from the so-called 1916 agreement. To the 1916 agreement the committee could not give approval for many reasons; but paramount to all others was the result which such an agreement would have had in placing the New York Central practically beyond the control of the State as well as the city.

"For more than sixty years the railroad company has sought to put its rights in the streets of New York, although received gratuitously and under a mere 'assent,' on the same basis as its right of way north of the city, which was purchased in fee from the private owners and paid for by the railroad company. Its object in so doing has very apparently been to have a complete right of way owned by it privately, and not as a part of its franchise. If the railroad's rights in the city streets are treated as a part of the franchise granted in 1846 the Legislature has full power to alter the franchise or repeal it, and were it finally and conclusively settled that these street rights are a franchise, the solution of the west side problem is simple and lies with the Legislature under its unquestioned power, expressly reserved in the original act, to repeal or amend the charter.

"But the railroad company takes no such position and refuses to admit that its rights in the streets are a part of its franchise. In the 1916 agreement it claimed an easement in the streets as a distinct property right separate from its franchise. If this claim of the railroad company were good it would mean that the company might refuse to run trains and defy all the statutes of the State, the ordinances of the city, and the orders of the Public Service Commission, for the simple reason that even though it lost its charter, it would still own as a proprietary right, in the streets of New York City, the only direct means of getting food and freight into the city. Holding such a right as its private property, no other railroad could use it, and it could be taken from the New York Central only by means of special legislation, condemnation proceedings, and the payment of an award for damages which the city could not meet in its present or any reasonably anticipated future financial situation. Indeed, if the New York Central has what it claims to have, the city and State are now at its mercy. The 1916 agreement would have absolutely solidified this claim and placed it beyond dispute. The city's neck would have been in the railroad's noose forever.

"Obviously the Joint Conference Committee could approve no such agreement and, therefore, in good faith it prepared and offered to the railroad company a new proposal which gave to the company all that it needed, but refused the perpetual and independent right sought by the railroad company. The important new feature of the committee's proposal was to confine the railroad's operation to city streets and places, under contractual licenses and leases good for twenty-five years with the privilege of renewal.

"The new proposed agreement was submitted to the railroad company with the express statement that it did not present finality of views and was submitted as a basis of negotiation and discussion. The railroad company has absolutely refused to consider or discuss the proposal and appears squarely to take the ground that neither the State nor the city can put it out of the streets. It must be remembered that the authority of the Joint Conference Committee came from the Legislature under Charter 719 of the Laws of 1917.

"This situation can be met only by drastic action. The railroad must be forced to take a position either that it is in the streets under a franchise from the State or a grant from the city.

"The repeal of the Ordinance of 1846 will eliminate the claim of rights from the city. It will then remain for the Legislature to deal with the original charter if the railroad company claims, or is held to have, a franchise.

"No effective means can be found to end the railroad's domination until the nature of its claim is settled, for it may be expected to shift its position to suit its needs, until both avenues of escape are closed. The earlier litigation decided in 1911 settled nothing except that the railroad's rights, whatever they were, had not expired in 1896; in other words, that no limitation of time could be read into the ordinance as long as the ordinance remained in force.

"Judge Herrick, whose decision as referee was affirmed, expressly refused to find, although requested to do so by the railroad company, that 'the grant by the State of New York to the Hudson River Railroad Company to locate, construct, and maintain its railroad in the streets and avenues named in the ordinance hereinbefore specified, when accepted and acted upon by the said company, became a contract and is irrevocable, and constituted property which could not be taken from said corporation, and cannot be taken from the plaintiff, except by due process of law.' This refusal of the referee to find in favor of the railroad company is in accord with all the decisions of the courts of this State, and of the Supreme Court of the United States, that a municipality, as such, cannot grant perpetual rights in city streets, and can make no contract which would have the effect of creating any such perpetual rights.

"As stated in the committee's communication to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, its recommendation does not contemplate any action which will physically interfere with the operation of the railroad during the continuance of the world war. The early passage of the proposed resolution is urged in order that public rights may be clarified and determined, and the basis laid for future action."

New Superintendent of City Farm.

The appointment of Dr. Theron J. Vosburgh as Superintendent of the City Farm at Warwick, N. Y., to succeed Dr. Charles S. Stokes, who resigned in June, was announced last night by Charles Samson, Executive Secretary of the Board of Inebriety. Dr. Vosburgh was formerly a surgeon in the United States Navy. He will receive a salary of $5,000 a year.

Washable Skirts for Spring.

Separate skirt manufacturers in this city apparently are devoting special attention this year to various washable fabrics for the Spring trade. It is felt that, with the women of the country more or less impressed with the need for economy, these practical and serviceable garments will be very generally sought. Those manufacturers who are already showing their Spring samples are said to have booked a very good volume of business in these lines. So far, according to reports, washable cotton satin is the most favored.

Children's Dresses in Demand.

There is reported to be a very good market for children's dresses. Little party frocks in georgette have been unusually well taken. Dimity also has been popular, and most frequently it is preferred in white. Georgette dresses have sold in various light shades, including flesh color, which is said to be the most popular, orange, pink, and light blue. Linen bloomers and rompers for both boys and girls have sold well for this time of the year. Elaborate preparations for the holiday trade in these lines have been made in the local department stores, and the most optimistic predictions for its volume are made.

Spring Styles Sparing of Wool.

It is evident, from the early offerings for Spring in the local women's ready-to-wear trade, that woolens are not to be very generally favored in the styles for 1918. This is true of suits as well as dresses. A large variety of silk weaves are used to a greater extent this year than ever before. Where wool is used at all, it is usually only for purposes of trimming as, for instance, in an attractive afternoon dress by a local designer which was made of silk with wool in a contrasting color used for the dual purpose of decoration and trim. Cotton substitutes, it is said, will be used a great deal in suits, not so much for price saving as for wool saving.

Better Waists Are Bought.

While there are waist manufacturers here and there in the local trade who have been complaining of dull business during the last month or so, there are others who report that they have felt no marked falling off in business. "Smarter waists and better materials," said one manufacturer, "are being bought all the time. Though perhaps the volume of sales has diminished somewhat, there is more actual money being spent than a year ago. The earnings of women are much greater than they ever have been before, and the number of women in business has greatly increased. They have more money to spend on clothes, and from all indications I get they are spending it."

Coarse Cottons Are Active.

Coarse cottons in the gray are sharing the activity of the finer-yarn goods in this market, and buyers are looking well into 1918 on some construction. Bids of 13¼ cents were made yesterday, for instance, for 40-inch 4.25-yard sheetings for deliveries running to July next. Nearby business was put through on four-yard, 56-60 sheetings at 14¼ cents, and in certain quarters the prediction is made that these goods will sell at 15 cents within the next few months. For 1918 deliveries of 36-inch 5.50 sheetings 10¼ cents is bid, with mills not over anxious to accept it. The best that can be done for any kind of nearby delivery of 30-inch 3.25 yard drills is 16¼ to 16¾ cents, depending on the actual shipment wanted and the size of the order.

New Things in Millinery.

Among the new millinery lines that are now being displayed here are Chu Chin Chow sets, which consist of a hat and scarf made of Oriental embroidered satin. The hats are of the turban order, flexible, and are faced with bright-colored satin. They are trimmed with wool stitching, tassels and Japanese ornaments. It is said that they can easily be adapted to out-door sports wear. For young misses is shown a Scotch cap of duvetyn or velvet, in khaki and black. A military effect in the same kind of a cap also is seen. This is made of Scotch plaid velvet and has a scarf to match. Despite the earliness of the season, several lines of hats for Winter resort wear are also on display here.

Look Askance at Hemmed Tops.

Retailers of men's hosiery have heard more cheerful news than that several of the manufacturers are contemplating pushing the sale of socks with hemmed tops, instead of ribbed, because of the shortage of workers known as "loopers." According to a well-posted hosiery man, it is an open question as to how these socks will take with the average man. Not only will a hemmed top lack the elasticity of a ribbed one, it is said, but in order to get them to fit as snugly around the legs as the well-made ribbed top sock does the chances are that the hemmed tops will have to be made smaller. This opens the way to a slight binding, and may also shorten the "life" of the sock by lessening the amount of "stretch" required to let the foot pass in and out easily.

Silk Sweater Sales Are Big.

Reports from manufacturers of both real and fibre silk sweaters for women indicate that buyers are still placing good-sized advance Spring orders for them. In some cases the real silk sweater men also are reporting duplicate business, for prompt delivery, from stores that cater to women who spend at least a part of the Winter at Palm Beach and other Winter resorts. A paradoxical kind of situation appears to exist in that, while the fibre sweater men say they are getting big business because real silk sweaters are now so expensive, makers of the latter goods say that it is this very thing that is helping their business. In other words, the higher silk sweaters come for the clientele their customers cater to, the better, providing, of course, the prices of the garments show up in the material, design and workmanship.

Are Buying Up Parts of Dolls.

The gap that has been left in the supply of dolls by the cessation, for the great part, of imports of foreign ones, is making it very difficult for repair departments and the so-called dolls' hospitals to do their work this year. In many cases the "hospitals" are buying up all the intact parts of broken dolls they can get hold of, whether they be bodies, heads, arms, legs, or eyes. In fact, some of them are charged with deliberately "laying down" in the case of half-way difficult repairs, where all parts are supplied by the person owning the doll, in the hope of discouraging the owner into selling the separate parts at about a quarter of the price the doll cost when new. If successful, they use the parts in fixing some other doll, and charge five or six times as much for them as they paid.

More Printcloth Prices Go Up.

More advances in printcloth prices took place yesterday in the local gray goods market, and buyers were again active. Many of them showed a disposition to cover their needs as far into 1918 as the mills would go. In some cases buyers were said to be bidding higher prices for 1918 deliveries than the mills were asking only a short time ago, and many sales are being held up until the mills have had time to pass on them. For January delivery 9¾ cents was bid for 38½-inch 60-48s, while bids of 11 cents were in the market for 64-56s for shipment as far ahead as April and May next. For similar deliveries of 39-inch 68-72s 12¾ cents was bid, while 7½ cents was offered for 38½-inch 44-40s. Several mills are asking 11½ cents for spot 38½-inch 64-60s. This is the way spot printcloth prices closed:

EXPLAINS PATENT ON FLAG.

Designer Says Half of Royalty Goes to Red Cross.

Captain R. L. Queisser of Cleveland, designer of the United States service flag, which is today displayed from thousands of American business houses and homes in all parts of the country, arrived in New York last night and explained why he had patented the design on which he receives a royalty. Captain Queisser, who is at the Hotel Astor is to open negotiations with flag manufacturers for the use of the design.

"During the early part of last March," said Captain Queisser, "I was confined in bed following an automobile accident near Fort Wayne, Indiana, where I was stationed with the Fifth Ohio Infantry. It was during my illness that I was mustered out of service, due to the disability caused by injuries received. I thought of some visible sign for a mother to show that her son was serving the country rather than have her feel an emptiness about the house which would depress her. A service flag then came to me and after several days I evolved the design.

"It was not long after that letters came to me approving the design and its value to a family symbolical of their sacrifice."

Captain Queisser said he received a small royalty from the flag manufacturers and half of it was being contributed to the American Red Cross.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Although there was enough good news to carry stocks forward to new levels yesterday, the movement of prices was highly irregular and the tone at the closing dull and dispirited. The day's turnover was considerably less than that on Wednesday. The gratifying success of the British attack along an unusually wide front was not without its influence in creating a more hopeful view on the course of the war, but its bearing on stock prices was not as marked as might have been expected. Traders realize that even a victory like this, great as it may be, does not bring peace appreciably nearer. Announcement of the rise in the number of British vessels sunk by submarines last week found reflection in a decline in the shipping shares about as marked as the advance which took place last week when the showing was so much better.

The stock market is looking too far ahead to be violently affected by day to day changes in the situation. It is known that the Federal Government's powers over business will be increased much further at the forthcoming session of Congress, if the President's friends have their way, through the enactment of laws designed to put into his hands the right to commandeer industry wherever it seems advisable for the successful conduct of the war. At the same time it is entirely possible that a bill will be introduced to provide for the creation of a sort of war credit board to which will be referred applications for Federal moneys to assist in the production of war materials. The question has so many ramifications that Federal officials hesitate to take steps which would commit the country to direct Federal control of a large part of the industrial capacity. So far the Government has made advances to manufacturers unable to borrow for working capital in the usual markets only in the way of anticipating payments. The question of the nation's obligation toward other concerns likewise doing their part to co-ordinate the country's resources but not receiving direct returns is not so simple. For instance, half a hundred executives of public utility companies have laid before the Treasury officials their inability to finance construction of new car lines and power plants to take care of the various army camps. Here is a case where the service must be supplied, but where it is impossible to advance funds to be retained out of the contract price.

Money was easier yesterday, the rate dropping to 2½ per cent. for call loans after most of the day's needs had been supplied at 4¾ per cent. The Federal Reserve Bank paid $130,000,000 to the banks for redemption of Treasury certificates. Bonds were generally firmer, with evidence of a slightly better investment demand.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

British Victory Adds New Impetus to the Trading.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Cheerfulness was apparent on all sides of the stock market today on the British victory. Allied bonds and home rails hardened whenever buyers appeared, despite the announcement of a New South Wales 5¾ per cent. loan of £3,000,000 at 99½. Armament and shipping shares were strong and rubber and oil stocks in better request, but Scandinavian bonds were flat.

Money was tighter and discount rates were firm. Petrograd exchange was easier, while Scandinavian rates advanced.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 59f 75c for cash. Exchange on London, 27f 22c. Five per cent. loan, 87f 80c.

ASKS FAIR PLAY FOR ROADS.

F. H. Sisson Says Only Alternative Is Government Ownership.

Speaking yesterday at a luncheon of the National Association of Chair Manufacturers at the Hotel Astor, Vice President Francis H. Sisson of the Guaranty Trust Company told his hearers that unless the railroads received a fair return on their operations the only refuge from widespreading commercial disaster would be Government ownership.

"Pay the railroads a living wage," Mr. Sisson said. "See to it that recriminations end, and let us get together on some constructive program. Unless we do, the railroads of this country will either break under the strain, causing widespread commercial disaster, or be taken over by the Government."

Pending development of a constructive program, Mr. Sisson proposed increased rates, Federal regulation, not only of rates, but also of wages and security issues, and the repeal of anti-trust acts as applied to the roads. "After a taste of the efficiency demonstrated by the Railroad's War Board from centralized and co-ordinated operation, made possible by governmental sanction," he said, "the public will never be satisfied to go back to the archaic state of competition that is still compelled by the statute books."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Interlocking Income Taxes.

There is considerable complaint in British financial circles over the manner in which the United States Treasury Department under our tax law levies the corporation and income taxes on the earnings here of British corporations whose domicile and principal business is within the British Empire. It is pointed out that the United States law is so much more inclusive in this respect than the British that British firms doing an international business are frequently handicapped in competition with American firms by having to pay two sets of taxes where the American pays only one.

Treasury Certificates Redeemed.

Of the $385,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness which fell due yesterday, $130,400,000 were redeemed at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Subscriptions for that issue in this district totaled between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000, and a large amount was turned in Thursday of last week in payment of Liberty Loan subscriptions.

Erie Not to Sell Bonds.

Although the New Jersey Public Service Commission has granted the Erie Railroad authority to issue $15,000,000 of twenty-year 6 per cent. refunding and improvement bonds, it was said yesterday by bankers that the road did not contemplate any new financing at present, but that, with the formalities settled, it would be in a position to offer securities, should such a step be deemed desirable in the future. Other railroad and industrial concerns are considering plans for new financing, but no definite action is likely to be taken until investment market conditions become more favorable.

New Low Record for Lire.

Italian exchange, which has been declining for some time, reached a new low record yesterday, when 8.94 lire to the dollar was quoted. The parity of exchange is 5.18, and the depreciation at the low figure is about 42 per cent. The closing rate for checks was 8.91½, the same as on Wednesday, with cables at 8.90½.

Shipping or Shipbuilding?

The big British financial interest that is primarily centred in the shipping industry, from indications reaching this country, continues to be much agitated over the question of the employment of British shipyards after the war. The argument was precipitated by the placing of a series of big orders for tonnage in British yards, for delivery after the war, by Norwegian interests. The Norwegian capitalists, it is explained, are quite willing to let their money lie idle, or, rather, to let the British builders have the use of it for the present, in order to make sure of getting their ships, because in this way it is exempted from the heavy Norwegian taxes, which are not levied on "reconstruction" work, in which classification shipbuilding is listed.

Who Gets First Chance?

The first outcry was raised on behalf of the British shipping companies, which have no mind to see British yards filled with tonnage to fly a foreign flag while their own needs in the way of replacement of shipping lost in the war are neglected. They admit that Norwegian shipping interests have been very "friendly" during the war, but they want to see the British merchant marine restored first. But since then the builders have been heard from. They are getting, admittedly, much higher prices for these Norwegian contracts than British shipowners, under their burden of war taxes, can afford to pay, besides having the use of so much free capital until the war ends, and they argue that it is just as much to the benefit of Britain to have a prosperous shipbuilding industry as to have a quickly restored merchant marine. Over here this particular controversy has not arisen, for the simple reason that the United States Government is running the whole business.

Shortage of Pennies.

Despite the fact that the Government mints are turning out one-cent pieces as fast as they can, the shortage of these coins has not been abated. Every day the Sub-Treasury in Wall Street receives large orders for pennies which it cannot fill. The practice followed is to distribute all available coins of that denomination among the many applicants. An official suggested yesterday that if the shortage continued much longer department stores might find it necessary to sell $2.49 articles at $2.50. With the view of conserving the gold supply, banks are advising their customers not to distribute gold coins as Christmas gifts this year, but instead to use War Savings Certificates or Liberty bonds.

INSURANCE HEADS TO MEET.

Convention of Life Presidents Will Open Here on Dec. 6.

"Life Insurance and the Nation's Problems—Now and After the War" will be the general topic of discussion at the eleventh annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, to be held at the Hotel Astor on Dec. 6 and 7. Representatives of the Federal Government and of State and municipal governments, as well as transportation, agricultural, and medical experts, will join the insurance men in the conferences on the various problems involved.

Consideration will be given to the ways in which trust funds of American policy holders have contributed to national preparedness in the past through investments in railroad securities, farm mortgages, city real estate mortgages, public utilities, State and municipal bonds; how those funds—now totaling about $6,000,000,000—are at present supporting the nation in the conduct of the war, with a forward look into the manner of their use in meeting after-war conditions.

The following are among the addresses that will be delivered: "War Savings," by Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank and Chairman of the War Savings Committee; "Financial and Physical Needs of American Railroads in the World's Reconstruction Period," by Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; "Safeguarding the Owners of the Securities of the Railroads of the Country," by S. Davies Warfield of Baltimore, Md.; "Requirements of American Agriculture After the War," by Herbert Quick of the Federal Farm Loan Board; "Life Insurance and the War," by William A. Hutcheson, Second Vice President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company; "Governmental War Insurance and War Taxation," by George E. Ide, President of the Home Life Insurance Company; "Reclamation of Men Rejected by the Draft and Its Relation to Life Insurance," by Dr. John H. Quayle of Cleveland, Ohio.

A Larger Income with a Smaller Capital

The man with $1,000 today can invest conservatively and get as good, if not a better, income return than he could with $1,500 a few years ago. To help meet the increased cost of living, investors should make every endeavor to get the maximum income present-day investment conditions make possible.

To Compensate for Increased Taxation

investors with funds available can purchase some of the strongest bonds, notes, and preferred stocks at prices, compared with a year or so ago, that are most attractive. The difference between present and former prices in the great majority of cases more than discounts the new taxes to be paid.

THE COTTON MARKET

Trading Comparatively Inactive, with Decline of from 11 to 15 Points.

The cotton market acted yesterday as though its nerves felt the need of a rest after the period of strenuous advances through which it has recently passed. Trading was comparatively inactive during the whole day, with intervals of downright dullness, and the fluctuations in prices meant much less than usual because they were made on a small volume of business. The market held up fairly well during the morning, but sagged off listlessly during the afternoon, closing barely steady, from 11 to 15 points off. November alone was quoted at 8 points advance, but this represented little actual business.

The market opened at a decline of 1 to 23 points, with the more active months selling 17 to 22 points under Wednesday's closing prices as a result of overnight selling from local and Southern sources. These offerings were readily absorbed at the decline by buying through brokers with Liverpool and domestic trade connections. The presence of this demand encouraged scattered buying for long account, and such buying was also stimulated by the reports of continued British successes in France. The market rallied in consequence, with December selling 2 points and later months about 10 to 12 points net higher. The market then eased off under realizing, accompanied by reports of an easier spot basis in the South, and was unsettled later in the day, when the disposition to take profits was increased by the political news from Russia. Closing prices showed reactions of about 20 to 26 points from the best.

The talk of an easier spot basis in the South was more or less in evidence during the entire day. It was asserted that if the basis broke another 25 points in the Eastern belt, it might mean the shipping of some cotton here for delivery on contracts. In this connection, however, the difficulty of obtaining warehouse room for cotton here was pointed out around the ring as an obstacle to bringing supplies from the South for tender, and while December was slow to follow the early advance, it held its own in the later trading. No change was reported in the ocean freight situation. There were no exports reported for the day.

Exports so far this season are 1,583,872 bales, against 2,214,922 last year. Southern spot markets as officially reported were 20 points lower to 50 points higher, most of them being unchanged.

COMPENSATION LAWS GROW.

Only Eleven States Now Without Them, Report Shows.

The annual meeting of representatives of insurance companies composing the Workmen's Compensation Publicity Bureau was held yesterday at the offices at 80 Maiden Lane. The United States Casualty Company, represented by its President, Edson S. Lott, was elected Chairman of the Executive Committee for the coming year; the Hartford Accident and Indemnity Company, represented by its Vice President and General Manager, Norman R. Moray, was chosen Vice Chairman, and the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, through Robert J. Hillas, President, was appointed to the third position on the committee.

The report of the Secretary-Treasurer, F. Robertson Jones, covered the last year's legislative record on matters touching casualty and surety interests, and showed that only eleven States—all of them except North Dakota in the South—were now without any sort of workmen's compensation. Mr. Jones reported that he had spent much time in "opposing the elimination of stock companies from the compensation business in Massachusetts, in trying to prevent the insertion in the Federal Revenue act of obnoxious provisions, and in opposing obnoxious compensation legislation in New York."

The legislative policy of the bureau is described as follows: "Not merely to assume the hands-off attitude toward proposed reasonable and practicable workmen's compensation legislation, but to be of every possible assistance to all organizations and associations in formulating, initiating, promoting and effecting such legislation."

WANTS CITY EXPENSES CUT.

Real Estate Association Head Advises Reduction in Budget.

Stewart Browne, President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, filed a brief yesterday with the Aldermen advising certain reductions in the 1918 budget, but declared that he did not believe that social welfare should be curtailed as a war measure.

"The war shows," he said, "that it is necessary to put man above the dollar, and if that be good for a nation at war it must equally be good in peace. I think that realty has in the past opposed many municipal activities solely from the cost standpoint which in themselves were necessary and beneficial."

As regards reductions, Mr. Browne said that all the city departments had too many employes and advised a reduction. He said that no increases in salary should be granted to city employes in the army or navy; that no increase should be given for efficiency in work, or for extra work, but only to enable the employes to meet the high cost of living. He said that no increases should be granted to any one receiving $2,500 or more a year, and that no increase in excess of $200 a year should be granted to any employe. He advised that no additional employes be provided, this applying especially to school teachers. He said also that no new public improvements should be undertaken in 1918.

URGES LIBERAL USE OF WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

Director Frederic W. Allen Says They Will Help Redeem a Spendthrift Nation.

Frederic W. Allen of Lee, Higginson & Co., who has been appointed Director of War Savings for New York City, returned yesterday from Washington to begin the task of perfecting an organization and planning the campaign to promote the work of selling stamps and certificates. War savings stamps will be placed on sale on Dec. 3, and Mr. Allen expects to have the machinery of distribution and publicity organized by that time.

"The War Savings thrift stamps and war savings certificates," Mr. Allen said, "will not only enable every one to do his bit in helping the Government win the war, but through their other phases will redeem a spendthrift nation from spendthrift ways. Every person who buys will not only help his country, but greatly benefit himself. When the plan is fully understood by the people they will be quick to respond to its patriotic and its investment importance. There is no question of its being a great success. Everything is in its favor, and no one can raise a single objection to it.

"If Benjamin Franklin, who secured no small part of his reputation as an advocate of thrift, were alive today he would be the flag bearer of this great undertaking. What he had to say about thrift over a century ago is as true today as it was then, and the war is bringing home to us the truth of it. War Savings certificates are intended for everybody. They are within the reach of all. The owner of a Liberty bond is in no way exempt from the duty of joining in this movement. It is the duty of every man, woman, and child of 100,000,000 people to practice economy and thrift to the end that America may help bring the war to a successful conclusion and to safeguard our national stability and integrity after the war. The patriotic response of Greater New York to the War Savings campaign will be additional evidence to Germany that every citizen of this great city is solidly back of the Government in this as in other of its war undertakings. I know that those who are called to participate actively in the campaign will respond promptly, glad of this additional opportunity to be of service. I am proud to be identified with the work."

TROLLEYS TO HAUL FREIGHT

Chicago Interurban Lines Plan to Compete with Steam Roads.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Representatives of a score of electric interurban lines decided, at a meeting here today, to form through lines to relieve the freight congestion in the Chicago district and to enter into competition with the steam roads. For the first time there are to be through cars on electric roads and they will begin by establishing fast freight service, both carload and less than carload, between Chicago and Rockford, Milwaukee, South Bend, and Indianapolis.

The meeting was called by F. W. Shappert, Traffic Agent of the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee. A committee was appointed to establish through lines and work out plans of co-operation between the electric lines and shippers.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Latest advices from Argentina say that the harvesting of the new wheat crop there is now general in the north and preliminary yields are excellent. Harvesting has also commenced in the central districts, while in the South the weather is wet and cool and unfavorable. Exports from that country for the week were estimated at 740,000 bushels, compared with 323,000 the previous week, and it was said that clearances are increasing as a result of more satisfactory labor conditions. The movement of domestic wheat showed a slight increase over Wednesday, but the total is still comparatively small.

CORN.

The corn market was easier early under liquidation on the part of timid longs owing in part to further reports that the Government will facilitate the movement. On the decline, however, there was renewed buying, which caused a good rally, and final figures were ¼c to ⅝c net higher. Advices from Chicago stated that the local representative of the Food Administration there has requested the Chicago Board of Trade to curtail speculation in futures and, if possible, separate the operations regarded as purely speculative from those considered legitimate hedging. The Chicago Board expressed a willingness to co-operate with the Administration's wishes if the proposition can be worked out. The average trader, however, considers such a plan entirely unfeasible, as speculative operations are considered absolutely necessary if hedging trades are to be indulged in. The local cash market was entirely nominal with offerings withdrawn.

OATS.

Exporters again entered the market for oats, and, as offers from the country were very small, the market, after a slight early decline, gained strength and closed with net gains of ⅝c to 1c. The full extent of the export business was not disclosed in detail, but it was estimated that the sales would probably amount to about 1,000,000 bushels. The local cash market was firmer; standard quoted at 76½@77c; No. 2 white, 77¼c; No. 3 white, 76@76½c; No. 4 white, 75¼@76c; fancy clipped white, 76½@78¼c; ordinary clipped white, 75¼@77½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

A decline of 5 to 10 points in the hog market, as well as nervousness over the question of Government supervision and an early decline in grain, caused considerable selling of provisions early and prices were lower. When corn rallied, however, a better demand developed, and final quotations were firm, with only moderate net changes. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 30,000; estimated for Friday, 22,000; Kansas City received 7,000, and Omaha 4,200 hogs.

SUGAR.

There were no changes in raw sugar prices, nor was there any fresh business reported. New crop Cubas were said to be offering, but no prices were mentioned, and buyers here were inclined to hold off and wait the announcement from the Food Administration as to what prices would be fixed for the Cuban crop. Prices were unchanged at 5⅝c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.90c for centrifugal and 6.02c for molasses. In refined the situation will be relieved partially by the distribution of the recently acquired sugars, which will be distributed shortly through the Refiners' Committee, but no change was reported in prices, which remained at 8.35c for fine granulated.

COTTONSEED OIL.

While operations in the cottonseed oil market are of extremely small proportions, total sales amounting to only 500 barrels, prices were steadier, closing with net gains of 10 to 30 points. Offers were small, and the November position showed the greatest gain, despite the fact that there were further tenders of 1,000 barrels on contract, bringing the total so far delivered up to 16,400 barrels.

COFFEE.

There was a further advance in the coffee market yesterday. The buying seemed to be of very much the same character as that recently noted, including a demand from foreign sources, as well as covering and a little buying for local trade account. After selling up to 7.25 for March and 7.55 for July, or about 8 to 16 points net higher on the general list, the market met scattered realizing, and reacted a few points, closing at a net gain of 4 to 8 points. BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,074 packages. The demand for fine and fancy grades of fresh creamery is absorbing the supply closely, and the market is ruling firmer, but without further change. Fine firsts are sharing in the firmness, and there is a steady market for other useful grades. Where the quality is very poor trade drags. More doing in storaging creamery and prices about ¼c higher. Renovated slow. Ladles quiet and barely steady. Packing stock unchanged. EGGS.—6,004 cases. Fancy high-grade eggs very scarce and hardly enough to supply present current trade requirements, and market firm and slightly higher. No improvement in lower grades of fresh. Refrigerators irregular. Advices of lower market in Chicago yesterday unsettled the position somewhat and little buying support on 'Change. There was fair trade from store, however, and still some sales up to Wednesday's top quotations. To the Holders of

Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Company

Pursuant to the provisions of a decree of foreclosure and sale dated October 10, 1917, entered in an action caused to be instituted by the undersigned Committee in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, to foreclose the Purchase Money Mortgage securing the issue of bonds above described, and in compliance with an order entered in said action, dated November 10, 1917, there has been paid to the Committee by the Central Trust Company of New York, the Trustee of said Purchase Money Mortgage, the sum of $200 on account of the principal and interest of each bond deposited with the Committee.

The properties covered by the decree are advertised to be sold on December 18 and December 19 next and at such sales the Committee will take such action as in its discretion best meets the interests of the holders of the bonds it represents.

The Committee has concluded therefore under the circumstances to make a partial distribution at this time of the moneys received by it and will accordingly pay to the holders of the above described Certificates of Deposit the sum of $170 on account of each bond represented by said Certificates, retaining the balance for the purposes of and subject to the provisions of the Deposit Agreement of January 15, 1915.

Cancellation of the obligation of the holders of such Certificates of Deposit in respect of such advances will be stamped on the Certificates.

Anglo American Oil Company Limited

PRELIMINARY AGREEMENT.

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Company held in London on the 21st of November, 1917, a resolution was passed increasing the Capital of the Company by £1,000,000, by the creation of 1,000,000 new shares of £1 each. The new shares will be offered to the holders of the Company's share warrants and registered members resident in the United States of America and other allied and neutral countries outside the United Kingdom, in the proportion of one new share for every two shares held by them in the present issued capital, at the price of $7.50. The subscription list will open on the 16th of January and close on the 28th of February next.

Scrip certificates will be issued to holders of the Company's share warrants if they so desire, to enable them to sell their rights instead of taking up their proportion of the new capital. Applications will be received in New York for these scrip certificates between January 16th and February 14th next. Further particulars with the conditions of the new issue will be announced shortly.

Inasmuch as the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury object to the issue of new capital in the United Kingdom during the war, a scheme has been adopted whereby the ratable proportion of the new capital is reserved for subscription to the holders of share warrants resident in the United Kingdom at the price of £1-11-6 and the issue to them in the meantime of scrip certificates.

SUES FOR B. R. T. BONUS.

Corporation Counsel Contends That Service Board Exceeded Powers.

Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to have set aside a determination made in 1913 by Alfred Craven, then Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission, that the New York Municipal Railway Company, a subsidiary of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, was entitled to a credit of $1,990,800 under a contract made March 19 of that year between the city and the New York Municipal Railways for the operation and construction of new subways.

The contract in question recognized that the defendant corporation would require funds for its contribution of $13,500,000 on the cost of building the subways, and that there should be deducted from the contribution debt a sum for discount and expenses, not exceeding 3 per cent., and that the railroad company should be allowed the actual interest paid on the money borrowed. The railroad company issued $40,000,000 of 5 per cent. notes on a 6 per cent. basis, and received from the underwriters $37,409,200. The company asked an allowance not only for the interest carried by the notes, but the actual interest paid for the use of the money. Chief Engineer Carven's determination was that the railroad company should have for its share of construction and equipment not only the 3 per cent. which the city contends is the limit to be awarded for debt discount and expenses, but $1,900,800 additional, which the city insists in the suit just filed was really a bonus paid to the bankers for underwriting the notes.

The complaint contends that the Public Service Commission had no right to make this allowance, because it was a mere subterfuge which permitted the company to pay almost $2,000,000 less than it had agreed to pay toward the construction of the subway. Corporation Counsel Hardy stated that the suit would not only require a judicial interpretation of Contract 4, but was likely to have an effect on other contracts in which alleged bonuses are involved.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Bronx Borough property was the feature of what little speculative activity there was in the realty market yesterday. In the West Farms section Frederick Brown resold the five-story modern apartment house, at 966 Hoe Avenue, on a plot 37 by 107, at the southeast corner of Aldus Street, to the Phillips Estate, for investment. The property is fully tenanted and has been held at $60,000. In exchange, the estate gave the residence at 70 Eighth Avenue, northwest corner of Union Street, Brooklyn, valued at $50,000. The transaction was negotiated by the Cross & Brown Company.

Another deal in the same section concerned the four-story apartment house at 1182 West Farms Road, on a triangular plot fronting 125 feet on West Farms Road and 146 feet on Longfellow Avenue, with a southerly line of 110 feet. This property was sold by Henry A. Luber to Louis E. Kleban, who, according to report, has resold it to David Zipkin. This is the fourth time that the ownership has changed since last March.

Clausen-Flanagan Estate Sells East Side Loft.

The Clausen-Flanagan Estate sold to a client of Henry Brady and William H. Archibald, 306 to 310 East Forty-seventh Street, a six-story loft building on a plot 75 by 100, located near Second Avenue. The new owner will make extensive alterations and occupy the structure about March, 1918.

Private Dwelling Deals.

Pease & Elliman sold 28 East Fifty-second Street, southeast corner of Madison Avenue, a five-story modern American basement house, for Henry G. Trevor to an investor. The property was held at $200,000, and was sold for a figure very close to this sum.

Ennis & Sinnot are the purchasers of the private dwelling at 411 Convent Avenue, reported sold by Moore, Schutte & Co.

William J. Farrell purchased from Louisa Bardousch 142 West Eleventh Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 22.6 by 108, located between Sixth and Seventh Avenues. Foley & Co. negotiated the sale.

Brooklyn.

Newmann Leavy sold for Charles Smith the house at 1,350 Fifty-fourth Street, on a plot 75 by 100.

I. Salsberg sold for the Realty Associates to D. Horn the one-family brick house 1,140 Fifty-fourth Street, on a lot 20 by 100.

Queens Borough Sales.

Bishop Charles E. McDonnell has transferred to the Roman Catholic Church of St. Pius, at Jamaica, the church holdings on the south corner of Humboldt Boulevard and Wyckoff Avenue. The plot is 150 by 125, including the church and rectory.

The First Hebrew School of Astoria has purchased the property on the south corner of Flushing Avenue and Eighth Avenue, Long Island City, from the Joseph Geiser Association.

A. Thorpe of Troy, N. Y., has purchased the property, 100 by 114, on the southeast corner of Jasmine Street and Burling Avenue, Flushing, from E. M. Miles.

Long Island.

A syndicate, headed by Joseph L. Paul, has purchased the building and grounds of Castles by the Sea, located at Long Beach. The deal involves an amount close to a half million dollars. The new owners have plans under way for the erection of a hotel to cost about $1,000,000.

Jesse J. Ricks recently purchased the estate of Cushing Adams, located at Plandome, Long Island, together with a considerable tract of land immediately adjoining. The total purchase consists of more than five acres, improved with a colonial house. The brokers were L'Eluse, Washburn & Co., in conjunction with Baker-Crowell, Inc., and the price reported was $75,000.

Commercial Leases.

The Rutland & Whiting Company has closed a five-year lease on the George W. Bond property, located at 172 Cherry Street, to the Murphy Trucking Company. This property is a six-story and basement building of heavy construction, and was erected by Mr. Bond about ten years ago for stable purposes. It will be converted into a warehouse by the lessee.

Porter & Co. leased for Emma A. Searle to the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company the store at 1,072 Third Avenue.

The Cross & Brown Company has leased the store at 1,800 Broadway to the Stanley A. Martin Motors Company.

White-Goodman leased the store at 36 West Twenty-second Street to Henry J. Abrahams.

Harris & Co. leased to the Joffe Drug Company the store 1,406 Third Avenue, on the southwest corner of Eightieth Street, for a term of years.

A meeting was held last evening under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, in cooperation with the civic and business men's associations of the Third Ward, at the Good Citizenship League Building, Sanford Avenue and Union Street, Flushing, to urge immediate action by the officials of the city on the proposed lease of the Long Island Railroad tracks; also to give the benefits of rapid transit facilities of the dual subway system to all sections of the Third Ward, including such communities as Flushing, College Point, Whitestone, Bayside, Douglaston, and Little Neck.

HOT AIR

"Camouflage"

Don't go in Business,
Facts are what tell.

The fact is—The Supreme Court
Has decreed the sale of 234 lots
Located on BROADWAY, at a great future business center
With a subway station in front of them

And they are going to be sold next Tuesday
Without restriction or protection
If we have to give them away.

These are the facts!
"Know-it-alls" may sneer,
But those not quite so smart
Who have faith in the truth and future
Will come down to the sale
And pick up a few lots
At a small percentage of their value.
Then with the rise in real estate,
Which after the depression is bound to come,
They can sneer at the people
Who "knew-it-all."

One thing is certain—
It is the optimists who have "made-good"
In New York Real Estate

And not the people who "knew-it-all."

Examine the 234 Lots
To be sold at auction by a decree of the Supreme Court (Moller v. Godwin et al.)
belonging to the Estate of Jos. Godwin on BROADWAY, 230th St., 231st St. and Kingsbridge Ave.

For whatever they will bring without reservation or protection,

Tuesday, November 27, 1917, at 12 o'clock
At 14 Vesey Street.

Education Notes.

The following names have been placed, as of Oct. 26, upon the eligible list of men holding licenses as teacher of shopwork in elementary schools: Leon A. Chagnon, John Bryan, Harry L. Olmstead.

At the last meeting of the New York City Teachers' Association a plan was broached and discussed with much interest to have schools individually subscribe to the next Liberty Loan by means of small subscriptions from teachers, pupils, and their friends and to devote the interest of the bonds secured by each school to school charity funds and other outlays unavoidably incident to the administration of a school with hundreds or thousands of children, which are not and cannot be included in the school budget and which are becoming an increasingly heavy drain on the dwindling purses of the teachers.

The Professional Elementary Teachers' Association is working against the proposed plan for a longer day in the elementary schools. It says that the reply from the Regents was exactly what every one with a knowledge of the question expected. It points out how one Principal has met the requirements of the new law. He has added recreation time to his school day from 8:40 to 9 A. M., 12:50 to 1 P. M., and ten minutes lengthened recess period, which gives forty minutes additional time each day, thus carrying out the new law without making the children or teachers stay in school longer than before. It says that in one school the Principal allowed the distribution of slips to be signed, and out of 2,500 pupils 2,200 signed against the longer day. It urges Principals to act in the matter before the next meeting of the Board of Education.

A conference of national service work in community and recreation centres under the Board of Education will be held in the board room at the Board of Education Hall on Nov. 27 at 4:30 P. M.

ASKS VOICE FOR BELGIUM.

La Fontaine Says Country Should Have Part in Allied Conference.

Henri La Fontaine, a Belgian Senator, recipient of the Nobel Prize and Professor of International Law at the University of Brussels, made a plea yesterday for the representation and consideration of small nations in the allied conference in Paris next week.

"Only the big powers, such as Russia, Great Britain, France, and the United States will be represented," he said. "No one of the smaller States which have vital interests at stake will have a part. Despite the fact that Belgium is the fifth nation in economic importance and commercially the biggest nation per capita, it will not be represented. This is a dangerous condition to have smaller nations so discriminated against, and I have asked my Government to protest against its no-representation.

"Equality of States is a doctrine of great importance. You here in America should defend that principle of equality, because it lies at the basis of your Government, for instance, in State representation of Senators."

MORE THAN 10,000 IN NEW STATE GUARD

Sherrill Announces Completion of Organization to Take Place of Units Now Federalized.

PLANS FOR MOBILIZATION

Will Be Quickly Gathered at Rail and Water Routes in Emergency —5,000 of Home Defense League.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 22.—Announcement was made tonight by Adjt. Gen. Sherrill of the completion of the organization of the New York Guard, which succeeds the State National Guard now in the Federal service. The total strength of the organization is more than the required 10,000. The Home Defense units of the State contributed more than 5,000 men. These are highly praised by the Adjutant General for their patriotism and co-operation.

The Adjutant General also announced a number of appointments, including Colonel F. De Forest Kemp of Troy, formerly in command of the Second Regiment, to be Brigadier General of the Third Brigade; Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer of New York to continue in command of the First Brigade, with headquarters in the Seventy-first Armory, New York City, and Brig. Gen. Louis L. Babcock of Buffalo, to continue in command of the Second Brigade, with headquarters in Buffalo.

The plan outlined by Adjt. Gen. Sherrill in his official orders is most comprehensive, and makes ample provision for the safeguarding of the State for any emergency that may arise out of the war. The reorganization was consummated with the idea of grouping units and commanders, so that all can be mobilized quickly along rail and water routes, and at the same time adequately guard the State, said a statement by the Adjutant General.

The units making up the 1st, or Greater New York, Brigade are: 1st Battalion, Signal Corps, Major James C. Fox, commanding; 22d Regiment Engineers, Colonel Harry N. Treadwell; Squadron A, Cavalry, Major L. G. Reed; Squadron C, Cavalry, Major Cornelius S. De Bevoise; 1st Field Artillery, Major Prentice Strong; 2d Field Artillery, Major Henry H. Royce; 8th Coast Artillery Corps, Major Sylvanus G. Teets; 9th Coast Artillery Corps, Colonel John R. Delafield; 13th Coast Artillery Corps, Major Clarence W. Smith; 7th Regiment Infantry, Colonel De Witt C. Falls; 12th Regiment Infantry, Colonel Thomas Denny; 14th Regiment Infantry, Colonel Frederick W. Baldwin; 15th Battalion Infantry, Major Vertner W. Tand; 23d Regiment Infantry, Colonel James Robb; 46th Regiment Infantry, Colonel Henry C. Barthman; 69th Regiment Infantry, Colonel John J. Phelan; 71st Regiment Infantry, Colonel James H. Wells.

The 2d Brigade units are: 3d Regiment Infantry, Colonel Howard K. Brown, headquarters Syracuse; 4th Regiment Infantry, Colonel E. E. Powell, headquarters Binghamton; 74th Regiment Infantry, Colonel Newton F. Turgeon, headquarters Buffalo; 3d Field Artillery, Major Henry W. Brendel, headquarters Buffalo; Squadron B, Cavalry, Major William C. Barry, headquarters Rochester.

The composition of the 3d Brigade is: 1st Regiment Infantry, Colonel John Rose, headquarters Newburg; 2d Regiment Infantry, Colonel William P. Dauchy, headquarters Troy; 5th Battalion Infantry, Major Walter H. Cluett, headquarters Saranac Lake; 10th Regiment Infantry, Colonel Charles E. Walsh, headquarters Albany; Squadron D, Cavalry, Major Maurice S. Damon, headquarters Albany.

In addition to the foregoing, the 1st, 3d, and 4th Field Hospitals and 3d Ambulance Company will be attached to the 1st Brigade; the 1st, 2d, and 4th Ambulance Companies, located respectively at Binghamton, Rochester, and Syracuse, will be attached to the 2d Brigade, and the 2d Field Hospital of Albany will be part of the 3d Brigade.

DRAWS UP STAMP TAX RULES

Untermyer Aiding Roper in Administering Tariffs on Exchange Sales.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Regulations to govern the administration of war stamp taxes on bonds, notes, exchange sales, and other documents by the Internal Revenue Bureau, were drawn today under the supervision of Samuel Untermyer, acting as adviser to Commissioner Roper, and will be announced about the middle of next week. The stamp taxes go into effect one week from Saturday, Dec. 1.

Mr. Untermyer conferred today with the Committee of Representatives of Stock, Grain, Produce and Cotton Exchanges which was called to Washington by Commissioner Roper to cooperate in framing the regulations, and a number of modifications suggested by the Exchange men to simplify the administration and reduce the number of transactions subject to tax will be considered by the Commissioner before the rules are finally approved.

One of the most difficult questions under consideration is the taxation on future dealings. Exchange men insist that transactions made to carry out terms of previous agreements in future dealings should not be taxed, while the Internal Revenue Bureau is said to hold that both transactions are taxable. Similar questions have arisen for produce exchanges, commission men urging that only sales resulting in actual deliveries of goods be taxed.

GUN COURSE AT PRINCETON.

Naval Officer Will Give Instruction in Ordnance Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 22.—A course in naval ordnance and gunnery is to be offered at Princeton for those students who are planning to take examinations for commissions in the navy. President Hibben has just been informed that a naval officer will be detailed here to conduct the course. It will probably be open to those men who have been studying navigation all Fall.

During the Christmas vacation the students in navigation will take a trip to Key West during which they will get practical instruction. It is said that a man who passes the Princeton course in navigation can easily pass an examination for a pilot's license.

A report made public at the university today shows that 2,103 of the graduates and undergraduates are now in some branch of the nation's service. Of this number 970 men, or over 45 per cent., are in the army, while 364 are enrolled in the medical ambulance corps. The navy has 250 Princeton men in it, while 146 are in the aviation corps.

BOGUS CANVASSER AT WORK.

Solicits Subscriptions for Mid-Week Pictorial—Police Looking for Him.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received complaints from many parts of the country saying that persons had subscribed to The Mid-Week Pictorial at the solicitation of one C. Bibbs and had not received the publication. They said that they had paid 48 cents for a year's subscription to the magazine. THE TIMES has no such agent as C. Bibbs and there is no such subscription price as 48 cents for The Mid-Week Pictorial. The subscription price is $5 a year.

There have come to THE TIMES a number of receipts signed by "C. Bibbs," acknowledging receipt of 48 cents for a "full" subscription to The Mid-Week Pictorial. At the bottom of the receipt the "subscriber" is advised to wait forty days before making complaint if the magazine is not received. Some of the receipts bear the heading "The New York Publishing Company" and others "The Chicago Promotion Company." In neither case is a street address given. There is no such concern in this city as "The New York Publishing Company."

The complaints show that Bibbs has operated in the last four months in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and other Western States, and in the last few weeks in Albany, Troy, Buffalo, and other New York cities.

The police of several cities, including New York, have been asked by THE TIMES to arrest C. Bibbs.

EXPLOSION BLOCKS TRAFFIC

An explosion of gas in a sewer under Forty-second Street near the East River yesterday afternoon tore up several yards of street, smashed the windows in houses for blocks around, stopped traffic on the surface car lines from Second Avenue to the East River and also in the Steinway tunnel to Long Island City, and injured one woman so badly that she was taken to a hospital.

The explosion occurred just as the homeward-bound crowds were thronging the streets. Two cars were in the tunnel in Forty-second Street between First and Second Avenues when there was a thunderous roar. The cars rocked on their tracks as paving stones and débris flew through the air. Windows were broken in both cars, and in one Rose Snittow of 254 West Twenty-fifth Street was thrown to the floor and her knee-cap broken. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The paving was torn up between the car tracks at Forty-second Street and Second Avenue, and for several hours the Forty-second Street crosstown line was diverted to another route. The explosion also broke the roof of the Steinway tunnel so that traffic was suspended till a wrecking crew cleared away the débris.

DENIES IMPUGNING LORD.

Magistrate Did Not Call Police Official a "Traffic Ignoramus."

Magistrate Frederick B. House, who presides in the Traffic Court, denied yesterday that he either directly or indirectly referred to Second Deputy Police Commissioner Frank A. Lord, head of the Traffic Squad, as a "traffic ignoramus" at the Motor Truck Club of America dinner last Wednesday night.

"In a speech about the city's traffic situation I said that we ought to have specialists in all our public departments, and that in some cases we had not had specialists in the traffic department," said Magistrate House. "But I didn't mention Mr. Lord's name. Indeed, Mr. Lord has co-operated with me admirably in the work of the Traffic Court."

Mr. Lord said yesterday that he had tried to enforce the motor vehicle law against owners and drivers of motor trucks as well as he could.

"In attempting to enforce the motor vehicle act, I would like to have the approval of all classes, but the person to be most considered is the pedestrian, and, with that in view, I have issued my instructions. Magistrate House told me on the telephone that he was incorrectly quoted, and that he would write a disclaimer of the article."

FLIES 2,000 MILES, RAIDS CONSTANTINOPLE

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Admiralty announces that a successful air attack in the vicinity of Constantinople has been carried out by a large British bombing airplane, which flew from England to a British base in the Mediterranean in a series of eight flights. The stopping places include Lyons and Rome, and the total distance covered was nearly 2,000 miles.

The machine was actually in the air thirty-one hours. This is believed to be a world's record for a cross-country journey and for the weight carried. During some parts of the flight strong winds and heavy rain storms were experienced, and there was one stretch of 200 miles over a mountainous country where it would be impossible for any machine to land.

CLOSING ON JERUSALEM.

Fighting in Judea Hills Continues Successfully, Gen. Maurice Says.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—General Maurice announced today that the operations in Palestine, near Jerusalem, were continuing with complete success.

The British troops were still six miles distant from Jerusalem, fighting in the hills of Judea, he said, and it would be unwise to make any anticipatory statement regarding the fall of the city.

"Better Letters" and the Collapsible Mandrel

A dictating machine without a cylinder is like a gun that is not loaded. There must be a cylinder on the machine all the time so that you may dictate without waiting. Before the invention of the Edison Collapsible Mandrel, it was dangerous to leave a cylinder on the machine. Cylinders stick on a hard mandrel and sometimes break. The Collapsible Mandrel—an exclusive Edison feature—overcomes this danger and adds to the convenience of the Laws Governing Commerce May Be Ignored Until Congress Can Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Owing to war conditions the railroad situation in the United States has assumed a phase that, in the opinion of those who are handling it both for the Government and the railroads, requires drastic treatment. The matter has become so serious that the railroad executives who have come to Washington in the hope of being able to help the Government in this time of need have placed the facts before the proper authorities and urged that remedies be applied at once. It is expected that within a few days President Wilson will take a personal hand with the object of gaining information that will enable him to put these remedies into operation.

What the remedial steps should be have been suggested by the railroad executives. They report a condition of railroad congestion that is likely to grow worse instead of better. Owing to the concentration in the eastern part of the country of most of the great plants engaged in making war material the railroads in eastern territory have more business than they can carry. As a result private enterprise has suffered, for the railroads are giving preference to everything that will be of use in helping the United States and its allies to win the war.

There has been a suggestion that the Government take over the operation of the railroads, and to this the carriers have replied with the statement that, if the Government will tell the railroads what to do, that the Government contemplates doing itself, the railroads will gladly take the same measures. The railroad executives have expressed a willingness to conform to the wishes of the Government in every way possible consistent with practicable management of the situation, and have advanced a number of proposals that will bring good results.

Would Abandon Passenger Traffic.

One of the most interesting suggestions comes from the Pennsylvania Railroad. This great company proposes that it abandon much of its through fast passenger traffic to the West and devote itself almost entirely to handling freight. The Pennsylvania is one of the big lines operating in the East that has been overwhelmed with business since the United States entered the war, and it feels that it cannot do justice to the demands of the Government unless it abandons a great part of its passenger business, especially such as duplicates the services of other roads.

The railroad executives are anxious also to have certain other railroads in the country curtail or practically abandon all except non-competitive passenger service, and devote themselves to the exclusive carrying of freight. One suggestion is that the Norfolk & Western Railroad be designated for coal-carrying only, which means that except on local branches where it has no competition in passenger and freight traffic, it would not carry any passengers and would decline to carry any freight except coal.

Another suggestion from the railroads which the Government is asked to consider is the designation of certain ports for the shipment of particular classes of war supplies so as to relieve congestion at other ports, such as New York, whose shipping capacity is greatly overtaxed. The railroads recommend that all foodstuffs intended for our allies and for our troops in France be routed to ports on the Gulf of Mexico and shipped thence. This would enormously relieve not merely the terminal conditions at New York and other Eastern ports, but would ease the freight congestion on railroads running to the Atlantic seaboard.

Suggests Common Use of Terminals.

The common use of terminals by all railroads is another suggestion. This and proposals that would permit pooling among the railroads may be contrary to interstate commerce laws. It is asserted, however, that the President has authority under the war priority statute to issue the necessary orders to enable the railroads to take such steps as are necessary to stop the present detriment to the successful prosecution of the war through the almost hopeless tangle of freight congestion.

This condition will continue, it is asserted, unless the Government steps in

Proposals of the Railways to Meet Congestion in Moving War Freight

Here are the proposals made by leading railway executives to the Government for the relief of the increasingly serious transportation situation:

Abandonment of competing passenger service.

More manufacturing of munitions away from congested Eastern territory.

Permission by Government for common use of terminals, and for general pooling of rolling stock and equipment.

Force of Government mandate back of regulations of Railroads' War Board.

CONSIDER EMBARGO ON NON-ESSENTIALS

Fuel for the Manufacture of Eleven Commodities Likely to be Curtailed.

PLAN TO HELP RAILROADS

Pleasure Vehicles, Brewery Products, Candy, and Glassware on the List.

As a measure to conserve the available fuel supply and to help the railroads in the solution of the problem of handling a business greater than they can carry, the Fuel Administrator in Washington and the Priority Board are considering a proposal to curtail the use of coal and coke in the manufacture of eleven important commodities. They are: Pleasure vehicles, brewery products, candy, toys, table glassware, pottery, athletic goods, jewelry, silverware, window glass, and electric signs and electric sign lighting. A week ago it was announced that the Railroads' War Board had recommended to the Government authorities a list of 525 "non-essential" commodities which might be subjected to more or less strict embargoes to aid in the transportation problem. It may be stated that the eleven commodities mentioned are high up in the list of 525 prepared by the War Board.

The proposals of the Railroads' War Board for the embargoes on "non-essential" commodities, the enforcement of which would be upon the Priority Board, and the proposals to curtail the supply of fuel for certain "non-essential" businesses work hand in hand. In other words, if the manufactured products of these businesses may not be shipped, there will not be the same use for fuel, and conversely, if the fuel cannot be obtained, there will not be the same need for transportation of the finished product.

The proposal to force the curtailment of the manufacture and shipment of pleasure vehicles came as no surprise to railroad men. It is pointed out that such a step was long ago taken in England and France. Indeed, in England now one may not use a gallon of gasoline for propulsion of pleasure vehicles, a condition which has led to the growing use of coal gas. While the curtailment of coal and coke for the manufacture of automobiles, of course, means conservation of fuel supply and less work for the railroads, both in hauling fuel and finished product, there is another factor which is considered of prime importance, and that is that reduction in the business of automobile factories would mean the release of thousands of skilled mechanics, men who are badly needed in war industries. In fact, the railroads would not be at all averse to having a greater available supply of machinists who could be employed. Some railroad managers go so far as to say that, no matter how high the Government authorities might make rates, or no matter how many millions the Government might be ready to lend the railroads, their problems will not be solved until they can get more cars and more locomotives because there are not men available to build them. The release of tens of thousands of machinists now making pleasure automobiles would mean that a large number of them would be available for railroad rolling stock construction work, for the lack of which the roads are sadly hampered. In addition, there is the growing task of supplying railroad materials and rolling stock for France and other allies.

The proposal to curtail fuel for breweries brings to the surface the situation in England at the beginning of the war, when the supply of beer was curtailed and the quality lessened by the use of smaller amounts of grain. This brought forth many protests from the English workingman, who claimed as an inalienable right his pints of good beer. The use of beer among American workmen is not so widespread as it is in England. However, the protest against the prohibition of the manufacture of beer and light wines brought on the memorable fight in Washington last Spring, which resulted in the prohibition of the manufacture of spirits, but not of beer.

The business of electric signs and electric sign lighting has, of course, already been materially curtailed by the orders of the Fuel Administrator inforcing a smaller use of such signs. Silverware and jewelry fall first among

TROOPS GO ABROAD ON SCHEDULE TIME

Secretary Baker Says Overseas Force Is Up to Quota Called For by Army Program.

DECLINES TO TELL NUMBER

More Liberal Policy in Designating Units Possible—Two Men Die from Illness.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Arrival of American troops in France has kept pace with the expectation of the War Department, Secretary Baker said tonight in the first statement he ever authorized in connection with the progress being made in increasing General Pershing's forces.

Mr. Baker declined, however, to state the number of troops forwarded or to indicate whether he anticipated delay from this time. Movement of the forces, he said, depended on two elements, the training and equipment of the men and the availability of ships.

"As fast as they are ready, ships and men will be combined," the Secretary said. "As many American troops are now overseas as we expected in the beginning to have overseas at this time."

Mr. Baker indicated that an official statement of the number of American troops in France was not to be expected at any time during the war. He caused an inquiry to be made of the military censor, Major Gen. McIntyre, however, which may result in more liberal regulations as to publication of the designations of regiments, brigades, or companies which are engaged in action on the front from time to time. If there was no sound military reason for suppressing that information, Mr. Baker said, he desired to give it out.

The Secretary's attention was called to the fact that the British official statements recently have named at least by geographical designation the troops used in various offensives. Apparently a new policy in this regard has been adopted in London, and the War Department may do likewise.

Two more men of the American force in France have died from natural causes, General Pershing today notified the War Department. They were:

Private James H. Hinchey, Medical Department, attached infantry, died Nov. 18 of spinal meningitis; emergency address, W. J. Maddeu, Bristol, Conn.

Sergeant Humphrey L. Evatt, Medical Emnsted Reserve Corps, died Nov. 20 of pneumonia; father, R. S. Evatt, New Kensington, Penn.

RAIN CHECKS OUR GUNFIRE.

But Pershing's Men Had a Brisk Time retaliating On Foe.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 23, (Associated Press.)—Drizzling rains have again turned the American sector into a sea of sticky mud. Low visibility has caused the artillery activity to subside to normal.

Previous to today the German artillery firing had been most active along the American sector. Shells in more than normal number fell in the rear areas.

In reprisal for the shelling of the town in which the American headquarters is situated, during which a shell fell on an American regimental headquarters, American guns sent an unusual number of shells into the corresponding town behind the German lines the next day.

Patrolling operations continue, with nightly excursions to the vicinity of the German wire defences, but the Americans have failed to encounter any Germans, and no further casualties have been reported.

The officers who have served their turn in the trenches with the battalions already relieved have held a meeting with the commander of the first contingent and discussed their experiences. All agreed that actual training in the trenches under fire was the ideal method of acquainting officers and soldiers with fighting methods.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—Professor Jan Kucharzevski, the Polish Premier, according to an interview in the Frankfurter Zeitung, favors the speedy formation of a Polish national army, and declares that an attempt to create a government or army outside of Poland would be rejected absolutely by him and the Regency Council. He is quoted as saying:

"I can state that the Polish Constitution will be based on true democracy, namely, general, equal, direct, and secret franchise."

Britain Seeks to Reward With Decorations U-Boat Work of Our Officers and Sailors

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—"Through the British Ambassador to the United States and the Department of State," said Secretary Daniels, "the British Admiralty has advised the Navy Department of its desire to recommend British decorations for certain officers and men of two United States destroyers on duty in European waters for their services in encounters with enemy submarines.

"The Secretary of the Navy has replied through the Secretary of State that under the laws of this country persons belonging to the military forces of the United States are not permitted to receive crosses, medals, decorations or other gifts which might be tendered by foreign Governments.

"The British commander in chief proposed to make the following recommendations:

"Distinguished Service Order:

"Lieut. Commander George F. Neal, U. S. N.

"Distinguished Service Cross:

"Lieutenant Frank Loftin, U. S. N.

"Ensign Henry N. Fallon, U. S. N.

"Distinguished Service Medal:

"Chief Machinist's Mate R. G. McNaughton, U. S. N.

"In the case of one destroyer the Admiralty advises that the vessel was convoying a merchantman when the periscope of a submarine was sighted at a distance of about 500 yards. The destroyer immediately increased speed and headed toward the submarine, which submerged, but reappeared shortly afterward, traveling in the opposite direction. The U-boat next passed close on the starboard side of the destroyer, which released a depth charge, probably causing serious damage, if not destruction, to the submarine.

"Praising the excellent organization, preparedness and discipline on board the destroyer, as well as the quick decision of the officer of the watch, the British Commander in Chief proposed to recommend Lieut. Commander Blakely, the commanding officer, for appointment to the Distinguished Service Order, and Ensign Henry N. Fallon for award of the Distinguished Service Cross.

"The other destroyer was one of a number escorting troopships and was cruising in station in formation when the wave of a periscope was sighted about 1,800 yards off the port bow by the Quartermaster of the watch on duty. He reported to the officer of the watch, who immediately sounded general quarters. The executive officer of the destroyer was the first officer to reach the bridge, being closely followed by the commanding officer.

"The executive officer rang for full speed ahead on reaching the bridge and altered the destroyer's course to head for the periscope. The commanding officer then took command of the ship and manoeuvred her so as to gain a favorable position for dropping a depth charge, directing the executive officer to drop the charge when he deemed it proper to do so. The charge was dropped, it is estimated, when the destroyer was about twenty-five yards directly ahead of the periscope and in the direction of the submarine's advance. After the explosion of the charge débris was seen to rise to the surface, accompanied by large bubbles and discoloration of the water.

"For their services in this engagement the British Commander in Chief made the following recommendations:

"Lieut. Commander Neal, for the Distinguished Service Order, because it was considered that the efficient way the attack was launched was due to his prompt and decisive action and the vigilant lookout maintained on the destroyer.

"Lieutenant Loftin, for the Distinguished Service Cross, for the way he handled the situation in a prompt and decisive manner after arriving on the bridge.

"Quartermaster First Class Justice and Chief Machinist's Mate McNaughton for the Distinguished Service Medal."

RECALL MURPHY TO TAME HYLAN

COLER ALARMS THE BRAVES

Brooklyn Man Said to be Leading Candidate for Police Head, with D. I. McKay Second.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, returned from French Lick Springs last night, a week earlier than he was expected. He came unheralded. It was admitted by Mr. Murphy's friends that he had cut his vacation short, but no reason was given for this departure from established custom. Hours before his train arrived, however, a report was current in Tammany circles to the effect that the "Chief" had been sent for.

According to this report, and to put it in the phrase of an organization man who took an active part in the campaign of Mayor-elect John F. Hylan, "the Judge has been talking mighty queer of late." From the character of his talk it would appear that the Mayor-elect has developed an alarming streak of independence, and that the Tammany faithful, who, in these days, are keeping a watchful eye on prospective jobs, do not quite know what to make of it.

Mayor-elect Hylan's "queer talk" has not been in conversation with Tammany men. They have been very little in evidence at Hylan headquarters except at one of the recurring meetings of the new Board of Estimate, at which Judge Hylan presides, and then the only spokesmen for Tammany in attendance have been Sheriff "Al" Smith and President Frank L. Dowling of the Aldermen. Talks of the Mayor-elect with men not closely affiliated with the Manhattan or Brooklyn organization who have sought him out on patriotic errands, it is said, have drifted back to the Tammany camp and caused the alarm.

According to reports that have reached the Tammany men, Mayor-elect Hylan in the introductory stage of his talks with office seekers invariably pays his respects to Mayor Mitchel and his administration in even stronger language than he used in his speeches to the voters in the campaign. There is no objection to this in Tammany circles, nor has this part of the Hylan conversations given rise to any panicky feeling among Mr. Murphy's faithful followers.

But after the visitors have reached the real business that occasioned their call on Judge Hylan, and intimated in some instances that they probably could have the indorsement of Leader Murphy or of John H. McCooey, the Democratic boss of Kings, as the case might be, the Mayor-elect, according to the alarming reports that have reached Tammany ears, in many instances has told them brusquely that, gilt edged as such indorsements may be regarded by persons who did not know his real frame of mind, applicants for places under his administration might get along as well without as with them.

"Get it out of your head that I am Murphy's man or McCooey's man," the Judge is said to have told not one, but several of his recent callers. "I was elected by the people, and recognize no responsibility except to the people and my own conscience."

Tammany men who heard of this came to the conclusion that it was about time for the "Chief" to return. Mayor-elect Hylan, when told at his headquarters, 50 East Fifty-second Street, about an Red Tape Not Allowed to Impede American Mission's Task in London.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The members of the American mission have left London regretfully, but with a sense of satisfaction at the progress made and with deep appreciation of the spirit in which their English collaborators had received them. Hospitality had been expected, but the Americans were pleasantly disappointed at the way in which the British "took hold" with them, for rumors had reached America of official London's insistence on red tape.

Everybody, from the King and the Premier to the office boys, appeared to have speeded up for the occasion, and from talking with members of the mission I have gained the impression that the needs and resources as between England and America were now understood by both sides with a thoroughness impossible without close, sympathetic personal touch. Nowhere was self-satisfaction and superiority met with, but everywhere a disposition was shown to play the game fairly.

Colonel House's knowledge of English conditions and characteristics and his skill as an organizer and harmonizer contributed greatly to the success. When I saw the members of the mission at work separately and as a team I recalled McGraw and his three-time Baltimore pennant winners twenty years ago. All the members are full of ginger, while Captain House sits on the bench smiling.

The importance of this get-together work on details must not be underestimated. It is the underpinning for a large policy of co-operation and will make the unity of control toward which the Allies are working a practical possibility.

Record-Breaking Run to Paris.

The trip from London to Paris was pleasant and a record breaker for speed in war times. From station to station was little more than nine hours, and the run over the French railroad was made at high speed and with smoothness to show the Americans how well the line was maintained in wartime, despite the tremendous traffic carried for the British Army.

The Channel was smooth and the crossing was greatly enjoyed, Colonel House going to the bridge and the rest of the party staying on deck.

The British Navy people were much in evidence at Dover, and all spoke enthusiastically of America's service in protecting shipping against the submarines. They expressed amazement at the quickness with which our forces had jumped into the game and the eagerness with which they are keeping it up.

While none of the members of the mission would think of talking for publication, I know that their visit has deeply impressed them with England's spirit of sacrifice. They are surprised and gratified at the earnestness and will go home with many texts for sermons to America.

Wealthy Women Work as Hostlers.

One striking case, showing the lengths to which England is carrying war service, is a certain remount station, where ladies of wealth and position are doing the work of hostlers. Each lady takes

LONDON, Nov. 23.—According to advices received in Amsterdam, General von Ludendorff, First Quartermaster General of the German Armies, has started for the eastern front in connection with the Russian offer of a truce. He is said to be accompanied by a numerous staff.

Ludendorff is the lieutenant, strategist, and Fidus Achates of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, and is regarded as the brains of the German military organization. With Hindenburg and the Crown Prince he hurried to Berlin in July and labored in vain with the Reichstag leaders to repudiate the "peace without annexations" resolution which had been adopted by the Chief Committee on the 7th.

The Tideningen of Stockholm says that a Russian diplomat left that capital yesterday for Petrograd with orders to hand to the Russian Revolutionary Government proposals for peace by the Central Powers.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—Replying to a question regarding the peace offer of the Russian Bolsheviki, Dr. Alexander Wekerle, the Hungarian Premier, in the Unterhaus, said:

"The press report of the offer has not yet been confirmed. We must, in any case, ascertain definitely whether those with whom we should have to negotiate represent power of a permanent character. Apart from this consideration, our action will naturally be guided by our own readiness for peace."

Bolsheviki's Hand Forced by Masses Who Demand Execution of Promises

Trotzky Tells Soviet the Allies Are Hostile to Peace Proposals and Central Powers Interested Only in Weakening of Russia's Power —All Governments Compelled to Heed New Petrograd Cabinet.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 22, (Delayed.)—The orders of Vladimir Lenine, head of the Bolsheviki Government, to General Dukhonin, Commander in Chief, to conclude an immediate armistice with the enemy and open peace negotiations and the note sent by Foreign Secretary Trotzky to the Allied Ambassadors informing them of the establishment of a new government and describing the peace decree as an official proposal for an armistice on all fronts were dictated by the impatience of the masses who demand the immediate execution of the Bolsheviki promises.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Soviet yesterday Trotzky made a statement on the international situation. He said that only gradually had the ruling classes of Europe begun to realize that the peace decree was not a mere party proclamation, but a business document issued by the new official government of Russia.

The allied Governments regarded the step with the greatest hostility. The enemy powers were only interested in the change in Russia from the point of view of the enfeeblement of Rusala as a military power.

So long as the state of civil war continued, he went on, both the workers and bourgeoisie of western Europe were skeptical as to the vitality of the new Government, but now that the power of the Soviets was established in both capitals and in the greater part of Russia even "the most hardened diplomats" were compelled to enter into business relations with the new Government.

The greatest hostility was displayed by England, which had most to gain in the war and least to lose. The reply of France was the formation of the bellicose Clémenceau Government. Italy might adopt a milder attitude. She was in the war, not for ideal objects, but to promote in her own financial interest the complete exhaustion of Europe. She now saw that her end was nearly attained, and might be expected to prove more willing than the other powers to consider the Russian proposals seriously.

"The war will be crushed," Trotzky continued, "and the European Governments are now concerned not to carry out their original plans, but to get out of their adventure with the least possible loss to themselves."

Trotzky declared he now had in his possession the secret treaties, and he was impartial enough to state that the German workers would find that their rulers had been no less cynical than the Allies. He went on: "All these treaties we shall throw onto the rubbish heap.

If the pressure on the Governments of Western Europe is insufficient our policy increases the pressure, and this is the only guarantee that a peace concluded by us will be not a shameful peace, but a peace securing fraternal relations between Russia and all the peoples of Europe."

Meantime the political situation of the Bolsheviki is growing daily more difficult. Even the Maximalist Social Revolutionaries who have co-operated with them hitherto refuse to join their Government unless the régime of terror be abandoned.

At a conference held yesterday at army headquarters between the Army Committee and representatives of the Social Revolutionary Party and other Socialists, the latter insisted on the formation of a coalition Socialist government, with Tchernoff as Premier. Today marks a distinct development in the political situation as compared with the impasse of the last few days.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Daily Mail, in its issue this morning, prints a dispatch from Petrograd which says the "violent, demagogical speech" by Leon Trotsky, to the Workmen's Council, was made possible only by the level of intelligence of the Foreign Minister's audience.

Trotzky gave indications of how the Allies and the enemies had received the peace proposal note. He dealt blows all around, his only bright hope being Italy, whom he considered out of action, owing to her loss of artillery.

England, who was the ringleader of the whole movement, merely continued the war for what she could get, according to the speaker. France's reply was in the form of Clemenceau's middle class, imperialistic Cabinet, but the French people were looking for only a reasonable excuse to emerge from the war with some claim of victory, in order to justify their entrance into the war.

The United States only entered the war because she was forced into it by her capitalists, Trotzky declared, and as she did not desire territory, she probably would regard with favor a Russian Government composed of workmen and soldiers.

Germany rejoiced in the further weakening of the Russian Army's strength, but Philipp Scheidemann, President of the Social Democratic Party, had resolved to declare open opposition to the German Government and to force it to declare peace.

The correspondent refers to the possibility of an attempt to establish a rival Government in Russia, but he is convinced that it is almost impossible for any Government to hold the country together.

TROTZKY TELLS ALLIES OF ARMISTICE OFFER

PETROGRAD, Thursday, Nov. 22.—The note of Leon Trotzky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, to the Allied Embassies conveying the announcement of the proposal for an armistice reached the embassies last night. The text follows:

I herewith have the honor to inform you, Mr. Ambassador, that the All-Russian Congress of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates organized on Oct. 26 a new government in the form of a Council of National Commissioners. The head of this Government is Vladimir Ilich Lenine. The direction of the foreign policy has been intrusted to me, in the capacity of National Commissioner for Foreign Affairs.

Drawing attention to the text of the offer of an armistice and a democratic peace on the basis of no annexations or indemnities and the self-determination of nations, approved by the All-Russian Congress of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, I have the honor to beg you to regard the above document as a formal offer of an immediate armistice on all fronts and the immediate opening of peace negotiations—an offer with which the authoritative Government of the Russian republic has addressed itself simultaneously to all the belligerent peoples and their Governments.

Accept my assurance, Mr. Ambassador, of the profound respect of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Government for the people of France, which cannot help aiming at peace, as well as all the rest of the nations exhausted and made bloodless by this unexampled slaughter. L. TROTZKY, National Commissioner for Foreign Affairs.

MOEUVRES FIGHTING SEVERE

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 23, (Associated Press.)—The British and the German forces last night rested on their arms along most of the new battlefront after three days of determined conflict. Hard local fighting continued at some points, notably in the vicinity of Crevecoeur, Moeuvres, and Bourlon Wood, but for the most part the British were engaged in consolidation work and the Germans gave little trouble in the way of counter-attacks.

The British have renewed their attack on Fontaine Notre Dame, just west of Cambrai. Here the Germans yesterday delivered a heavy counterattack and compelled the British to withdraw from the village to a position a little south of it. The fighting at Fontaine yesterday was at close quarters and particularly bitter.

The Germans in their counterthrust succeeded in pushing the British slightly back from the place after a desperate conflict, but this morning the British still held the ground between Fontaine and south of Fontaine, and were near the fringes of the Bourlon Wood.

The German attacks today was delivered against not only the British positions at Fontains, but also both sides of the southern part of the Bourlon Wood, which dominates Gamgral and much of the surrounding territory.

The enemy last night began the concentration of troops and artillery between Cambrai and the Bourlon Wood, and gave every indication that they purposed to battle desperately for the recovery of their lost territory.

There was little artillery firing this morning in the Bourlon Wood sector, but the Germans on the elevation in the copse were maintaining a stiff machine gun barrage against the assaulting troops, and fighting at close quarters was reported to be proceeding.

The British early today drove back the enemy at an elevation just west of Moeuvres, known as Tadpole Copse. This hill dominates a large section of the Canal du Nord, running east of Moeuvres, and to a large extent the village itself, which is still in German hands.

Irish infantry along with tanks took part in this assault in a region where sanguinary fighting already had occurred during the last three days. They stormed the ground in the vicinity of Tadpole Copse early in the morning and forced the Germans to withdraw after a sharp engagement.

The Irish troops have been active in this whole region. Ulster men were engaged desperately in the advance in the neighborhood of Havrincourt Tuesday, the tanks not operating there.

The Ulsterites charged the entanglements and bombed their way through them under concentrated rifle and machine gun fire. Having driven a wedge in the entanglements, the Ulsterites charged the machine gun positions up the slopes and gained the crest. Routed with bayonets after fierce fights, the Germans abandoned the machine guns, and many wer eshot down as they fled.

The Irishmen fought on until evening, when they were south of Moeuvres. They renewed the advance Wednesday morning and stormed half way through Moeuvres, driving out the Germans. Thursday morning they were holding fast to Moeuvres. In the afternoon the Germans counterattacked suddenly, and after fierce fights in the street the Irish were obliged to withdraw to the southern outskirts. This morning the Irish advanced again, and were working their way around to the north of Moeuvres.

This morning the Germans in the eastern part of Crevecoeur village were maintaining an intense machine gunfire against the British in its western environs.

Rain fell last night and the dense, low-hanging clouds were today letting down a steady drizzle, which made aerial observations difficult. Notwithstanding this handicap both British and German airmen were operating at exceedingly low altitudes along the battle line. The enemy's airplanes were especially active in the region of Bourlon Wood.

No announcement has been made of the amount of material captured by the British, but great quantities of war stores are strewn over the battle area, and among the booty are many guns.

The total of prisoners so far counted still remains between 8,000 and 9,000. It is unofficially estimated that several score of guns have been captured. A great number of machine guns are also in British hands.

The cavalry dash by which Anneux was taken Tuesday is said to be a record for one day, having been an advance of 7,000 yards. The Germans counterattacked at Anneux Tuesday night with troops just arrived from Russia, and the British withdrew after a hard engagement. On Wednesday morning the British recaptured Anneux.

Operations "Proceeding Satisfactorily"

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Renewed British operations west of Cambrai are "proceeding satisfactorily," according to the War Office statement tonight, which gives no details.

Slight advances of the British line southeast of Ypres are reported.

The night bulletin reads:

The day report says:

Hostile raids attempted in the night south of Neuve-Chapelle, northwest of St. Quentin, and northwest of Pontruet were repulsed, leaving prisoners in our hands.

There is no change on our front southwest of Cambrai.

King George has promoted Lieut. Gen. Byng to the rank of General in recognition of his distinguished service in the field in the Cambrai operations.

Tells of Repulses to British.

BERLIN, Nov. 23, (via London.)—A new battle started in the direction of Moeuvres, in the Cambrai area, said the army headquarters' bulletin today. In yesterday's fighting, it is stated, the Germans forced the British from the village of Fontaine and from La Folie Wood, while British attacks against Rumilly, Banteaux, and Vendhuile collapsed with heavy losses. The bulletin reads:

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders the artillery duel became more intense in the afternoon.

On the battlefield southwest of Cambrai, Moeuvres, and Fontaine were the foci of yesterday's fighting. The enemy many times made fruitless attacks on Moeuvres and positions adjoining to the west. Slight initial successes were retrieved by our counterthrusts.

On both sides of Fontaine and out of Fontaine the British launched strong forces against our lines. Desperate hand-to-hand fighting developed, in which the enemy was defeated. Our infantry, eager to attack, threw back the enemy and took by storm the village of Fontaine. La Folie Wood was cleared of the enemy.

British attacks directed against Ramilly, Banteaux, and Vendhuile collapsed with heavy losses. Lower Silesian and Posen troops took a prominent part in the successful result of yesterday's fighting.

Since early morning fresh fighting as been in progress on the southern edge of Moeuvres.

The supplementary report issued this evening says:

It is reported from the battlefront that a renewed attempt of the English to break through southwest of Cambrai was shattered with most severe losses for the enemy.

ALL ENGLAND CELEBRATES.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Bells rang in London and the Provinces today, for the first time since the war began, in commemoration of British victories. The sun broke through the heavy mist which enveloped London and its environs early in the day, almost at the same time that the chimes of St. Paul's and the bells of other churches began to peal forth a chorus in celebration of the achievements of the British forces in France and Palestine.

It was the first sunshine of many days, and seemed to reflect in the faces of thousands of civilians and the soldiers and sailors in the streets their confidence that the clouds which have been overhanging Europe for more than three years were breaking for brighter days.

One of the features of the occasion was the ringing of the bells of Peterborough Cathedral, which had been silent for years.

In London, Liverpool, and other cities the flags of the Allies contributed impressively to the picture. The scenes in the streets and around the great Cathedrals were not demonstrative, but appeared more like those usual at Christmas. In front of St. Paul's, in whose eaves thousands of pigeons have found a home for many generations, great numbers of them were flying overhead, and, in many instances, alighting on the broad pavement, eating from the hands of persons in the crowd, and even perching on the shoulders of children.

NO CHANGE IN GERMAN PLANS.

British Gains Not to Influence Drive at Italy, Says Lokal-Anzeiger.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—The British drive on the Cambrai front will have no influence on the situation in Flanders or Italy, according to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin, which says:

"The British attempt to break through collapsed entirely in the face of the extraordinary bravery of our troops. It went no further than the initial success, an eruption into our position which must be without effect on the neighboring positions and which the enemy tried to extend in vain owing to the powerful thrusts of our reserves.

"The enemy will not succeed by this abortive attack in diverting our attention from Flanders, where he is certain to renew his efforts which now have become a necessity in order to rid himself of the U-boat bases, which are so dangerous to him. Moreover, the attacks near Cambrai and Craonne certainly will not exercise the slightest influence on the situation in Italy."

Captive Civilians Made Joyous as Their Masters Fled Before British Guns.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 23.—The first great surprise of the British attack across the Hindenburg lines is over and the free and open fighting when cavalry, tanks, and infantry rounded up the enemy in the French villages has now been followed by closer fighting of the old style, with attacks and counterattacks.

Ground is gained and ground is lost on both sides, while the enemy is making a strong stand with local forces and units hurriedly brought up in order to gani time for the arrival of stronger einforcements. He is massing men and guns in Cambrai and preparing to hold the lines of defense around that city if he is forced still furhter back from his present positions.

The battle has continued today and the troops and tanks have been engaged in heavy fighting around Bourlon Wood and at Fontaine Notre Dame, to the east, which was lost yesterday after sharp counterattacks upon the Seaforth Highlanders, who entered it on Wednesday night with the tanks.

Today the troops are attacking the village of Moeuvres, southwest of Fontaine Notre Dame, which was also taken and lost after a great advance of the Ulstermen on Wednesday morning. That attack of the Ulster battalions on the first two days of the battle was a hard and grim episode of the general action, and ground was gained only by the most persistent endeavors and courage.

These men, newly down from the battles of Flanders, where they had terrible and tragic fighting, were determined to go far in this new field, and their spirit was high.

They had no tanks to cut the wire in front of them as those machines were concentrated in large numbers on the right wing of the attack. The Ulstermen had the Hindenburg trenches before them, wide belts of wire, and on the other side the trenches the deep ditch of the Canal du Nord, a most formidable series of defences. They had to break down the wire in front of them by bomb explosions and under heavy machine-gun fire from the trenches and the farther side of the canal bank, where the Germans were concrete blockhouses and strong emplacements.

At first they broke their way through all obstacles in spite of being hung up by wire here and there and the harrassing fire of snipers, and they cleared the trenches of the men who were demoralized by the surprise and suddenness of the attack.

Later some of the Ulstermen came up against a high "spoil" bank or waste heap, sixty feet high from the canal bank, and defended from tunneled dugouts underneath it. About 8:30 in the morning they captured the spoil heap and a crowd of prisoners in the dugouts and then tried to get astride the Cambrai Road and to cross the canal.

A gallant little body of Belfast men, all from shipbuilding works on Queens Island, worked for hours under fire to build a bridge across and repair the destroyed causeway so that the infantry could pass. It was done before dusk, and the Ulstermen seized the way across the Cambrai Road, but could not cross the canal or get forward very far owing to the fierce machine-gun fire that swept down upon them from the east side of the canal, where the enemy was holding Moeuvres and Graincourt.

It was on Wednesday morning that the Inniskillins bombed their way into Moeuvres and fought their way into the centre of the village, where a barricade had been put up against them.

In the afternoon the enemy organized a counterattack from one of the locks on the Canal du Nord, but did not drive back the Ulstermen, and it was not until yesterday morning when the Irishmen were almost exhausted and the ammunition nearly spent after long hours of fighting that the enemy was able to drive a small wedge into the line.

By this time most of Moeuvres was in the Ulstermen's hands, but the enemy was able to get up strong bodies of grenadiers and riflemen, and before darkness came the Ulstermen withdrew to the southern edge of the village.

All this time the West Riding troops had been advancing and fighting steadily up to the Cambrai Road and over a depth of 7,000 yards of ground (a record advance in one day up to Graincourt.

Germans Rushed Up Cripples.

Thursday, Nov. 22.—After the British smash through the Hindenburg lines Tuesday morning and as soon as the German command could get news as to what had happened reinforcements were hurried up by omnibuses from the camps near Cambrai, but the Germans were so hard pressed that they cleared out a camp of cripples and convalescents at Beausevoir and hurled them into the fighting lines.

The men were too ill to fight, and now are too ill to stand. This morning one of them, who lay among the prisoners, was found to be in the last stages of consumption and had to be taken to an isolation hospital.

Among the other troops hurried up to stop the gap was at least one battalion of the First Guards' reserve, sent down from Lens.

There is no doubt that the enemy is now rushing up all available men to make a stand around Cambrai. The troops holding the woods and villages behind the Hindenburg line have fought hard and well, and have tried to beat the British back and hold them off by many counterattacks. They defended themselves stubbornly in Lateau Wood and at a place called Les Rues Vertes in the neighborhood of Masnières.

Marcoing was entered by English troops without great opposition, but there was severe fighting beyond that village and in the Nine Wood on the left, which was attacked at bayonet point and taken after heavy "scrapping," as the British call it, by some infantry which was in action for the first time.

A heavy counterattack developed from northeast of Masnières at about 11 o'clock of the first morning of the battle. The Germany infantry advanced in massed formation, shoulder to shoulder, as in the old days of 1914, and as I saw them at Falfemont Farm on the Somme, and they were mowed down by the British gunfire. An attack of the same kind was attempted after midday from the Marcoing side, but the men dropped into trenches on their way and never came out again.

Another attack, repeated yesterday, was made upon the village of Noyelles after its capture by English battalions, and one post held by the Lancashire Fusileers, changed hands seven times. The village itself changed hands three times, and there was fierce street fighting.

The place had to be gained and regained from house to house and from cellar to cellar, the enemy defending every wall by machine-gun and rifle fire and sniping the British from roofs and trees. The enemy was driven across the canal by the men of the Middlesex regiment and the Royal Fusileers.

There was very lively skirmishing about Crevecourt, and here a little body of Northumberland yeomanry came up against some German guns in action. They were about to charge when they saw that there was a belt of uncut wire between them and the enemy's battery. It was impossible to lead horses against that, so they dismounted, worked around the wire and captured the guns.

It was cavalry also, with the aid of tanks, which captured the village of Cantaing at 6 o'clock last evening with another bag of prisoners, whom I saw marching down the roads today.

Fury Among German Officers.

I wrote yesterday of the German officers who spoke with admiration of the British attack and praised the courage of the men and the strategy which had led to the victory. They are not all like that. Some of the younger officers are filled with fury, and show it by their words and gestures when they see such swarms of their own men marching by under the escort of a few mounted guards, and when they see the British cavalry riding through villages which until two days ago were behind their lines.

The most deeply angered man is a regimental commander who, with two of his battalion commanders, was taken prisoner in his headquarters and led back to one of the prisoners' camps. He looked very haughty and sullen on the road as he marched in his fur-lined overcoat. His language was sultry and loud, and his scowl so ferocious that our Tommies roared with laughter at the sight of him, and enjoyed his rage.

After all, it is an incredible blow to these men behind the Hindenburg line, who believed themselves impregnable and had no warning of their fate.

Civilians with whom I talked told me that the German officers had been much elated lately over the retreat of the Italians, and boasted of marching to Paris in the same way. Their men are not so buoyed up. All they want is to get the war over and done with. After each of their successes, said the Mayor of Masnierès, they show brief enthusiasm, and then relapse into despondency, which is their usual mood. They believed in the Summer that the war would be over by Christmas. "We shall all be home for Christmas," they said, but they cannot give any reason for this faith, and the most intelligent are the most hopeless.

The troops in the Bullecourt sector have taken the "great tunnel" of the Hindenburg line near Queant, and the movement of the British advance extends steadily northward.

There was heavy fighting today around Bourlon Wood, with steady artillery fire from the British guns. The cavalry and tanks and infantry are rounding up more of the enemy in his villages and rearguard posts.

Meanwhile, the enemy is bringing up his guns and new men, but whatever happens now a great blow has been struck, thousands of prisoners have been taken, and the heroic adventure of the tanks has shown that an attack can be made secretly and suddenly, so that strategy comes back to the western front.

BYNG'S GUNS GAVE JOY TO MASNIERES

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Thureday, Nov. 22.—In the break made in the Hindenburg line the British infantry, cavalry, and tanks are still active and there was heavy fighting this morning up near Bourlon Wood and the village of Fontaine Wood and the village of Fontaine Notre Dame to the east of it and not much more than two miles away from Cambrai.

This village was entered yesterday afternoon by British troops, who captured a number of prisoners and released over 100 civilians. These people were overjoyed when delivered from the enemy and to show their gratitude they set about making coffee for the officers and the crews of the tanks, surrounding the tanks and showing astonishment at these machines, of which they had heard only fantastic tales from the German soldiers.

This morning when I went up to the front I met the first crowd of liberated people, and felt, as all of us do, the emotion that came in March of this year when, after the German retreat east of Bapaume and Peronne, we met civilians who since the beginning of the war had been in the hands of the enemy and under his rule.

The people I saw today (gathered together in a ruined village, in the heart of all these new scenes of war, with the tide of cavalry streaming up the roads, with tanks crawling on the hillsides and guns firing across the open fields, and new batches of German prisoners tramping down under escort, haggard and dazed by the swift turn of fortune's wheel, which had flung them into British hands when they seemed so safe behind their great lines) were all from Masnières near Marcoing, where 450 of them had awaited the coming of the English in feverish excitement since they heard the approach of the advance guards.

They were pitiful groups of men, women, and children—pitiful because of their helplessness in this corner of war among the guns. Some of the women had babies with them in perambulators and wooden boxes on wheels, into which also they had tucked a few things from their abandoned homes. Some of them were young women neatly dressed but all plastered with mud after the tramp across the battlefields and woefully bedraggled. Some of the little girls had brought their dogs with them, and one child had a bird in a cage.

There were sturdy peasants among them and old folk with wrinkled faces and frightened eyes because of this strange adventure in their old age, and young men of military age who had not been taken away like most of their comrades for forced labor because their work was useful to the enemy in their own district. This was the case of a good looking young barber to whom I talked, who had shaved the German officers and men for three years in Masnières.

These people looked woebegone as they waited in the ruins for the English lorries to take them away to safety, but in their hearts there was great joy, as I found when I talked to them, because they were on the British side of the lines and out of reach of the enemy, whom they hate bitterly because of the discipline put upon them and their servitude, and most of all and all in all because he is the enemy of their country and the destroyer of their land and blood.

They told me that after the coming of the Germans in the early days of the war, when the Uhlans entered Masnières and fought with French and English cavalry at Crevecourt, where our cavalry was again fighting yesterday, they had no liberty and no property. The Germans requisitioned everything. They took their pigs and their poultry and their grain and their wine. If a peasant hid a hen he was heavily fined or put in prison; if he was discovered with a bottle of wine he was fined ten francs or put in prison.

Kept Alive by American Food.

In Masnières there were some fine houses like that of M. Millais, a manufacturer, full of good furniture and pictures. They were all stripped and left bare. The very floors were taken up. In all of the little houses there was search made for any bit of lead piping, for any bit of brass or metal.

The civil population were fed almost entirely by the American Relief Committee, and after the entry of America into the war, by the Spanish-Dutch Committee, which carried on the work. "Without that," they told me, "we should have starved."

The men were all put to work for the enemy in fields or in workshops and the women made to sweep roads, wash the dirty linen of the German soldiers and to clean out the rooms, which were filled and refilled with the vermin of the trenches. The commandants of the village were generally young lieutenants, very supercilious and very strict, but on the other hand not brutal or unjust. They were hard with the French people, as they were hard with their men.

The Mayor of Masnières, with whom I spoke today, said that there was no shadow of doubt that the German people are suffering severe privations from real hunger—so much that the officers often address the men on parade and in their lecture rooms and tell them that the soldiers must stand firm because they are suffering less than the people at home. Other men told me the same thing today.

Among the civilians was a German soldier in a field gray tunic under his civilian clothes, though a Frenchman of Lorraine, like another German soldier with him, who was an Alsatian. According to the story of the Lorrainer, he served in his own province during the greater part of the war and saw the extreme hunger of the people there. When he was sent to the western front he determined to escape, and saw his chance when the British broke the Hindenburg line and advanced upon Masnières. He hid himself among the civilians and disguised himself in civil clothes and stayed in a barn until the British entered the village.

Tanks Made Germans Flee.

The first news that came to these people of the change that was upon them was when they heard the firing of the British guns on Tuesday morning and later the sound of rifle shots and machine gun fire.

The German soldiers, about 340 of them, in Masnières, were thrown into a panic. Many of them lost their heads utterly and ran about like doomed men. But others went down to the bridgehead under orders of their officers and defended the machine-gun emplacements on the canal bank.

The civilians could see English soldiers on the other side of the canal firing with rifles and machine-guns, and then at about 11 o'clock in the morning they saw what seemed to them strange beasts crawling forward to the bridge. They were tanks, and they came forward very steadily, and the leading tank advanced on to the bridge.

As they did so the German soldiers broke and many of them fled, but it was not until five minutes before the English entered the village that the last two German machine-gunners left the bridgehead and retreated. For some time the German riflemen sniped from houses and barns, and some English field guns were still firing into Masnières.

The French civilians were very much frightened, and took refuge in their cellars, but they were buoyed up with a great hope that their liberation was at hand. Then they rushed out to greet their liberators, weeping with joy.

"Three years we lived in a nightmare," said the Mayor of Masnières this morning, "and now we seem to be in a dream too good to be true."

Hid in Own Cellar Three Years.

One man who has now come to the British side of the line is a man of thirty-eight or so, but with the look of one of sixty, and with a strange, waxen color like that of death. He has a strange history. For all these three years and more since the beginning of the war he lived in hiding in the cellar of his own house, where German officers were billeted. He was fed by his wife out of extra rations given to the baby born during the war. The house was searched once a week, according to rule, and both husband and wife would have been punished by death if the man had been discovered, but he was never found. By queer chance, the morning that the English came to Masnières was the day on which the house was to be searched again. The man, who is now free, has wept ever since his liberation from that dark cellar in the town.

FRENCH CHECK AISNE ATTACK.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Another German attempt to recapture ground taken by the French in their recent attack on the Aisne front was checked by the French fire, the War Office reports.

The statement reads:

Active artillery fighting continues in the sectors of Cerny and Juvincourt. In this region our fire checked an enemy attack against the position on our left, which we captured on Nov. 21.

Our patrols in operations near the Ailette brought back prisoners and inflicted losses on the enemy.

Northwest of Rheims and in the Champagne raids on our small posts were without result.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

The evening communication of the War Office reads:

Both artilleries were active in the region of Juvincourt and in upper Alsace in the sectors of Seppios and Largitzen.

Some attempts against our small posts toward Bemmericourt, to the northwest of Rheims and to the east of Maisons de Champagne, and also at the foot of the Côtes de Meuse, failed.

Two German airplanes were brought down on the 22d inst.

ONE TANK STORMED AND TOOK CANTAING

A Dozen Occupied Marcoing and Completely Organized the Place Against the Foe.

GREAT DEEDS ELSEWHERE

Extensive Use of the Machines Saved Countless Lives and Much Ammunition.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Thursday, Nov. 22, (by The Associated Press.)—The impression that existed in the minds of many soldiers that the tanks were freaks of little value as instruments of war is being wiped out on account of the achievements of the army of these mighty engines which on Tuesday morning broke through the main Hindenburg line and carried the war miles into enemy territory.

The work which the tanks did on that first day and have been doing since is one of the most striking features of the war. It cannot be said they are alone responsible for the victory won by the British, for infantry, artillery, and cavalry all played their part. Nevertheless, the tanks drove the entering wedge without which this triumph probably would have been impossible.

In a few hours they tore to shreds lines of barbed wire, the demolition of which by a concentration of artillery would have required many days. Furthermore, their employment made possible the arrangement of the secret attack, which would have been out of the question had the artillery been brought into play.

The tanks have demonstrated fully their power in saving the lives of men and conserving ammunition. The casualties among the infantry that followed the tanks into action were exceedingly light. The correspondent has heard that two battalions had only one casualty each and that another suffered the loss of but three men. This is almost unprecedented in an attack of such magnitude.

The casualties among the crews of the tanks also were light on the opening day, which is the only one for which reports have been received. It is impossible to state how many tanks were in action, but there were several hundred, and out of all the men who went forward in them it appears that less than twenty were killed and less than one hundred wounded. Many of the casualties were due to the fact that men left the tanks to perform some work in the open, where they came under the fire of snipers.

The performance of the tanks was the more remarkable because there was only a short time to prepare for their use. Some of the tanks were veterans, but many had never been in an engagement before, and the crews lacked actual fighting experience. Moreover, it was necessary to train the infantry to co-operate with them. All this was accomplished in a very few weeks.

In addition, a great amount of work was done to get the tanks into position and bring forward their fuel. Many hundred tons of petrol were brought up secretly and stored pending the attack. It was done so quietly that few soldiers in the territory involved knew what was proceeding.

Tanks have been engaged in bitter fighting since they entered enemy territory. They crushed their way through barbed wire easily, tearing gaps for the infantry, and it was not until they had made a considerable advance that strong resistance was encountered. The stiffest fighting was at Lateau Wood, south of Masnières. There the tanks engaged several German field and heavy guns and won the day against them. One tank deliberately charged a 5.9-inch gun and cleaned out its crew with its machine guns.

Cantaing fell before one tank which never had seen action until that time. It charged into the village, making it untenable by the vigorous action of its guns.

Twelve tanks led the way into Marcoing. Their crews previously had studied maps and taken assigned posts, and the tanks went about the business methodically, each one taking the position designated. These twelve movable forts completely organized the place.

At Ribécourt the tanks arrived just as the Germans were sitting down to breakfast. The crews of the tanks got their morning meal from food prepared for the enemy.

These are not the only places that tanks assisted in taking. They have been swarming over the whole area annexed by the British, and when the full story of their exploits is told it will make remarkable history.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—No statemnet has been made officially or unofficially, concerning the number of machines constituting the "Grand Fleet" of tanks employed in Tuesday's advance, but the number was apparently greater than in any previous action. Casualties were inevitable in an operation of such a scale, but the dispatches agree that they are not large.

One writer says that "a number" were knocked out by direct hits from German big guns. Another says that some were overturned by shellfire and others were bogged. One or two buried their noses in the soft earth or turned over in trying to climb steep banks. One fell into a canal, but it is evident that the great majority plunged ahead unhindered.

The other night, at a tea given by Ambassador Page, the Americans were struck by the fact that women like Mrs. Astor and Lady Randolph Churchill walked home in the darkness because they were unable to get taxis and, of course, were not allowed and did not wish to keep private cars.

"We have got to quit using or making pleasure cars," said a member of the mission. "There are a lot of things we are still doing in America that are not permissible if we are to keep step with the Allies in prosecuting the war. Every form of non-war activity should be ruthlessly suppressed; candy and jewelry manufacture, for instance.

"When we talk of more shipbuilding, we meet the cry that we can't get men. They could be gotten if all unnecessary work were stopped and every drop of energy were centralized in the direction of the war. It is absolutely fatuous to think about other things until the war is won.

"Measured by the English and French, Americans are still leading normal and even luxurious lives, still thinking about private success, giving only part of their attention to the war. We have got to put everything into the pot to win, and the sooner we reach the point of full self-abnegation the better for our success and the less we will suffer in giving ourselves and all we have that humanity may be saved, or, from a narrower viewpoint, that America may survive and Americans live, do business and hold property."

The members of the mission leave England with the conviction that the submarine can only be curbed and finally overcome by continuing and intensifying America's effort in that direction. They seem to gauge the Premier's opinion on this subject by his announcement of the proposed tightening of rationing rather than by his House of Commons perorations.

This morning business plans are being arranged, at the Hotel Crillon, where the members are stopping and the sessions of the mission will be held. Colonel House is consulting Ambassador Sharp, who has the arrangements in hand.

House Begins Paris Conferences.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The American mission, headed by Colonel E. M. House, which arrived here last night, has been welcomed by the French public men and the newspapers as visible evidence of the earnestness of President Wilson and the American people with regard to the war and the urgent need for co-ordination and unity. The feeling among the French Ministers is that American counsel, initiative, and aid are especially needed now by the Allies, when they are more than usually receptive to fresh ideas and impulses.

Colonel House, for himself and in behalf of his associates, said, concerning the purpose of his mission:

"We bring to the French Republic a message of encouragement from the American millions who are mobilizing in factories, farms, and upon military fields.

"There is a grim determination among us to wage war until the world is free from the shadow and spectre of the sword. We had in mind no material gain. What we want is an assurance of permanent peace, and the tramp of our soldiers upon the soil of France will be heard ever increasingly until it is achieved.

"It is here that our brave men are come to mingle our blood with yours. It is here that all come to gather inspiration from your heroic deeds.

"Our President and our country see the issue clearly and France may confidently count on every resource which may be at our command."

Colonel House spent an hour today with Premier Clemenceau and another hour with General Pershing and General Bliss.

All the members of the mission attended the meeting with the American Ambassador, William G. Sharp, and arranged a program for their work before the Inter-Allied Conference meets next Thursday. Consultations with French officials will be in progress daily until that time, following the same lines as those held with representatives of various departments of the British Government in London.

J. E. Willard, United States Ambassador to Spain, and Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium, also conferred with Colonel House.

President Poincaré will give a luncheon tomorrow in honor of Colonel House and the other members of the mission, Ambassador Sharp and the members of the embassy staff, will attend.

Colonel House brought the busy first day's program to an end with a short conference with Henry Franklin-Bouillon and Henri Bergson, member of the French Cabinet. French and American newspaper men have been invited to meet Colonel House and other members of the mission tomorrow.

A decree has been issued providing for the requisitioning from the wealthier classes of warm apparel for the army. Tenants of residences, the rental of which is 2,400 rubles or more yearly, are required to furnish one blanket and one article of clothing in good condition.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—A dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung from Vienna says reports received from Tarnopol are to the effect that Russian troops are preparing to evacuate the east Galician towns of Gmaymadoff and Skalat, near the Russian border. The dispatch adds that the advanced positions already have been voluntarily evacuated.

The German newspapers, as a rule, discuss the Bolsheviki peace proposal non-committally. The Berlin Post says that if a tangible movement for an armistice has materialized, the army command will be confronted with the necessity of making the most far-reaching decisions. The Lokal-Anzeiger remarks that if it proves true that the Russian army, in the name of an authorized government, has made an offer, it will be examined seriously by the German authorities, although an armistice could be agreed to only if acceptable as regards the entire military situation.

Satisfaction at the proposal is expressed by the Vossische Zeitung. It says, however, that the Russians must clearly realize that Germany's military position is not such as to compel her to concur in the armistice proposal, the acceptance of which depends entirely on technical conditions.

The Russians' proposal, however, doubtless will receive an examination in a benevolent spirit, it adds.

The Tageblatt says that Germany can merely submit the offer to conscientious and conciliatory examination, in which the entire military situation must be taken into consideration.

NO SEPARATE PEACE, TROTZKY DECLARES

Is Convinced Proletariat of All Belligerent Nations Will Support Bolsheviki Move.

PETROGRAD, Wednesday, Nov. 21.—In connection with the order to General Dukhonin, Commander in Chief of the Russian Army, to open negotiations for an armistice with the enemy commanders, The Associated Press today interviewed Leon Trotzky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister. Trotzky emphatically declared that the Workmen's and Soldiers' Government was against a separate peace with Germany. He voiced his conviction that Russia's initiative in offering peace would be supported by the proletariat of all countries, allied or belligerent, which would make impossible a continuation of the war even if the Governments did not accept the offer.

"What are the plans and intentions of your Government?" the correspondent inquired.

"The plans and intentions of the Government are outlined in the program of the Bolsheviki Party, to which the All-Russia Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates intrusted the formation of a workmen's and soldiers' government," the Foreign Minister answered.

"First, there will be the immediate publication of all secret treaties and the abolition of secret diplomacy.

"Second, an offer of an immediate armistice on all fronts for the conclusion of a democratic peace.

"Third, the transfer of all lands to the peasants.

"Fourth, the establishment of State control of industries through the medium of organized workmen and employes and the nationalization of the most important branches of industry.

"Fifth, the delivery of all authority to local Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates.

"Sixth, the convocation of a constituent assembly which will introduce its reforms through the medium of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and not through the old bureaucracy on an appointed date.

"The offer of an immediate peace already has been made. The decree transferring the land to the peasants has been issued. Power has been assumed by the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates in most of the important places.

"What will the Government do if Russia's allies refuse to enter into negotiations for peace?" the correspondent asked.

"If the allied Governments do not support the policy of a democratic peace," Trotzky replied, "the allied peoples will support us against their Governments. Our international policy is calculated, not for capitalistic diplomacy, but for the support of the working masses."

"Does the Government think a separate peace with Germany is possible in the existing circumstances?"

"We are against a separate peace with Germany—we are for a universal peace with the European nations."

"What will the Government do if Germany refuses to negotiate for peace—will it continue the war?" was the next question.

"We rely on the German Army and the working classes to make a continuation of the war impossible," Trotzky replied. "If, however, our frank and honest offers of peace should meet no response, we would declare a revolutionary war against German imperialism; we would mobilize all our forces, confiscate large food supplies, and prosecute the war as energetically as we did the revolution. But we have every ground to think that our offer of peace will make impossible a continuation of the war on all fronts."

"What is the country's attitude toward the governmental change?"

"All the bourgeoisie is against us. The greater part of the intellectuals is against us or hesitating, awaiting a final outcome. The working class is wholly with us. The army is with us. The peasants, with the exception of exploiters, are with us. The Workmen's and Soldiers' Government is a government of working men, soldiers and peasants against the capitalists and land owners."

"Is it true that the Government will publish the secret treaties?" was the final question.

"Yes," the Foreign Minister answered.

The correspondent was received in a room devoid of all ornament and containing only desks and chairs. Leon Trotzky was cheerful, but preoccupied in demeanor. When leaving the room, the correspondent was escorted to the outer door by a private secretary. An armed guard distrustfully followed the visitor out of the room.

ARMISTICE, SAYS CECIL, WOULD BE DISGRACE

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, in his weekly talk today with The Associated Press, spoke of the proclamation issued by Nikolai Lenine and his followers in Russia, urging an immediate armistice, saying:

"If it represents the real opinion of the Russian people, which I do not believe it does, it would be a direct breach of treaty obligations and Russia's alliance. Such an action, if approved and ratified by the Russian nation, would put them virtually outside the pale of civilized Europe.

"But I do not believe for a moment that the Russian people will approve or confirm this action. I do not want to indulge in any personal abuse, but if you will examine the Leninite proclamation carefully you will find it is a direct incitement by men who profess to be the Government to the soldiers to arrest their Generals and open all along the line peace negotiations across the trenches. If the object of the Leninites primarily had been to destroy the Russian army as a fighting force, it is difficult to see what other steps could have been taken by these gentlemen in Petrograd."

Asked whether the Allies were likely to recognize the present Russian Government, Lord Robert said he could not imagine such a step possible.

To the question whether Great Britain had undertaken any embargo on merchandise going to Russia, Lord Robert said he did not know that any formal embargo had been undertaken, but as far as he knew nothing was going to Russia at present.

Regarding the effect of the Russian situation on Rumania, Lord Robert said that a wholesale disorganization on the Russian front was bound to affect Rumania. He added a tribute to the splendid loyalty to the Allied cause which was being shown by the Rumanian Government and people.

ANOTHER BOLSHEVIK UKASE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 23.—The Bolshevik delegation at Tornea announces that the Petrograd Government has issued the following declaration:

"The October revolution of the workers and soldiers was started under the sign of universal freedom. The peasants have been liberated from the power of the landlords, while the right of the landlords to land has been suspended. Soldiers and sailors are liberated from subordination to autocrat Generals because now a General has to be elected. Workers are liberated from capitalistic arbitrariness because workers will control the workshops.

"Under the Czaristic régime the Russian nationalities were stirred up against each other. When after the February revolution the bourgeoisie won power this policy was followed by cowardly suspicion toward the Russian people—a policy of annoyance and provocation. This policy now will be succeeded by an open policy leading to full confidence between the Russian peoples.

"From these points of view the first Congress of Councils of Workers and Soldiers in June proclaimed the right to free self-determination of the Russian peoples. The second Congress of Councils in October confirmed this right yet more definitely. Carrying out the determination of the Congress of the Councils of the peoples the Commissaries [that is, the new Ministry] have decided to lay down the following principles as the foundation of its measures regarding nationalities in Russia:

"1. Freedom and self-determination for the peoples of Russia.

"2. This right of the Russian peoples to their free self-determination to be extended even as far as separation and the forming of independent States.

"3. Suspension of all nationalist and religious privileges and limitations.

"4. Free development to all national minorities and ethnographic groups inhabiting Russian territory.

"Concrete terms are to be drawn up immediately after the forming of a commission for national questions."

MARINE MINISTER RESIGNS.

Capt. Ivanoff Appointed as Admiral Verderevski's Successor.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Admiral Verderevski has resigned as Russian Minister of Marine, a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says. According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from the Russian capital, Captain Ivanoff, lately commander of the Baltic Cruiser Squadron, has been named as his successor.

Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevik Foreign Minister, says another Reuter dispatch, announces that the Russian secret diplomatic correspondence is in his possession and will be published immediately. It is reported that the Revolutionary Committee at Moscow has seized the branch State Bank there. It is said that 100,000,000 rubles recently was transferred there from Petrograd.

The All-Russian Congress of Peasants' Delegates is transferring its headquarters from Petrograd to Mohilev. The congress is reported to fear Maximalist intervention, and the transfer is for the purpose of enabling the soldiers at the front to participate in its meetings.

Another general strike has been declared in Finland, according to a Reuter dispatch dated at Helsingsfors Wednesday and sent by way of Uleaberg. It is blocking all civil functions, and was called for the object of compelling the substitution of the Diet dissolved in July, which had a Socialist majority, for the existing Diet, where the Socialists are in the minority. Minor fighting is reported in various parts of the country.

GERMANY CONSIDERS JERUSALEM LOST

Newspapers Preparing the Public for News of Holy City's Capture by British.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—The German newspapers are preparing the public for the loss of Jerusalem. The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says that to cling to places "which would bring us no military advantage would be tantamount to the useless sacrifice of numerous Turkish forces and our own troops, and would likewise involve serious losses."

After discussing the difficulty of reinforcing the defenders it says:

"Anyway, the abandonment of Jerusalem, which is within the bounds of possibility, certainly would be an extremely painful loss, in view of the city's great historical past, but no military change would be caused by such a course."

Lieut. Gen. von Ardenne, in the Tageblatt, attributes the Turkish retreat from Jaffa to the great range of the guns of the British fleet, and adds:

"Jerusalem is not equipped for defense. Therefore, it is not improbable that this advanced position will be abandoned by the Turks."

He insists that this will in nowise alter the military situation.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The British War Office tonight issued the following statement on military operations in Southern Arabia:

We attacked and captured a Turkish post at Jabir, fifteen miles north of Aden. Losses were inflicted on the enemy and his defenses were destroyed.

ITALIANS THWART ENCIRCLING MOVE

UNDER RAIN OF TEAR-SHELLS

GRAPPA ASSAULTS CHECKED

Fourth Army Retakes Lost Defenses, Although Berlin Reports Invaders Progressing.

ROME, Nov. 23.—A great encircling attack was attempted yesterday by the Austro-German forces against Monte Meletta, on the Asiago Plateau, but the Italians held all the positions, it was announced today by the War Office.

Throughout yesterday the enemy attacked the Italian positions between the Brenta and Piave Rivers. Several positions were lost more than once, the statement adds, but all were retaken.

Toward evening the last Italian counterattack definitely stopped the Austro-Germans.

On the Asiago Plateau the enemy, directing his forces from the north on to the Monte Tonderecar - Monte Badenecche front and from the west toward the front of Monte Castelgemberto-Caserta-Meletta d'Avanti, yesterday attempted an encircling movement against the point of vantage, the Meletta.

The action, which was preceded by a heavy bombardment of tear-producing shells, was made with extreme violence by large enemy forces which were continually renowed and were supported by intense artillery fire. Our forces of the First Army, offering the most effective resistance and making continuous counterattacks, succeeded in holding all positions firmly and repulsing the enemy with very severe losses, capturing eight officers and 101 men.

Between the Brenta and the Piave the enemy at dawn renewed his attacks with the most violent artillery fire, followed by an advance of dense waves of infantry. The struggle was most fierce and lasted throughout the day. Several positions were lost more than once and promptly retaken by our troops of the Fourth Army, who distinguished themselves by their aggressive spirit and bravery. Toward evening the last counterattack definitely stopped the enemy, for whom, in this sector also, the day's fighting resulted in heavy losses.

Invaders Gaining, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Nov. 23, (via London.)—The troops of the Central Allies are making progress in the fighting in the Italian mountains, according to this afternoon's statement from the War Office, which says:

In the mountains between the Brenta and the Piave there has been fighting which is proceeding favorably for us.

On the Lower Piave there is nothing new.

The official announcement issued by the War Office tonight says:

Nothing new is reported from Italy.

Furious Battle Between the Rivers.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 23, (Associated Press.)—The battle between the Piave and Brenta Rivers, in the hills leading to the Venetian plain, is reaching a climax with a fury of action exceeding anything that has thus far taken place on that front. Some positions, alternately won and lost in furious attacks, are again in the hands of the Italians, who made a magnificent charge up the slopes.

Up and down the slopes this fearful carnage is proceeding, and four attacks have been swept back over the Italian lines over heaps of enemy dead. Only at one point has the enemy succeeded in making headway with his overwhelming numbers, and here the Italians have given ground with the final issue still in doubt.

A description of this most decisive engagement has been given the correspondent by an eye-witness just returned from the battlefield. He is hardened to these scenes from recent experiences, but says that the bloodiness of the struggle now going on is beyond all precedent.

Against enemy reserves hurled in mass formation the Italians have interposed such heroic resistance that some regiments are reduced to 300 and 400 men. The position at one point was almost encircled, so that the enemy artillery fire enfiladed the Italian trench lines and batteries. It was this which required a falling back of about 500 yards until the decimated ranks could be reformed for the final charge.

The Basilicata Calabria and Alpine brigades suffered most in this conflict. Three battalions of Alpini were almost wiped out of existence.

But the enemy paid dearly for his first advance, and did not enjoy it long. German and Austrian dead were piled up in heaps. Trenches disappeared in the fury of the artillery action. The Italian lines over great stretches of ground were strewn thick with bodies of Germans and Austrians.

ALL HINGES ON GRAPPA STAND

Italian Defense Gives Allies Time to Bring Up Reinforcements.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Failure of the Austro-German attacking forces to make any real gain of territory during the last four days in the Italian campaign has afforded the British and French Governments time to send forward the guns and ammunition needed by the Italian Army.

The maintenance of the line along the lower Piave is dependent upon the ability of the defending forces to protect the mountain region along the Monte Grappa-Monte Tomba line against the desperate assaults that have been made there during the last four days without further penetration of the German flanking wedge. Should the Austro-German forces succeed in their effort to break through the mountain front it is conceded in Italian circles here that the Piave line will have to be abandoned, together with Venice, in favor of a new line along the Adige.

Semi-official advices reaching Washington today assert that Italy is pleased with the result of the conference just concluded at London between representatives of the British Government and members of the American mission headed by Colonel E. M. House.

"The results of the conference between the British Government officials and the members of the United States mission acting under instruction from President Wilson," said one of these dispatches, "have created a very favorable impression in Italy, since they leave no doubt as to the attitude of the United States with regard to the prosecution of the war in complete unity with all the Allies. Hope is expressed in Italy that the representatives of all the Entente nations will devise an effective system of employing all the resources of the Allies on the entire front stretching from the North Sea to the Adriatic.

"The Cardinal Vicar, who exercises the functions of Bishop of Rome, has appealed to the Catholics in his jurisdiction to work, at whatever sacrifice, for the safety and redemption of the motherland. 'In the danger which is now impending,' the Cardinal said, 'woe unto them who entertain selfish thoughts or are dominated by cowardice! We must open our eyes to the reality of the situation. We must deal with the facts with the most suitable means. We must remove every dissension, in order that Italy may rise from today's trial morally and materially greater and stronger.'

"An Italian officer relates in the Giornale d'Italia that during the enemy advance an enormous motor car bearing the German imperial eagle arrived near Galo, where an Italian automobile with a machine gun was stationed. A voice from the German car ordered the Italians to surrender. The Italians replied with their machine gun, killing the German driver and all the officers, among them a Colonel of the German Staff. Inside the automobile was found a large quantity of precious booty taken from the shops of Udine. Among the articles were three ladies' dresses.

"During the recent operations in Valle di Ledro there was captured, seriously wounded, the Sergeant Major who had captured Cesare Battisti. The prisoner, who had received a special decoration for this deed, is in a critical condition in one of the camp hospitals."

One of the first natives of "Italia Irredenta" to offer his services to the Italian Government at the beginning of the war was Cesare Battisti, who, born in Trent in 1866, was a member of the Austrian Parliament. He is known throughout Italy as the martyr-patriot of unredeemed Italy.

It was his information in regard to the transfer of between 200,000 and 300,000 Austrian troops from the Italian front to Galicia which caused Cadorna and Porro to change the entire strategy of the front between May 5 and 23, 1915—between the diplomatic break and the declaration of war.

Battisti was a great orator, and before starting for the front to take command of a detachment of Alpine scouts he delivered on May 17 an address from the Capitol in Rome. Austria set a price of 20,000 crowns on his head. In the battle of Monte Corno on July 20, 1916, he was badly wounded and made prisoner. Still in bandages and scarcely able to stand, he was brought to Trent, tried in an hour, and hanged in the courtyard of the Castello del Buon Consiglio. His only respite was waiting for the imperial hangman, Lang, to arrive from Vienna.

EXTOLS THE BRAVERY OF ITALIAN CAVALRY

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 22, (Delayed,) (Associated Press.)—The Count of Turin, Commander in Chief of the Italian Cavalry, which has so distinguished itself in the recent operations, was seen at cavalry headquarters today just before starting for the front, and through one of his staff officers The Associated Press correspondent obtained a written recital of the stirring exploits the cavalry performed during the recent eventful days. The document, which was issued by the authority of the Count of Turin, reads like an old-time chronicle of chivalry, yet it is only a plain statement of fact.

The Count is tall and slim and as straight as an arrow. He is alert in movement, as though a bundle of nerves. His sharply cut features are accentuated by a smooth-shaven face that suggests King Alfonso of Spain. Today he wore the uniform of a General of Cavalry, with a crown between the two stars on his sleeve.

The count was with his cavalry division throughout the six days and nights on the retreat westward from the Isonzo front when the third army was protected until it was reformed along the present Piave line, and the recital of events authorized by the Count gives some of the extraordinary experiences of the cavalry.

"The Italian cavalry," says the statement, "proved worthy of the high confidence the country reposed in it. No man hesitated, although in the saddle for long hours under the exhausting rain and exposed to the cold of the nights without shelter. Conscious of its mission as a corps of sacrifice, it pressed through the army moving to the rear and awaited the advance of the enemy masses.

"Two cavalry regiments awaited in the open the approach of the invaders. Both Colonels had their horses killed under them. Then the enemy army attempted an enveloping movement. Against this menace two squadrons of the Montferrato Cavalry were thrown and were steadily pressing the enemy back when an explosion of one of our ammunition dépôts that had been abandoned by us nearly destroyed the squadrons in their entirety. Men, horses, swords, bombs, and grenades flew skyward under the force of the explosion. It was only then that the remnant of this heroic band fell back."

Another cavalry brigade, the statement continues, received orders to hold a village at any cost. The first rush of the enemy was mowed down by machine gun fire, "but their losses were made up by fresh and increasing numbers of troops and an infinite supply of machine guns."

"The air," the statement goes on "resounded as with the sound of kettledrums, while the flying bullets sounded like swarms of hornets. Dismounting from his horse, one of our Generals led a regiment afoot in an assault with the bayonet. For a moment the enemy was turned back, but more enemy masses, thick as ants, returned. Their certainty of their prey made them as insistent as wolves on the prairie against an isolated horse.

"Officers, men, and horses were falling. The ammunition was spent, and no reinforcements were behind. Having held for many hours, this brigade felt its task accomplished, but it would not fall back and leave one man a prisoner. A Major, wounded and therefore not able to be transferred when the order came to abandon the village, shot himself dead before his troops after having saluted them."

A charge by the famous White Lancers, who were trained in the Count of Turin's Cavalry School, and of whom he is a former Colonel, receive special attention in the statement.

"A large patrol of the Novara Lancers," says the statement, "was enveloped and under a crossfire. The White Lancers wheeled and charged in the face of the machine guns. Charge followed charge, until the Colonel and all the commanders but one had fallen and the last horse was down. Thus fell the Lancers, wounded, dead, or inevitably prisoners, but all of them were conscious of having accomplished their entire duty with the proud dignity of true cavaliers."

D'ANNUNZIO TO THE ARMIES.

Poet Summons Them to Resistance at the Piave and a Glorious Advance

Special to The New York Times.

ROME, Nov. 22. (Delayed.)—Gabriele d'Annunzio has delivered a patriotic appeal to the army fighting on the Piave. He praises the troops for the great exploits which they have accomplished in conquering almost inaccessible mountains, mending old Roman roads and dislodging the enemy from the caverns where they were hidden, but exhorts them to forget all this, remembering only their dead who remain on the field and the living who are behind them.

"Have you heard," he says, "that the River Piave is the chief artery of our lives? It is deep in the heart of the country, and if it is cut, that heart will cease to beat. Each drop polluted by the enemy each of us is ready to redeem with the last drop of his blood. The light of a thousand victorious days isn't worth that of a single day of resistance.

"We are sure that suddenly, like budding leaves in Spring, new wings will appear from wounds not yet healed, and that Victory will fly swiftly down to greet our dead, who await her standing. She will lead us further than before, to conquests for future centuries. Long live Italy!"

ITALIANS SWAMPED FOES' BOATS IN PIAVE

SECOND EFFORT A SUCCESS

Austro-Germans Forced a Crossing, but Were Driven Back Toward the River.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY ON THE PIAVE, Nov. 22, (Delayed.)—In that great amphitheatre of hills whence the Piave flows to the plain, there is developing a drama whose issue is the success or failure of the present battle. It is here, where the spurs of Monte Tomba on the east overhang the river that the enemy's effort has concentrated itself upon the clear purpose to cross the Piave between the villages of Fener and Vidor, occupy Monte Tomba and so blast a road to the very heart of the plain of Venice.

It is here, too, that von Below's battering ram of mixed Prussian and Austrian divisions has been put into action. Three of the Prussian divisions have been identified, and he seems also to dispose of a portion of those special troops which broke the Italian line at Caporetto in the early morning of Oct. 24. The Prussians are apparently equal to the best troops which the enemy possesses, and the Italians who have been and still are fighting them bear witness to their extraordinary dash and efficiency. The enemy's artillery consist of large numbers of six-inch guns mounted on motor trucks, with which he has kept up an incessant bombardment ever since they arrived at their positions.

When Quero fell into the hands of the enemy who had descended the river from Feltre, the Italian line rested upon the mountain saddle between the Piave and the Brenta, whose salient heights are those of Tomba Pallone and Grappa, and reached the Piave at the village of Fener, under that spur of Tomba which is called Monte Fenera. An advance directly south would have involved the storming of Tomba frontally, which, supposing it to be possible, would require a long period for organization and preparation.

The speed and momentum of the enemy's advance were one of his strongest assets, and therefore on Saturday last he made his first attempt at crossing the river in this sector. For three days previously the Italians on the west bank at Cornuda, at Vidor Bridge, and along the banks had seen the distant roads on the other side crowded with the enemy—a whole army moving in plain sight against the background of Autumn hills and flowing down to threaten the river.

Such gunfire as only a month ago the Italians could have developed on the Isonzo would have shut the roads in a hundred places, but that is not possible now, and the great machine of death and destruction came down to its place. Ahead of it the big motor guns flung their fire curtain among the villages that so recently were new to war, and at about 8 o'clock in the evening of Saturday, as soon as it was definitely dark, came the first attempt to cross.

Von Below wasted no time in attempts to bridge the river. He had a flotilla of those large, high-nosed boats which are used on the rivers of the plain, and several companies occupying about forty of these craft came suddenly poling and rowing into the glare of the searchlights in an attempt to get across and gain a footing by mere swiftness and suddenness of manoeuvre.

The Piave at Fener has two channels separated by a long island of shingle, and the boats came shooting around the head of this island into a strange blaze of illumination—searchlights converging, rockets ascending and descending in showers of blinding white magnesium flame, and gun flashes flickering afar like wildfire. The Italian machine guns and those deadly Fiat machine pistols, which fire faster than any known weapon, started to life with a single rending roar. The boats, which had been rowed with desperate energy, and were crammed to the gunwales with men, stopped as though they had run aground, flogged to a standstill by the frenzy of fire. Some went drifting downstream, full of dead and dying Germans. Two were overturned, and from yet others there were seen men leaping overboard to take the chance of saving themselves by swimming. Others got back around the nose of the island, and reached the eastern bank again; but, save for the swimmers who surrendered and the wounded who came ashore lower down, not a man of them reached the Italian side.

Second Attempt Successful.

But another attack was already in preparation opposite the village of Fener itself, and already the German guns were shelling the ruins of the little place and the positions around it, and at 1 o'clock Sunday morning a large body of them managed to pass the water in the darkness and to secure a footing on the western bank. Supported by intense shellfire from their guns across the river they pushed on and occupied the village, while the Italians fell back with their machine guns.

The enemy's organization was as good as always. Hardly were his first men in the village when his pontoons were swinging down the river into position, and from above, on Monte Fenera, searchlights showed the methodical bustle of activity as the Germans and Austrians brought their forces forward for the next prompt step in the unending battle.

There was no rest. Before noon on Tuesday the big Prussians were thrusting at the slopes at Monte Fenera, and by night they were aloft on the steep sides of the river. Their fire was truly infernal at this time. They moved behind a walking wall of shells converging from the eastern roads, where their motor guns were massed in huge numbers.

Bayonets Forced the Enemy Back.

Yesterday morning an Italian counterattack was launched. It is the Italian Fourth Army which fights on this sector, and its chosen brigades, such as the Brigata and the Como, are as sound as every they were. They charged with the bayonet again and again, turning the fight into a hand-to-hand struggle at a dozen points. From the very start the enemy began to yield ground, and when night fell he had been thrown back for more than half the distance to the river. He tried more than once to return to the attack, but failed to achieve anything.

His pressure throughout the whole sector never relaxes, and his artillery forces seem to be increasing. Roads far behind the front are kept under a continual searching fire, and the line along the Piave is bombarded day and night. From the plain below one sees the slopes of Monte Fenera spouting with shell explosions, as once one used to see San Gabriele. It is obvious that the Germans attach serious hopes to their offensive upon this point, and a great and crucial battle seems to be growing into shape in the triangle of land inclosed between Cornelia, Tomba, and the river.

The best feature of it is the really wonderful spirit and endurance of the Italians. A sample of them is to be found in that division which includes General Peppino Garibaldi's famous brigade of Alpini and the Reggio Brigade, whose retirement from the positions they had held for nearly two years on Marmolada and in the Val Cordevole is one of the best episodes of the retreat. They brought away the whole of their material except three guns, one of which fell into a crevasse on a glacier, and the other two of which were too heavy to be removed by man power, which was the only means of transport. The rest, together with the engines of cable railroads, rock drills, and searchlights, were all saved, being hauled away by men who harnessed themselves with ropes and made more than twenty-five miles in one day.

One battalion of Alpini and one of the Reggio Brigade formed the rear guard and ambushed the advancing enemy at Tagliata di San Martino, throwing him back and causing him heavy losses. They found the Vidor bridge intact, and blew it up eight hours before a column of Austrians attempted to cross, apparently quite ignorant of the fact that the river was defended at this point. The Alpini let the head of the column come within 100 yards before they turned loose with their machine guns and simply mowed them down.

The Enemy Army Commands.

The enemy army commands are as follows: Field Marshal Conrad von Hoetzendorff commands on the west; next toward the east comes the Austrian General Krobatin; then von Below at the head of the Piave, and next General Borovich, who formerly commanded the army of the Isonzo. Von Below's German divisions are jägers, with an admixture of the Prussian Guard gathered hither from all the various fronts. One of his Austrian divisions consists of a large proportion of Bosnian-Herzegovinians, who have made themselves infamous during the advance by pillaging.

The fighting on the lower Piave has crystallized into a defense on the line of the Sile, with the Venetian lagoon beyond it. It is an extraordinary tract of country between the Piave and the Sile, which actually lies below sea level and is now flooded, the only dry ground being the high backs of the two canalized rivers. Lonely amphibious guns live on rafts among the fringes of the lagoons, some of them great naval cannon whose recoils send the whole huge raft spinning back, while the water foams across its deck.

One of these hit an Austrian bridge at Grisolera with its second shot at 16,000 yards. When the enemy rebuilt the bridge a monitor which had worked its way through the mud banks of the lagoon searched it out with its great 22-inch guns and hit it again.

The Austrians of Borovich's command are now alongside with the lagoon ahead of them. Marines of the Italian Navy hold the canal from Cavazuccherina to the sea and the dry land behind it, and there is a second bridgehead where the Taglio di Sile joins the Sile.

Prisoners taken report that conditions in swamps are most miserable. The enemy was unprepared for the floods, and many of his men have been drowned.

NEW PEACE SLOGAN TO ASSAIL CONGRESS

"People's Council" Getting Ready for Persistent Assault Upon Representatives.

Unless some action is taken to prevent it, Congress, when it meets early in December to face a multitude of war problems, will have to contend with the importunities of pacifists organized under a "Peace by Negotiation—Now!" slogan. The program of the pacifists, which has already started, points to the action of the people of Russia as something to be emulated by the people of America. The purpose of the pacifists to pester Congress was made plain in a statement issued yesterday from the headquarters of the so-called People's Council, 138 West Fifteenth Street.

"'Peace by Negotiation—Now!' is the slogan of a new peace and democracy drive launched by the People's Council of America," the statement said. "By means of letters, communications to its organizations and officers of nearly 200 local councils, the national headquarters force is bending its efforts toward bringing about negotiations. Members of Congress now at home will be the object of concerted propaganda before they return to Washington. It will be pointed out to the Congressmen that the democratic tide is rising in all parts of the world and that the insistence that the war be ended by a 'people's peace' is growing stronger every day."

A statement by Scott Nearing, Chairman of the National Executive Committee of the council, said:

"Grant that the war was begun as a war for democracy. Go further and admit that it was a people's war. What is more obvious than that a war democratically begun should be ended democratically? If this is a war for democracy, it should stop when the people say so. The people of Russia have spoken. The people of France, Italy, England, and Germany are speaking at every opportunity in favor of peace. The American people said what they could on Nov. 6. If the voice of the people is heeded, negotiations will be begun at once. The peace conference will be convened, the world will be war free by Christmas. Wherever they have had a chance to express themselves, the people have spoken against the continuance of the war."

In spite of Mr. Nearing's argument about the war being "democratically begun," he added:

"A few irresponsible rulers, mad with the lust for economic power, have plunged the Western world into a struggle that has crumpled up civilization and brought men jaw to jaw with disease, agony, and death."

"Russia," he continued, "has cast out her political and economic tyrants. The Russian people rule, and Russia has done more than any other nation to repudiate the war and to demand an immediate, permanent, and democratic peace." Mr. Nearing stated that the purpose of his recent trip cross-continent, during which he was arrested at Detroit, was to prepare for a pacifist convention to be held in the near future at Washington.

Louis P. Lochner, Executive Secretary of the organization, in a statement quoted President Wilson's statement to the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo: "A settlement is always hard to avoid when the parties are brought face to face," as an argument for immediate peace negotiations with Germany. He urged "peace by negotiations" as "a substitute for killing." He suggested appointing commissioners for Germany and for the Allies and locking them up in some secluded place until they reached an agreement to settle the war.

Two Others Strung Up by Loyalists in Billings, Mont.

BILLINGS, Mont., Nov. 23.—The Secretary of the Finnish I. W. W. Propaganda League at Red Lodge, a coal mining camp southwest of Billings, was horsewhipped last night by a "Liberty Committee" of citizens for alleged offensive anti-war activity, according to information received here today.

It is also reported that two Finnish Industrial Workers were strung up by the neck until they lost consciousness.

O'LEARY INDICTED ON SEDITION CHARGE

Accused of Conspiring to Cause Insubordination in Army and Navy.

STILL PROTESTS LOYALTY

Adolf Stern and L. S. Bedford Colleagues on "Bull" Also Face Imprisonment and Heavy Fines.

Jeremiah A. O'Leary, President of the so-called American Truth Society, which before this country entered the war on the side of the Allies, was one of the most ardent pro-German organizations in the United States and who was also the editor of the pro-German and anti-British publication called "Bull," which was recently barred from the mails by Postmaster General Burleson, was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday for having entered into a conspiracy with Adolf Stern and Luther S. Bedford, who were also indicted, to bring about "insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, and refusal of duty" in the military and naval forces of the United States. In the event of conviction O'Leary and his co-defendants may be sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, in addition to fines of $10,000 each.

It had been rumored for more than a week that the activities of O'Leary, since the United States declared war on Germany, were the subject of the investigation by the Grand Jury, and for this reason there was little surprise when the indictment was handed down yesterday charging an offense punishable under the provisions of the recently enacted Espionage act. After his indictment O'Leary issued a statement, in which he protested his loyalty to the United States and asserted that the Government had acted because of his "public utterances on questions of public policy" etc.

That part of the indictment which concerns O'Leary is based on various articles which appeared in issues of Bull following the entrance of the United States into the world war. These articles were all signed, and in none of them did O'Leary give evidence of any enthusiasm for the cause of his country. The letter which Mr. O'Leary wrote in August last to Bernard H. Ridder, publisher of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung, in which he urged Mr. Ridder to take "heart" and "fight" for what he (O'Leary) said he knew to be Mr. Ridder's real views regarding the present war, also forms part of the Government's case against the former editor of "Bull." In that letter O'Leary urged Ridder to follow the example of the New Yorker German Herold, which he said was "fighting cleverly." He also had a laudatory word to say for The Masses, the editors and staff of which are also under indictment, and urged a campaign to keep German in the curriculum of the public schools. He wrote that Mr. Ridder "certainly cannot approve of sending men of German blood to finish the work," his reference being to the winning of the war.

The indictment returned yesterday charges that O'Leary, Bedford, and Stern, and others whose names are unknown to the Grand Jury, conspired together to bring about disloyalty, &c., in the army and navy "by means of the publication in New York City of a certain magazine called Bull and the circulation of the publication in the city, State, and nation among persons who may be, and are, described by the Grand Jurors as persons, in part, belonging to the military and naval forces of the United States, and in other part liable to service therein."

The magazine Bull is described in the indictment as a magazine "containing articles, poems, cartoons, and pictures calculated and intended to create and promote insurbordination, disloyalty, mutiny, and refusal of duty among the persons belonging to military and naval forces of the United States," after which are cited certain signed articles written by O'Leary, which appeared in the June, July, and August issues of this year, and the letter already referred to, written on Aug. 9 to Bernard H. Ridder.

Further it is charged that O'Leary, Bedford, and Stern conspired through the publication of articles, cartoons, &c., in Bull to obstruct recruiting and enlistment in the armed forces of the United States, and "to induce persons available and eligible for enlistment to fail and to refuse to enlist."

The indictment refers to Bedford, who is a more or less well-known "soapbox" agitator, as the managing editor, and Stern as the business manager of the pro-German monthly the publication of which ceased with this month's issue.

A second indictment which charges violation of the postal laws by the publishers and editors of Bull, the charge being based on the circulation of the publication through the mails, was also handed down against Stern and The Bull Publishing Company. This indictment does not name O'Leary or Bedford.

Enter Pleas of Not Guilty.

Immediately after the indictment was handed down, O'Leary and Stern appeared before Judge Martin T. Manton in the Federal District Court. Both entered pleas of not guilty, and Judge Manton held O'Leary in $2,500 and Stern in $5,000 bail for trial. A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Bedford, who had not been found up to the time court adjourned yesterday afternoon. Ex-United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise was present as counsel for the accused men. Bail was promptly furnished, Mrs. O'Leary providing the security for her husband. She told the Federal officials that she owned property worth $50,000.

When he faced Judge Manton, O'Leary was not the fiery agitator of other days. He appeared to realize the seriousness of his position. It is reported that he has known for some days that his activities were the subject of Federal investigation, and that while he hoped that an indictment would not be returned, was not surprised when it was handed down.

"I am now and have been at all times a loyal and patriotic citizen of the United States," O'Leary said while his bail was being arranged.

Subsequently he issued a more complete statement in which he said:

This accusation comes as a great shock to me, and, while I deeply regret that it has been made, I welcome the opportunity to prove to my fellow citizens that I am and at all times have been a loyal and patriotic citizen of the United States. I have been indicted because of my public utterances on questions of public policy, as to which I believed and now believe I was and am free to express myself, whether my country is at peace or at war. If on matters of public policy there exists a difference of opinion between citizens and those temporarily charged with the administration of the affairs of our Government, and the citizens entertaining such opinions may be indicted and prosecuted for exercising the inalienable right of free speech, then, indeed, have we returned to the tyranny that prevailed under the infamous alien and sedition laws of John Adams's Administration, and while we profess to be fighting for democracy abroad we are destroying democracy at home.

I am a native-born citizen of the United States, as were my parents. Men of my family served in the Continental Army in the Revolutionary War. Men of my family died for the Union in the civil war. My wife's brother gave his life for this country on the Mexican border last year. I am ready to give my life for my country in the struggle in which we are now engaged. I am proud of my Americanism, and because of my country and its ideals I shall continue to fight for the liberty of its citizens and for those ideals and principles of liberty for which Washington and Jefferson stood.

Believing, as I do, that in what I have said—for which I have been indicted—I was exercising the right of free speech, and knowing, as I do, that in what I said I was actuated by but one motive, and that pure patriotism, I shall defend myself against this charge now made against me, and expect vindication at the hands of my fellow-citizens.

May Ask for Early Trial.

Assistant United States District Attorney Earl B. Barnes, who is directing the Grand Jury investigation of the editors and publishers of various pro-German and anti-American publications in this city, appeared for the Government at the arraignment of O'Leary and Stern. It is understood that Mr. Barnes will ask for an early trial of the case, which may or may not precede the trial of Max Eastman and the other persons indicted a few days ago in The Masses case. The charge is the same in both cases.

Jeremiah A. O'Leary, who now faces a trial which may mean years of incarceration, has been, with John Devoy, Supreme Court Justice Cohalan, and other American citizens of Irish birth or descent, among the most pronounced and vigorous partisans of the Sinn Fein cause in this country. No Irishman in the country has been admittedly so pro-German in his views and utterances as has O'Leary. During the Presidential campaign of 1916 O'Leary received what was perhaps the most stinging rebuke ever given to an American citizen by a President of the United States.

On Sept. 29 of that year, as President of the American Truth Society, he sent a telegram to President Wilson which began: "Again we greet you with a popular disapproval of your pro-British policies," and then referred to what in O'Leary's opinion was the President's leniency with Great Britain, his refusal to stop the shipment of munitions to the Allies, and other acts which did not meet the approval of the Germans. In reply to that message the President sent the now famous telegram which read:

"I would feel deeply mortified to have you, or anybody like you vote for me. Since you have access to many disloyal Americans and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them."

O'Leary was also mentioned by Secretary Lansing in the recent exposure of the activities of Count von Bernstorff, the dismissed German Ambassador.

Bedford, one of O'Leary's fellow-defendants, was prominent in the recent "soap-box" campaign. Very little is known of Stern, the other defendant in the case.

FIGHTS SENTENCE OF A WAR COURT

Civilian Transport Officer Refused to Obey Orders to Watch for U-boats.

The granting of a writ of habeas corpus by Judge Augustus N. Hand, in the United States District Court yesterday, disclosed for the first time the facts in an important court-martial which was recently concluded on Governors Island. The writ was sought on behalf of Charles E. Gerlach, a resident of Brooklyn, who, while en route to the United States on board an American military transport, refused to serve on "lookout" duty while the transport was passing through the submarine zone. The court-martial, the President of which was Colonel William S. Patten, U. S. A., found Gerlach guilty and sentenced him to a term of five years in Castle Williams, the military prison of the Eastern Department of the army.

Gerlach, who was a civilian officer in the transport service, asserts that he was returning to the United States merely as a passenger. The Government, on the other hand, holds that he was still amenable to orders, although he was not on the ship to which he was regularly detailed.

In seeking the writ Gerlach made the claim that the Governors Island court acted without its jurisdiction in bringing him, a civilian, to trial; that the sentence of the court not only was void but also was excessive, and that his imprisonment on Governors Island was in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

The papers in the case show that Gerlach was arraigned before the Governors Island court-martial on Oct. 11 last charged with violating the Ninety-sixth Article of War, the specification under this article being that he, while "accompanying the army of the United States in the field, and being in the employ of the United States Government in a time of war," was ordered by the commanding officer of the Transport —— "to take a lookout station, to assist in safeguarding the ship while passing through the danger zone."

The specifications continuing assert that Gerlach, "in the presence of the master of the ship, the chief engineer, and the chief naval officer, refused to obey such order, and did persist in his refusal to the detriment of the welfare and safety of the ship and all persons on board."

On the arrival of the transport at New York Gerlach was transferred to the custody of the army on Governors Island and within less than a week was placed on trial. Twenty-three days after his refusal to do duty in the submarine zone he commenced to serve his sentence in Castle Williams.

The papers submitted to Judge Hand allege on behalf of Gerlach that he was illegally on board the transport at the time he refused to serve as a lookout and that he was not subject to the orders of any officers on board the transport. He also denies the charge that he was accompanying an "army in the field"; asserts that he was not in the service of the army, and that "the manner, time, and circumstances" of his being on board the transport were not his own choosing.

The members of the court-martial before which Gerlach was tried and convicted were, in addition to Colonel Patten, Colonels George H. G. Gale, Edwin P. Brewer, Treadwell W. Moore, Edward E. Hardin, Edward R. Morris, and James A. Goodwin, Major Charles G. Dwyer, and Captains William H. Wheeler and O. A. Nesmith. Major H. W. Ogden and Lieutenant John G. Livingston were the Judge Advocates who prosecuted the case.

The writ on which Gerlach will be brought before Judge Hand is directed to Major Henry Stahl, in charge of the Atlantic Branch of the Disciplinary Branch on Governors Island. It was said yesterday that Gerlach probably would be brought before the Federal Court on Monday. The Government will ask that the writ be vacated.

USE BOGUS LETTERS TO CAUSE ALARM HERE

German Agents Drop Them in Public Resorts to Worry Relatives of Soldiers.

The German rumor-mongers have started a campaign the purpose of which is to frighten the near relatives of the soldiers of General Pershing's army and also to stir up feeling against the British. The latest scheme, which was brought to the attention of the Federal authorities yesterday, is for German agents to go into hotels, theatres, restaurants, saloons, and other public places and carelessly drop on the floor what appear to be genuine letters from American soldiers in France. Every letter paints conditions on the west front in black colors, and each is to the effect that the Government in Washington is withholding news of severe losses among Pershing's men.

Here is a copy of a letter which was picked up in a Broadway café on Thursday night and turned over yesterday to the Federal authorities:

Soissons, France, Oct. 22, 1917.

Dear Sister Lillie: I hardly know if this will ever reach you, but as Joe B——'s ship will leave soon for U. S. A. he promised to sneak a few lines to you. I am allright Sis and tell Mother too, but this War is H—— and we had one tough battle last Friday, about 183 soldiers U. S. Killed and nearly five hundred in hospital and don't doubt if a hundred aint killed every day, we put up a game fight, but those English chaps are d—— old cowards, the French are dandy fellows so kind too. Must not get caught writing this so don't expect a long letter.

Hope you and dear Mother are both well and pray for me night that I may soon return to you again, I close with kisses.

Your brother Jim.

Another persistent report, which is the work of the German rumor-mongers, is to the effect that one of the American military transports has been blown up at sea and all on board lost. From all parts of the city news that such a report is in circulation has reached the authorities. It can be officially stated that the report is false and agents of the Secret Service are now at work trying to find those who are responsible for the circulation of the story.

The Federal authorities announce that any person who can give information that will lead to the detection of these rumor-mongers should communicate with the United States Marshal in the Federal Building, the Department of Justice in the Park Row Building, or the United States Secret Service, at the Custom House.

GERMANS LEAVING BARRED WAR ZONES

Government Notifies Employers That No Exceptions Will Be Allowed.

The rules and regulations which will govern the enforcement in New York city of the enemy alien regulations, promulgated last Monday by President Wilson, will probably be made public on Monday, and will immediately become effective. The police continued yesterday the work of notifying Germans resident or doing business in water front and other barred zones to immediately make preparations to move. The Germans, many of whom protested against the stringency of the new regulations, were told that no exceptions would be made, and that all would have to move or be interned for the period of the war. Many enemy aliens who have apartments on Riverside Drive called on Marshal McCarthy yesterday to find out if they would be required to move to other parts of the city.

Several women were among the Marshal's callers. In nearly every instance they were the employers of German servants, and wanted to know if they could retain them. They were informed they could, provided their homes were not within the area of one of the prohibited zones. If they are in such zones they will either have to discharge the servants or else move to some unrestricted section.

About twenty Germans, all in the employ of a single concern, called to find out what they would have to do. The offices in which they work is in a barred zone, and they were told that they would have to move. A prominent man who has a German engineer in his employ wrote to the Marshal that the engineer was essential to the continuance of his business and that if the German moved the business would have to move too. It was officially stated that the business would have to be carried on in some other part of the city if the services of the engineer were continued.

The roundup of enemy aliens along the waterfront, both on the New York and New Jersey sides, is continuing, but details as to the number of men arrested yesterday, or as to their identity, were not made public by the Federal authorities.

A man who gave his name as C. Mundin of Newburg was arrested at Broadway and Forty-second Street last night on the charge of fraudulently wearing the uniform of an officer of the army. The arrest was made by agents of the Department of Justice.

CHARGES THE VATICAN WITH AIDING AUSTRIA

London Morning Post Demands That Government Take Note of Alleged Intrigues.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Morning Post in an editorial says:

"The time has come when it is necessary that the Allies should consider with some care what is their position in relation to the Vatican. That the recent Italian reverse has been largely due to the influences of treacherous representations disseminated among the Italian armies is known; that the Vatican was implicated in that propaganda is also known, and the result was a disaster so grave that its effects cannot yet be measured. * * *

"If we are to come to the plain truth, the Vatican has leaned from the beginning to the side of Austria, in which country, out of all Europe, the Holy See retains its strongest remnant of political subservience, and late events have shown that the Vatican has gone further and has furtively, but actively, espoused the Austrian cause.

"We cannot afford at this point of the war to preserve the attitude of profound innocence of foreign affairs which is the foible of the British Foreign Office. * * * The British public, the French public and the Italian public are under no illusions on the subject of the Vatican. Either these political intrigues and machinations are a danger to the cause of the Allies or they are not; and if the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs assures us that there is no reason for misgiving we regret to say that misgiving will not thereby be removed.

"The country is entitled to demand of the Government what in their view is the attitude of the Vatican, and if any protest has been addressed by them to the Holy See. As the matter stands, we cannot but conclude that there is in Italy a centre of disaffection in secret league with Italy's mortal enemy."

Henry A. Uterhart, chief counsel for Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, on trial for the murder of her husband, in his opening statement at Mineola yesterday, after the prosecution had rested, reviewed the life of Mrs. De Saulles since she, at the age of 16 years, married John Longer De Saulles, the Yale athlete, in Paris in 1911.

While Mr. Uterhart's narrative occasionally caused a juror to wipe his eyes and many of the women in the courtroom to use their handkerchiefs, he insisted vigorously that he was not appealing in the slightest degree to the unwritten law. In conclusion, he laid before the jury an elaborate series of allegations as to the defendant's medical history to prove that, at the time of the shooting, she was suffering from a defect of reason caused by illness and physical injuries.

The cause of her temporary loss of reason, in addition to the chronicle of affronts and wrongs endured from her husband, were, as outlined by Mr. Uterhart, two sunstrokes, a disease of the thyroid glands affecting the brain and nerve centres, and a double fracture of the skull, never completely closed, which would be proved by X-ray photographs and medical testimony, the lawyer said, to have caused a piece of the bone of the skull to press against her brain.

Tells of Alleged Humiliation.

The lawyer's story was filled with incidents illustrating the humiliations which the young woman was alleged to have suffered. A typical one occurred, the lawyer said, on Easter Day in 1916, a short time after Mrs. De Saulles had returned from Chile and become reconciled to her husband after a separation caused, it was alleged, by De Saulles's "addiction to all-night cabarets, to stage beauties, and to drinking bouts with boon companions." Mr. Uterhart said:

"On Easter morning De Saulles came over to the apartment occupied by Mrs. De Saulles, at 10 East Sixtieth Street, and said he would like to take little Jack for a walk. Mrs. De Saulles readily allowed the boy to go. A few minutes later she received a beautiful bouquet of flowers, with a note attached, saying: 'To our one and only sweetheart, from Big and Little Jack.'

"This was very pleasing to Mrs. De Saulles, and she was more than happy when De Saulles and the little boy returned. He told what great fun they had had. He said that he stirred up the lions with his cane and made them roar, sometimes frightening the little boy and sometimes sending him into peals of laughter.

"After De Saulles had gone, the boy told more about it. He said: 'Oh, how daddy and Miss Jo did laugh at the lions.'

"'Who is Miss Jo?' the mother asked.

"The boy replied: 'Oh, Miss Jo is a lady who was with us. Daddy called her Jo and told me to call her Miss Jo and not to tell you anything about her.'"

This was Joan Sawyer, the co-respondent in the divorce suit which Mrs. De Saulles later won against her husband. Other stage favorites and many characters, some notorious and some of considerable social standing, figured in Mr. Uterhart's unsparing arraignment of the late John L. De Saulles. One of these was the Duke of Manchester incident. It was told as follows:

"This was in 1914, the Summer when the Duke of Manchester was furnishing sensation after sensation. He and De Saulles became inseparable companions—so much so that De Saulles's mother wrote to Blanca and asked if she could not do something to end their companionship. She wrote that Town Topics had had a very scandalous article regarding Jack, and that something had to be done.

"Blanca got Town Topics and read it, and you will hear the article read, gentlemen, and I think you will agree with me that it was not pleasant reading for any wife, let alone a girl only 20 years old, who had given up everything she had in the world to follow her husband to a strange country.

"Shortly after she had read this article, Jack was on one of his infrequent visits to their home on Long Island. While he was there on this short trip he received a message from the Duke of Manchester, who said that he wanted to see him at once. He promptly left her on receiving this message.

"The next time Mrs. De Saulles saw her husband was some time later, when she was on a trip on the yacht of her husband's relatives, the Heckschers, in the Sound they passed the yacht which the Duke had hired. There standing on the quarterdeck were the noble Lord and John De Saulles, surrounded by a bevy of Broadway's choicest beauties. This was not a very pleasant spectacle for a young wife. De Saulles went away after that and she saw nothing more of him that Summer."

After telling of the various alleged adventures of De Saulles, which had led to the divorce, Mr. Uterhart said that the young woman had been led to consent to give her husband partial custody of the child, though he was convicted of infidelity, because her lawyers, Prince & Nathan of 19 Cedar Street, had advised her that the husband had many rights which the courts would consider; that being Chilean born made it unlikely that the courts would give her sole custody, and urged her to make the stipulation which gave De Saulles control of the boy for five months of the year and complete control of his education.

Defense on the Written Law.

Mr. Uterhart's address began when the State, after putting the father and sister of De Saulles, Marshall E. Ward, and others on the stand to tell of the manner of the killing, had rested its case. After beginning by asserting that his defense would be founded wholly on the written law and sketching the legal basis for it, he began his narrative with the life history of his client. He said:

"She was born twenty-three years and seven months ago at Santiago, Chile—on April 9, 1894. She is descended from one of the most respectable and honorable houses in Chile, from a family which had given no less than two Presidents to the Republic. Her father died when she was two years old, and she was brought up at a small town known as Vinar del Mar until the age of eleven years. Then she was sent to a Sacred Heart Convent in England for three years, and at fourteen years of age returned to Chile. At sixteen years—two years later—she met John Longer De Saulles—I think it was at the races at Vinar del Mar. I do not know what business had brought De Saulles to Chile at this time, but I think he was introduced to this young woman by some of the members of her family.

"There is no doubt that he was a man with a superficially attractive manner. He told her what he first met her that he had heard that she thought of taking a trip to the United States and that he might be of some service to her.

"He was brought to her house by friends or relatives, and for a time saw her frequently. In the Summer—that is, in the Summer here; February is the Summer at that end of the world—he told her mother, Mme. Errazuriz, that Blanca was a trump; that he wanted to marry her; that he intended to make his future home in Chile, and that he would never leave there, and that understanding Mrs. Errazuris accepted him. It was arranged that they should have one of the houses owned by Mrs. Errazuris, a house very near that in which the mother herself lived."

Mme. Errazuris planned to make a trip to the United States and to make a stay in New York City, according to Mr. Uterhart, before going to Paris, where the marriage was to take place, but De Saulles dissuaded her. He told her, Mr. Uterhart said, that the United States was a rough and uncouth place; that a woman traveling alone was in great danger of insult, and that she had better go straight to Paris.

Married in Paris.

The mother did go straight to Paris. On Dec. 13 the civil marriage took place before the Maire and the following day a religious ceremony was performed at an English Catholic chapel in Paris. After that the couple went to New York, visiting relatives of De Saulles, and then to Chile.

"Immediately after their arrival at Santiago," said the lawyer, "De Saulles applied to the administrator of the estate of his wife's father for all securities and title deeds belonging to Mrs. De Saulles. After he had looked them over he said to his wife:

"'Why, that's hardly anything at all. It is practically nothing. It is absurd to call you an heiress.'

"He then got Blanca, a girl of sixteen, to write to her mother in Paris, begging her to send a large sum of money to them, because Jack wanted to buy an estate in Chile. She said that her husband had threatened that, if he did not get the money, he would return to the United States to live.

"She cabled back that she did not have money enough to do this, but that she would give them one of her properties. This did not satisfy Jack, and he dragged this poor little girl to Paris, where he confronted the mother and insisted that she should give him the money that he wanted. She said that she did not have it, and he told her in words, or in substance, that she was a liar.

"He was so disappointed and angry over this that he left his wife; quit her and went to London. He remained there a week, and then came back and rejoined her. He took her back to America with him, but he never saw the mother again.

"I had forgot to say that, in spite of his disappointment over the smallness of the fortune Blanca brought to him, De Saulles had sold $6,000 worth of her stock in Santiago and provided himself with funds for his trip to Paris. On his return to this country they took a place in Larchmont.

"During the campaign of 1912," the lawyer continued, "Mr. De Saulles took an active part, and left his wife alone a great deal of the time. She was rather proud of his work in the campaign, however, and did not at this time feel neglected. In November of 1912 he took her to the home of his father, Major Arthur De Saulles, at South Bethlehem, Penn. There, on Christmas Day, little Jack, De Saulles was born."

From that time forth, the lawyer said, the treatment she received from De Saulles was complete indifference. He simply put her aside and paid no attention to her, the lawyer said. He continued:

"The old people did not want her there and they did not hesitate to say so. Old Mrs. De Saulles would ask her why she did not go and when she would go, and that it was a 'shame for Longer (pronounced Longe, the name applied to De Saulles by his family) to burden them with the care of the infant.

"De Saulles was never there except on Sunday afternoons for a few hours. He would often call up on the telephone and say that he could not come, and he would often telephone that he was coming and then fail to appear. We will show that this little girl frequently waited for him at the railroad station and was disappointed after his promises to come.

"We will show you by a nurse, Mrs. O'Neill, who was with them at the time, that this little child of seventeen years, alone in a strange country, in unhappy surroundings in a smoky little factory town, had on one occasion, when she had suffered such a disappointment, crept back to her house and upstairs to her rooms. There Mrs. O'Neill saw her put her arms about her infant and say to it: 'O Toodles, daddy doesn't love us any more.'

"I will show, beyond peradventure, the condition of her mind at this time. Through a freak of fortune a few letters which she wrote at this time to Mrs. O'Neill have been preserved. Practically every letter she wrote to her husband was destroyed at the time of the divorce, and her letters to her nurse and confidante are the only instances we have been able to find where she expressed a single complaint to any one. If you ever heard letters that poured from a breaking heart, you will hear them when you hear these."

Later on De Saulles took a cottage for his wife at Deal Beach, N. J., the lawyer said. Though this was within commuting distance of New York, he was never there, the lawyer said, except when he came from Friday to Sunday in company with Marshall Ward, and they spent practically all their time there "sleeping and resting up." At this time the young woman got $25,000 from the sale of properties in Chile. De Saulles got $15,000 of it from her in one check and $5,000 in another, he said.

Turned Down Uruguay Post.

"In the Spring of 1914 she took a trip to Uruguay with a friend, Miss Munos, a Chilean. Her husband had said that he was going to receive the post of Minister to Uruguay from President Wilson. Before she went, however, De Saulles carefully and thoughtfully had her sign two blank checks. She had hardly arrived at Uruguay when she got a cable to come back, that he had resigned his appointment."

She came back, when she had found that he had taken a house at Huntingdon, L. I., expecting that at last they might live together happily. It was at this time that the Duke of Manchester incident occurred. This house in Huntington, Uterhart said, De Saulles purchased with money raised by filling in blank checks his wife had left with him. He got $12,000 from the checks, and told his wife that he had spent that much for the house. Uterhart said, but in reality he had paid only $7,500 for it.

"He pocketed the difference," the lawyer said. "That is, whether he pocketed it, or whether it went into some one else's pocket, I cannot say. But I mention it here because it has an important bearing on the stipulations as to the custody of the child, which the District Attorney has read with so much gusto."

"No," said District Attorney Weeks; "not with gusto."

"With whatever you did read it with, then," continued Uterhart.

"Immediately after this De Saulles went to Europe, telling his wife that he was going to be gone for two weeks, and going there on her money.

"Now, I am going to tell you something frightfully sordid, but it was only one of the sordid things that this young woman had to face continually during her life with this man. Before he left he told his wife that he was going to furnish their house with furniture that he had got from George Young; that George Young owed him a lot of money, and that he was taking the furniture in payment. A little after he had gone George Young came for the money. He said he knew nothing about the debt. He showed a cablegram from De Saulles telling him to collect the money from his wife. She paid it without a word.

"He stayed in Europe much longer than two weeks and finally cabled her to join him in London. Her money was by this time running low, but she went across the ocean to him, nevertheless. When he met her in London she told him that all the rooms at the Hotel Berkeley where he was stopping were taken and that she would have to stay elsewhere. She said that she would stay with him, and then suggested that they should go to another hotel, but he said that the hotel was his business headquarters and that he could not leave it. He asked her to stay with her friend Miss Munos, and she did.

"This caused a great scandal among her Chilean friends in London, who looked upon it as quite unusual. She saw little of De Saulles. One time when she went to speak to him she went to the Berkeley and asked for him.

"'Who are you?' said the clerk.

"'I am his wife,' she replied.

"'Which one?' said the clerk."

There was a slight ripple among the spectators at this. Uterhart turned toward them and said:

"That may sound funny to some people, but it wasn't funny for a little girl only 19 years old."

He went to Paris shortly after that and would not take her, saying that Paris was no place for her, according to Uterhart. She then returned to the United States. She had only been in New York a short time when she got a cable to come to Paris at once, he said. She was packing up, when she got another cable not to come.

"She hired new servants and started to keep house again," said Mr. Uterhart, when another cable came saying:

"'Have taken apartments at Paris. Come at once.'

"She had hardly got ready again when she got another cablegram to stay at home. A little later she got a third summons to Paris. This time she had her trunks on board the steamer and a taxicab outside, when she got a telegram saying that he was returning to America without delay.

"It was not until May 16, however, that he did arrive home. When he got back he was drinking very heavily. If he was home to dinner, he would fall asleep after it, if he did not go out with friends of his own type to all-night cabarets."

Finally his escapades became so notorious and intolerable, the lawyer said, that Mrs. De Saulles made up her mind to give him up. One night she had a heart-to-heart talk with him and told her state of mind. His reply, according to the lawyer, was:

"'I guess you are right. I could never live a married life and settle down. You get a divorce and take the boy.'

"But this was not so easy," Uterhart said, "for this young woman, who came from a country and a religion where marriage is regarded as a sacrament which is indissoluble by any human agency. Instead of getting a divorce she separated from her husband and went to live in Chile.

"She was there from late in 1915 to February, 1916, and was planning to take a trip to China when she got a letter from De Saulles, asking her to come back to him for the sake of the boy. This was an appeal that she could not resist. She returned, and arrived shortly before Easter. When her steamer came in and she saw De Saulles at the pier her heart sank, because he looked so dissipated."

Uterhart then told of the episode of "Jo" and the lions. He went on to say that De Saulles was then living with his brother, Charles A. H. De Saulles, in bachelor quarters at 4 West Fifty-seventh Street. She found that De Saulles had provided that she should live at 10 East Sixtieth Street, while he and his brother remained together. She suggested that, his brother Charles being away, she should live with him, but De Saulles, according to the lawyer, objected. Some time later, after a party which De Saulles had given in his bachelor quarters to the Hecksehers and other friends, he urged his wife to stay with him, Uterhart said. He continued:

"Mrs. De Saulles asked him if he would swear on his honor that no other woman had been there with him. He swore on his honor, and by all that he held sacred that no other woman had been there. And it was in this very apartment, as it was later proved in the divorce trial, that he had been entertaining Miss Jo all Winter."

During the divorce proceedings Mrs. De Saulles remembered, the lawyer said, that the house where they had lived in East Seventy-eighth Street had been bought with her money and thought that she ought to have the money.

"But her lawyers advised her not to press the claim," said Mr. Uterhart. "They said that they were in the midst of delicate negotiations with De Saulles, and that this claim, if put forward, would disturb those negotiations. This was enough for her. After this advice she had nothing to say."

Says De Saulles Withheld Money.

Later, he said, the question was raised again. De Saulles told her, according to the lawyer, that he had sold the property for $5,500.

"As a matter of fact," said Uterhart, "he had sold it for $14,500, as I will prove by his secretary, in whose name he carried on the transactions. It was her surrender of this sum, I will show also, which brought about this second stipulation, which enabled Mrs. De Saulles to have the boy on alternate months and in certain limited circumstances to take the boy with her either on a trip abroad or on a trip to Chile.

"That letter was a typical De Saulles letter. He was great at such letters. It was framed to put the other fellow in bad, in it he stated that Mrs. De Saulles disliikes America and Americans. This was untrue, for she had married an American and she loved this country. It was inserted in the letter artfully, with the idea of future court proceedings regarding the boy in view."

Uterhart said that, during the period when De Saulles had the boy, he hired a waiter from Mrs. De Saulles a maid of whom the boy was very fond and used her in an effort to detach the child's affections from his mother.

"The name of this maid was Mrs. Mooney," he said. "The boy had given her the nickname of 'Booby.' After the period when he had been in his father's possession he returned to his mother, who was then at the Hotel Gotham. He said to her:

"'"Booby" said that she loved me more than you did.'

"Later the boy told her that 'Booby' had told her not to love 'Bumbee,' which was the name the child gave to his mother.

"He appeared to be very much changed. He behaved badly at first. His love for his mother soon changed his attitude, but one morning a day or two later he appeared suddenly to fly into a passion, and threw himself on the floor, kicking and screaming. When she had calmed him, the boy said that 'Booby' had told him that he must be a bad boy when with his mother."

"One time, when he came back to his mother," said Uterhart, "he said that his father had told him that he was going to have two mothers, the second one being a Miss Shepley. He added: 'Daddy says that she will love me as much as you do.'

"This was a Miss Ruth Shepley, who appeared in 'The Boomerang.' She was reported engaged to De Saulles before he was shot, and stated that this was so in an interview in San Francisco after De Saulles was killed.

"In his true De Saulles style of putting her in the wrong, he wrote her a letter in the latter part of June, 1917, calling her attention to the fact that The Box was well provided with pets and pleasures for the boy, saying that it would be a shame for him to keep her in town when she got the boy in July, and urging that she should take The Box for the month, when she had the boy.

"After all her experiences the young woman saw very clearly what this meant. At The Box the boy had toys, dogs and ponies, and all kinds of devices for his amusement had been built for him. When he returned from The Box he would say that his father had told him that his father had given The Box to him, and that he had charge of everything there.

"The boy had told her of jolly parties at The Box. He told her about how funny the 'Million-Dollar Kid' (a moving picture actress) had been, and how much Jeff, the negro valet of De Saulles, had laughed at her. She saw the influences that were drawing around the boy, and she left this De Saulles letter unanswered."

The next day, the lawyer said, De Saulles telephoned to her, and, when he could not persuade her to take The Box, asked her to let the boy stay with him for the end of the month until she could move into The Crossways, her country home at Westbury. She agreed to this, and he promised in return to allow her to have the boy for the same number of extra days in August that he would have him in July, she said:

"'You had better put that in writing.'

"He replied, 'No, I give you my word of honor. That is enough.'

"She said, 'All right, but be sure to remember it.'

Uterhart said the young woman had become very excited when the boy was not returned on Aug. 3 and that she telephoned to D. Stewart Iglehart of W. R. Grace & Co., who had married a Chilean friend of hers, and asked him if he would accompany her because of the loneliness of the road to get the boy. He refused, Uterhart said, because he felt that he should take no part in a delicate matter between husband and wife. It was only then, Uterhart said, that she determined to take the revolver which she carried with her to The Box.

After the valet, lying at his master's dictation, had told her that De Saulles was out and would be out for an hour, Uterhart said that she used the utmost haste in getting started and took the short cut to The Box, in the hope of getting the child and getting away before De Saulles should appear.

Uterhart said that the young woman had not "sensed" that De Saulles was home from the first, as the defense contended, but she suspected that he was there when she saw an automobile in front of the house, and consequently asked first for him. Just before this, Uterhart said, she exclaimed to the maid, Suzanne Monteau:

"I hope he hasn't got home."

When De Saulles came forward to the door of the living room, she said, according to Uterhart:

"I don't think it's very nice of you to keep Jack this way. I have come to get him."

"As she spoke," continued Mr. Uterhart, "a look came over his face that she had often seen before. She had long known that look and knew that it always came just when he was about to do something particularly mean and vicious. It was just as she expected. He said to her:

"'You are never going to have him again.'"

The lawyer then discussed her unusual calm and presence of mind after the shooting, holding this, which the prosecution put forward as proof of rationality, to be really proof of the opposite.

"The following day," he continued, "she was attended by Dr. J. Sherman Wight of the Long Island College Hospital and his colleague, Dr. Louis C. Johnson of Johns Hopkins. Dr. Cleghorn, the County Physician, was also present at their invitation. They found Blanca lying on her bed. She was not the woman that you see before you now after months of care, attention and treatment. She was dazed, listless, taking little note of her surroundings."

After describing several symptoms of dangerous weakness, he continued:

"Gentlemen, they found that for some time she had been suffering from a disease which affects the nervous centres, and the brain, and which rendered her irresponsible and brought on the mental confusion the night of the shooting. Hypothyreosis, the doctors call it."

He went on to explain that the disease meant the withering and loss of function of the thyroid gland, which he said stimulated the activity of various cells of the body. In far advanced cases, he said that it caused hopeless mental infirmity and death.

"The doctors also found," he continued, "a tender area on the head which was depressed below the level of the skull. In order to find out the cause, if possible, of this depression, of this constant and agonizing pain in her head, they brought an X-ray apparatus out to the jail and took an actual photograph of her skull, and when the plate was developed, the doctors found a depressed fracture of the skull, an inch and one-half in diameter and three-eighths of an inch deep, and the crack or break is still ununited. It is just about four inches above the root of the nose, and is located over the frontal lobes of the brain, the place where all the higher faculties of the brain reside—the judgment, the reason, the control.

"And I went further to say that the testimony in regard to this other condition that I have spoken about, this disease of the thyroid gland, depends on evidence of exactly the same character. It is not a question of somebody's opinion, somebody's judgment, somebody's guess.

The first witness yesterday was Marshall Ward. He told the story of the shooting, saying that he had moved to a far corner of the room when the quarrel began to avoid mixing in trouble between a man and his former wife and had not been able to get to the side of De Saulles before the fifth shot was fired. His account agreed substantially with that of other eyewitnesses. A few questions brought out the intimacy between Ward and De Saulles. Mr. Uterhart said:

"Have you ever been convicted?"

"What of, a crime?"

"Yes, of a crime?"

"No."

"Do you swear that?"

"Yes."

Mr. Uterhart then introduced a certified copy of the conviction of Ward before Magistrate Appleton about a year ago for fighting while intoxicated and using indecent language in a Broadway cafe. He was fined $10. Ward admitted it and said that he had been arrested for a fight with a man who annoyed a party he was with.

"Have you ever been accused of defrauding a dressmaker named Miss Mary Reilly?"

"This is the first I ever heard of it."

Mr. Uterhart produced a decision of the Appellate Court holding that a suit brought by Ward against the Paul J. Rainey Pier Company for commission on bonds sold to Miss Reilly was without merit, because the woman alleged that she had been swindled and because it appeared that Ward and De Saulles had divided between them a stock bonus of 50 per cent. of the value of the bonds which they should have delivered to the woman. Ward said that Dudley Field Malone had been at the luncheon of the De Saulles party at Sherry's earlier in the day.

Major Arthur De Saulles, father of the dead man, took the stand. He is a Confederate veteran, slightly stooped, but still fairly vigorous. He spoke in a deep voice and with much feeling. Asked if he knew Mrs. De Saulles, he said:

"I should think I ought to."

He said that on the entrance of Mrs. De Saulles at The Box on Aug. 3, De Saulles had walked toward her with his hand extended courteously. The word 'courteously' was stricken out. After telling of the shooting, he said:

"I saw him stagger and ran to his side as he fell. I began to search for the wounds, but I could not find any, though I saw that the arm was broken. Then the valet came, and he and I carried the poor boy to a couch."

Mrs. Caroline Degener, a sister of the dead man, was a witness. She said that she came downstairs with "little Jack" and greeted Mrs. De Saulles, as she came up the stairs. She said that "little Jack" had run into the living room and was there, an eyewitness, when Mrs. De Saulles shot her husband. She said she seized Mrs. De Saulles by the wrist and said "Blanquita," and that Mrs. De Saulles replied:

"Sorry, it had to be done."

Sheriff Seaman and Constable Thorn told of the woman's conduct after her arrest. The Sheriff admitted that she had given little hysterical laughs and that he was afraid she might make an attempt on her own life. He said that he removed a clothes line from the end of the prison where she was and transferred her from her cell to a room when the County Physician the day after the shooting recommended this on account of her "extreme nervousness and her mental condition." Justice of the Peace Jones described her actions while before him and on cross-examination said:

"Her calmness was surprising to me."

He said that after telling Major Philip M. Lydig over the telephone what she had done, she said:

"I could almost see him throw up his hands and say, 'My God, my God! This makes me tired.'"

The trial will be resumed on Monday morning at 10 o'clock, with Mrs. De Saulles probably as the first witness.

GERMAN SOCIETIES LOYAL, THEY INSIST

Representatives of 120 Vote to Get Service Flags to Prove It.

ADVICE TO OTHER GERMANS

"Keep Your Mouths Shut and See It Through," Is the Suggestion of Dr. Hirschland.

Vigorous expressions of loyalty to the United States and various practical steps to demonstrate it were features of the monthly meeting of the United German Societies of New York County, held last night in Maennerchor Hall. It was brought out by the President, Fred E. Haas, that eight or nine hundred of the 14,000 members of the organization were at present in the army or navy of the United States, and it was voted that the various component organizations, 120 in number; should as soon as possible ascertain the exact number of their members in the service and get service flags.

In this connection Theodore Sutro read statistics compiled by the German-American National Alliance asserting that 25 per cent. of the national army and from 25 to 30 per cent. of the men who had enlisted in the regulars since the war began were of German ancestry. The estimate concluded that at present about 10 per cent. of the commissioned officers and 33 per cent. of the enlisted men had German blood in them. Dr. F. H. Hirschland urged all citizens of German blood to use every effort to persuade German subjects in this country to behave themselves and keep out of trouble.

"Figures given out by the Government," he said, "show that so far only about 600 German nationals have been interned and that the number is not likely to go beyond 1,000. At the same time it is stated that there are 120,000 German subjects in New York alone. Surely this shows that the great body of Germans in this country have been orderly and law-abiding, and we Americans of German blood should use our acquaintance with them to see that they remain so. It will be very unfortunate if the great mass of Germans who have been wise enough to keep out of trouble by obeying the law should suffer for the misdeeds of a few. They are in the position of guests in this country and should behave themselves as such. German-Americans should not only refuse to listen to them when they start talking about controversial subjects connected with the war, but should give them some plain advice—'Keep your mouths shut, be patient, and see it through.' (Maul halten, aushalten, durchalten)."

Mr. Sutro, as President of the General Nicholas Herkimer Homestead Association, reported on the efforts made by certain persons up-State, headed, he said, by John W. Vrooman and ex-Senator Warner Miller, to get the Legislature to amend the charter of the association to provide that no foreign-born citizen could hold office and that active membership should be open to members of any patriotic society. Under the present charter, procured largely by the activities of German-Americans in Governor Sulzer's time, any one is eligible for associate membership, but active membership is limited to members of the German-American Alliance and the Daughters of the American Revolution, which organizations manage the Herkimer Homestead and the collection of relics through a joint committee. Mr. Sutro declared that the Daughters of the American Revolution supported the German-American Alliance in defending the present plan and said that while the attack took the form of Germanophobe persecution he thought it was born principally of personal jealousy. "At any rate," he said, "it should be a point of honor for Americans of German descent to support this association, which is caring for the memory of a German-American hero. We ought to belong to it purely as a matter of American patriotism." A considerable number of new members were enrolled at the close of the meeting.

The Committee on German Langauge and Culture reported that the movement to exclude the German language from the schools had failed to make headway in most places, and expressed the hope that in the new school board of seven members to be appointed by Mayor Hylan there will be found sentiment in favor of keeping the study of German.

The committee which has been arranging a Christmas bazaar reported that this had been abandoned because, although its benefits were not to be limited by considerations of race or nationality, charges had been made that there was German propaganda behind the matter. The predicted fight between Christ Rebhan, President of the Deutscher Kriegerbund, and Henry Weismann, President of the German-American Alliance of the State, over some remarks in which Weismann was supposed to have cast aspersions on the loyalty of that organization, did not take place, though the Americanism of the Kriegerbund was defended in a vigorous speech from the floor.

The Toy Shop

One thing will be no different than it has always been — the children's Christmas.

What a dreary world this would be without children playing. Then, too, you know, toys are quite as large and as important a part of their education as the books which they use later.

Half the joy of Christmas, both for parents and children, is seeing the toys before Christmas,—no better place than Best's Toy Shop

NEWS PRINT PRICE NEAR A SETTLEMENT

TRIAL MAY BE AVOIDED

But Unless Agreement with Government Is Reached Compulsory Action by Congress Is Expected.

It was predicted yesterday by men in close touch with the newsprint paper situation that the present uncertainty in the situation would soon be dispelled and that a reasonable price for paper would be established either by agreement between the manufacturers and the Government or by compulsory Government action. It is expected that the means by which the paper controversy will be settled will be indicated when the banker and six paper manufacturers under indictment for conspiracy to raise the price of paper are arraigned for trial on Monday in the Federal District Court here.

The settlement of the present controversy, according to these authorities, will take one of two directions. Either the indicted men will escape prosecution by entering into an agreement under which the price of paper will be fixed, or the trial will proceed as scheduled, and Senator Smith's resolution authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to fix the price of paper will be adopted by Congress soon after it begins its session in December.

None of the lawyers or principals in the suit of the Government against the paper men would discuss the probable developments yesterday, but men familiar with the paper situation and not personally concerned in the suit expressed the hope, and, in some cases, the confident belief, that the conferences which are known to have been held by representatives of the Government and the indicted manufacturers for some time past would result in a settlement of all of the issues involved in the controversy.

A man whose position enables him to observe the paper situation with special knowledge and understanding, but who asked that his name be withheld, yesterday gave the following outline of past and probable developments.

"The Federal Trade Commission," he said, "after an investigation of the paper industry last Spring, sought to bind the manufacturers to an agreement to sell newsprint paper at a price which, for most publishers, would be 2½ cents a pound at the mill. Many manufacturers signed this agreement, but others refused. As a result of such refusal and because some who signed did not live up to the agreement the whole plan failed, and the Federal Trade Commission, which had made a report, that paper manufacturers were demanding excess profits, turned over to the Department of Justice evidence which it had discovered during its investigation and which it believed indicated a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law on the part of the executive members of the Newsprint Manufacturers' Association.

"On the basis of this evidence, supplemented by information obtained in a Grand Jury investigation, the Government succeeded in having six manufacturers—namely, George H. Mead, Philip T. Dodge, Edward W. Backus, George Chahoon, Jr., C. H. P. Gould, and Frank J. Jaroslawbrenner—and Alexander Smith, a Chicago banker, indicted last April. The indicted manufacturers directly and indirectly control 75 per cent. of the news print paper output of Canada and the United States, and it was charged that they were able to and did control the market, conspiring to limit the supply and raise the price of paper. The banker, Smith, was charged with being a party to the conspiracy through his financial aid.

"The trial was first set for Oct. 8, then adjourned to Nov. 5, and finally fixed for Nov. 26. These postponements indicated, and those observing developments learned, that conferences between the manufacturers and the Government were being held with a view to the amicable settlement of all of the issues at stake, it being generally believed that the indicted men would escape prosecution if they came to an agreement concerning the price of paper. At the psychological moment just before Congress adjourned last October, Senator Smith of the Committee on Printing, presented a report from the committee strongly condemning the manufacturers in the paper industry for seeking excessive profits, and recommending the passage of a resolution empowering the Federal Trade Commission to fix the price of paper. Since the adjournment of Congress, I have received information which has convinced me that the Smith resolution will be passed as soon as the next Congress meets unless the price of paper is established by voluntary agreement before that time.

"As the situation now stands, therefore, the leading manufacturers are facing trial in what the Government believes is a strong case against them, and the Smith resolutions are hanging over their heads. They may fear with reason that the price fixed by the Federal Trade Commission, if such power is given to it, will be 2½ cents a pound, the commission's original figure; so, if they can obtain a slightly better price by agreement and escape prosecution at the same time, they may be willing to settle everything out of court.

"My personal opinion is that the manufacturers will follow this course. I have no authoritative information, but, in my opinion, there is an almost overwhelming probability that the price of paper will be settled by agreement and that the indicted men will not be prosecuted. If this is not done I believe that the trial will proceed, with the Government determined to convict, and that the Smith resolutions will have the force of law soon after Congress opens."

This interview seemed to express the general opinion of men interested in the paper industry.

NAVY NEEDS MORE "EYES."

Government Will Tag and Attempt to Return All Borrowed Glasses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The patriotic response to the call for binoculars, telescopes, and spyglasses issued by the navy has been most gratifying, but from letters received at the Navy Department it is evident many more glasses would be placed at the disposal of the navy for the duration of the war if assurances could be given that they would be returned to their owners at the termination of the war. To provide for this contingency a general order has been issued to commanders of all vessels of the navy and all supply officers afloat, as follows:

"To each glass will be securely fastened a tag bearing the name and address of the donor. Particular care is to be taken by the person in whose custody this glass is placed to see that this tag is not removed under any circumstances, as it is the purpose of the navy to return the glasses to their proper owners after the war, if possible.

"The supply officer will also see that the custody receipt taken for the glasses bears the name and address of the donor. Permanent records will likewise be kept at the Navy Department to assure the return of the glasses at the termination of the war."

There is no question that a great deal of historic interest would attach to a glass that had served on a vessel of the United States Navy during this great war," said Assistant Secretary Roosevelt today. "Although the Government cannot guarantee the return of all glasses purchased at $1, every effort will be made to do so through the preservation of proper records, to assure the return of glasses in existence when the war is over. At all times it will be known exactly where these glasses are doing service.

"It is not possible to impress too forcibly upon the American people the urgent need for glasses. The Naval Observatory, which has cognizance of optical equipment, is swamped with requisitions from every ship of the navy for additional glasses. They are difficult to obtain in this country owing to the fact that in the past glasses and lenses used in naval operations have always been secured from France, Switzerland, and Germany."

Binoculars, spyglasses, and telescopes are to be sent to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, care of the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C., who will make acknowledgment of all glasses received, whether accepted or rejected. The navy disbursing office will forward $1 for all glasses accepted.

MANN'S TENURE IN DOUBT.

Leader's Illness May Revive Republican Contest in House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Difficulties over Republican leadership in the House during the approaching session promise to be revived because of Minority Leader Mann's ill-health.

Representative Mann has returned to Washington somewhat improved in physical condition since Congress adjourned, but he said today he did not expect to be able to remain here much of the time this Winter.

SALOONS IN CHICAGO FEWER

1,100 Quit Business, War and Sunday Closing Being Factors.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Compulsory Sunday closing and conditions brought about by the war have driven 1,100 Chicago saloons out of business with a resultant loss to the city of $1,100,000 a year in revenue. The number of saloons on Nov. 1, 1915, was 7,152. On May 1 of this year it was 6,653. The number of licenses in effect last night was 5,916, but probably 50 or 100 more licenses will be granted.

The five principal causes given by saloon keepers for quitting are: The new Federal tax, the drive of the drys, the failure of the wets to clean up the business, the extensive sale of beers from wagons, the mobilization of the national army. Of these the one most frequently given is the last. The taking of 25,000 young men out of Chicago for the national army has decreased the trade of the small saloon keepers, especially in the outlying districts, according to the views expressed by those who visit the license counter in the County Collector's office.

Some of the liquor men said that the dry sentiment was growing, but they were inclined to put the blame on the leaders of the wet organizations. They asserted that the heads of the liquor associations would not allow enough regulation, and that lack of it was injuring the business and aiding the drys.

Exemption Denied J. G. Scripps.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 23.—To James G. Scripps, directing head of newspapers owned by his father, E. W. Scripps of San Diego, and Chairman of the Board of the United Press Associations and the Newspaper Enterprise Association, was denied exemption from military service today by the district exemption board. The appeal from a San Diego board was filed by his father and supported by his business associates, who contended he would be valuable to the United States as the chief executive of the several newspapers and press service.

WHAT AMERICA MUST DO

Germany will be defeated by France, Great Britain, and the United States, and at the last, the lion's share of the task will belong to the United States. This opinion, advanced by many competent observers since Russia's lapse into anarchy and Italy's staggering reverses, is accepted by our press in all parts of the land in a spirit of quiet and unfaltering resolution. "We have drawn the sword and we might as well throw away the scabbard," exclaims the Chicago Herald, "for it is to be a fight to a finish and German successes in Russia and Italy indicate that the struggle may be prolonged."

The only German drive that the Allies have reason really to fear, many of our papers declare, is the coming drive for peace terms that will leave Germany secure in the possession of her present absolute control over middle Europe, and which will doubtless find expression through various pacifist outlets in America. "What I am opposed to is not the feeling of the pacifists," says President Wilson, "but their stupidity. My heart is with them but my mind has a contempt for them. I want peace, but I know how to get it and they do not."

The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST for November 24th, deals with the present war crisis and it throws a flood of light upon the subject that is stirring the soul of America.

From the steaming jungles of Senegal, the fertile plains of the Argentine, the temple shades of Japan, the teak forests of Burma, the coco-palms of Hawaii, the blue-gum groves of Australia, and the far-flung acres of Saskatchewan, a single mail recently brought to the editors of THE LITERARY DIGEST a sheaf of letters telling of the writers' gratitude for the opportunity afforded by this most comprehensive of news-recorders of keeping posted on all the great events of the day. Other letters tell how it keeps the prospectors in a far-western mining-camp in touch with the world's affairs and how it is passed eagerly from hand to hand by the "Tommies" and "Sammies" in the trenches on the Somme. Wherever men gather together it is read from cover to cover for its crisp, condensed, and wholly impartial summaries of current happenings. It is cosmopolitan in its scope and universal in its sympathies. To read it is to become a citizen of the world.

MINES IN SIX STATES POOL COAL OUTPUT

Ohio and Pennsylvania Operators Join in Distribution Plan as a War Measure.

GARFIELD SANCTIONS IT

Also Notifies Oklahomans He Will Take Over Their Properties If They Close Down.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—A comprehensive plan for pooling the output of coal from mine fields in a district including parts of Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Michigan and Tennessee has been worked out and adopted by the big operators, who have formed the Coal Shippers' Terminal Pool Association, with the approval of the United States Fuel Administration.

The step, which was taken voluntarily in an effort to facilitate deliveries to essential industries and bring about a proper distribution, is considered one of the most important developments in solving the problem presented by car shortage and insufficient trackage.

There have been predictions that the Government eventually would take over the entire coal output as it comes from the mines, pool and resell it, but the present effort is not being taken under orders from the Fuel Administration. It is considered probable that the voluntary pooling plan will be adopted in other fields. The question of a Government pool will be permitted to hold over at least for a time.

The fact that by far the greater part of the coal output of the country was under contract when the Government prices went into effect has hampered the developments of a pooling scheme on a large scale. Most of the contracts involved were for the delivery of coal at considerably above the Government range, and where these were bonafide they were permitted to stand. It is expected, however, that the majority of the contracts will expire by Jan. 1, and that by March or April at the latest practically all of the contracts for coal at other than Government prices will have been fulfilled, thus opening the way for a general pooling of the nation's output if conditions at that time warrant it.

Pool Formed at Cleveland.

The plan for the first big pool was worked out at a meeting of operators in Cleveland, and resolutions adopted included a statement that "the coal operators here present agree to form and maintain pools at the main distributing points in the Central territory for the purpose of enabling the railroad companies to relieve congestion at the different railroad terminals and facilitate the movement of coal to the consumer."

Local pools or divisions probably will be established by the operators in the Central District at Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Canton, Akron, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Penn.; Detroit, Mich., and other congested terminals.

Detailed plans were prepared to govern the pooling arrangement and a complete report soon will be rendered. One resolution adopted gives an excellent idea of the scheme. It follows:

"Both the executive and advisory and local committees must associate themselves in an advisory way with such railroad officials as will bring about a complete harmony in the carrying out of the orders of the local pool and result in the accomplishment of the purposes of the association. It shall further be the duty of the executive and advisory committee to secure the approval of the executive heads of the interested railroad companies to the plans and purposes of the association, and likewise the assurance in such manner as the executive and advisory committee may deem essential to co-operation and execution of the orders of local committees, compatible at all times to traffic conditions and to the distribution of fuel both to and at terminals and to way points, in such manner as will cause the elimination so far as possible of cross-hauls, interchange, and switching service, and shall thereby insure the prompt unloading and return of empty cars to mines.

"The object of the association is distinctly a war measure and therefore a patriotic duty. If each will do his full share there is nothing greatly complicated in the conduct of this association, and with patience on the part of all members and with the great constructive good that can be thus accomplished, together with the Federal Fuel Administration, the Railroad Priority Board, and the Council of National Defense, a service to our country second to none in importance can be thus attained."

It is believed by many experts that a pooling system along the lines suggested will accomplish untold good in the distribution of coal, and the experiment will be watched closely. The present Government prices are effective until Jan. 1, and the policy to be adopted in the future will then be determined. It is probable that with a few adjustments the price schedule will be renewed even though the Government should decide on a nation-wide pooling system under Federal control. The plan to substitute a cost plus profit basis is not looked for at present, it is said, as more effective.

Decision was reached by the Fuel Administration today to revoke the priority order for shipments of coal to the northwest by the lake route on Nov. 30. By that time it is felt that the needs of the territory will have been supplied and the ruling will have the effect of releasing large quantities of coal, especially from the West Virginia fields, for the New England States, where there is great need of additional supplies.

May Commandeer Mines.

H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, continued conferences today in regard to the railroad situation with Halo Holden, President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and with Howard Elliott, of the New Haven lines. He also took up consideration of threats from bituminous operators in Oklahoma that they would be unable to carry out their wage agreements with the mine workers unless they received additional increased mine prices over and above the general increase of 45 cents a ton allowed. The increase and agreement were to have been made effective Nov. 1.

Mr. Garfield's reply was that the mines must be kept operating and that the Government would do the job if the present owners attempted to shut down on production. He sent a message to the operators, stating that he was prepared to commandeer the mines if the test came. It was the first official statement by Mr. Garfield in a specific case that the Government was ready to take such drastic action. The message follows:

"Replying to your telegram, will not consent to change forty-five-cent increase to cover increases of wages. If, as total result, you are unable to operate at a profit, the way to proceed is to file statements here showing your 1916 total costs and costs for 1917 month by month, and meanwhile keep the mines in operation. Alternative will be to turn over mines to me for operation pending determination of costs. In other words, the only way in which the relation of increases of wages to increase allowed by President's orders in prices of coal can now be adjusted is by showing actual labor costs in conjunction with total costs, as compared with earlier period above indicated. Under no circumstances must mines be closed down."

Steps were also taken to continue the operation of new mines opened before Sept. 1, 1916, at heavy expense, in order to take advantage of the high prices obtainable before the Government schedule went into effect. It has been stated that the Government prices made it impossible for the mines to continue.

Mines in this class will be operated under the direct supervision and control of the United States Fuel Administration. Such mines will be allowed to charge prices which will cover their producing cost and a profit of fifteen cents per ton. This profit will be allowed only after each mining operation in this class has been developed to a point where its daily shipments are 250 tons.

COAL FAMINE ACUTE IN OHIO.

Cleveland Lights May Go Out—Steel Plant Out of Fuel.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 23.—With thousands of Cleveland families shivering in their homes today owing to lack of coal, and municipal and privately owned light plants threatened with the necessity of closing down, this city's coal situation is the most acute in the history of the fuel trade, according to city officials.

H. H. Johnson, State Fuel Administrator, was in Washington today conferring with H. A. Garfield in the hope of finding relief for the crisis in Cleveland.

With the Weather Bureau predicting a temperature for tonight of eight degrees below freezing thousands of families face actual suffering.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 23.—The coal shortage in the Mahoning Valley has become so acute that one of the principal iron and steel companies has notified the Fuel Administration unless relief is afforded within twenty-four hours it will have to close its plant. The company is said to be working upon Government and Allied orders for steel.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 23.—With the temperature below the freezing mark 1,972 families here are practically without coal today, according to reports compiled by police officials. Cordwood and soft coal are being obtained by the police for emergency, as very little hard coal is on sale in the city.

NEW WAR STYLE LUNCHEON.

Mt. Holyoke Alumnae Will Bring Food from Their Homes.

Because of the food situation the alumnae of Mount Holyoke College, at their annual luncheon to be held at the Young Women's Christian Association, Lexington Avenue and Fifty-second Street, this afternoon, will bring their own food from their homes, "attractively done up in boxes," according to the announcement which was sent to the members. Moreover, these boxes are to be auctioned off and the receipts turned over to the Mount Holyoke War Relief Fund. The auction is to be held at 1 o'clock and the luncheon will follow at 1:30.

Among the speakers at the luncheon will be Dr. Edmund Otis Hovey of the Museum of Natural History, who was in the arctic for two years, where he went with the Crocker Land Relief Expedition. Mrs. Rogers H. Bacon, another of the speakers, will tell of the activities of the National League for Women's Service.

OPPOSE SIX-CENT FARES.

Representatives of Mayors' Conference Condemn the Proposal.

ALBANY, Nov. 23.—In a letter to the Public Service Commission the cities of the State contend that it would be dangerous as a matter of public policy to allow any increase in trolley fares from 5 to 6 cents to relieve a financial condition for which they trace overcapitalization as largely responsible. They urge the commission to "let the water be squeezed out of the stocks and bonds before authority of the State shall approve, or be asked to approve, rate increases."

The letter, which is signed by the committee of city attorneys appointed by the Mayors' Conference and of which R. S. C. Drummond, City Attorney of Auburn, is Chairman, urges the commission to consider several questions of fact which the cities regard as vital in the 6-cent fare controversy. Regarding overcapitalization the committee says:

"For years it has been a matter of common understanding that such difficulties as the electric street railroads may have been laboring under were largely attributable to overcapitalization in the good old days' as the jocular phrase has it: not merely imprudent overissues of stocks and bonds, but deliberate loading down of capitalization by insiders for their own profit. And it has been charged and has been fairly apparent, that surplus, reserves, replacements, efficiency of management—all or many of them, have been sacrificed for, or at least subordinated unto, interest and dividends on what is nothing more or less than water in the capitalization. Banking circles are aware of it, receivers prove it and proclaim it, managers admit it. We regard this matter as of primary importance. In all the cases in which we appear we shall contend accordingly."

HYLAN AT GREENE CO. DINNER

Again Advocates Municipal Ownership of Transit Lines.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan was the principal speaker at a dinner of the Board of Directors of the Greene County Society in New York City, held at Churchill's, Fiftieth Street and Broadway, last night. Judge Hylan spoke briefly on municipal ownership, declaring the city should own the transit lines.

Andrew Galvan was elected President; Edward T. Dalzell, Vice President; D. J. Cronin, Second Vice President; Allen R. Hicks, Third Vice President; Dorville Coe, Fourth Vice President, and Charles E. Rickerson, Secretary-Treasurer. The new Board of Directors includes Edward Reynolds, E. B. Van Dusen, Raymond Fiero, Edwin T. Dalzell, Henry W. Showers, Charles E. Russell, Dr. William Stevens, and Alexander Reed. Judge Hylan was President of the organization in 1912.

Spent $30,328 for Mitchel.

ALBANY, Nov. 23.—The campaign statement of the New York County Committee on Public Education, which was one of the organizations supporting Mayor John Purroy Mitchel in the recent election, was filed today with the Secretary of State by Henry MacDonald, Treasurer. The report showed that receipts were $30,875 and disbursements $30,328.54. The largest contributors were A. Carnegie and George R. Sheldon, $5,000 each; M. Friedsam, $5,100; S. A. Lewisohn, $3,500, and the Mitchel Campaign Committee, $500.

School Loyalty Inquiry Goes On.

Investigation into the personal views and classroom methods of many other public school teachers besides the three already suspended is being conducted, according to Board of Education officials yesterday. No teachers have yet been found, however, it was said, who actually hold positively treasonable views. The hearing of Thomas Mufson, A. Henry Schneer and Samuel Schmalhausen, the three suspended teachers, will take place on Monday, Dec. 3, it was announced.

HOT EXCHANGE EXPECTED

Ex-Secretary Willing to Deny That He Told the Senator of Having Warned the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Issues involved in the early controversy between Germany and the United States over the submarine outrages will be brought to the fore at the reopening of the Senate inquiry next Monday into charges against Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, accused of making a disloyal speech at St. Paul. The subject will be injected into the hearing because of an alleged remark made by Senator La Follette that William J. Bryan, while Secretary of State, had informed him that he had personally told President Wilson that the sailing of passengers upon a ship carrying munitions was contrary to law.

Soon after the Senator's St. Paul speech, Mr. Bryan denied that he had made any such statement and the hearing, therefore, will impugn the veracity of Senator La Follette if Mr. Bryan, under oath, repeats his previous denial. Mr. Bryan has expressed a willingness to appear and deny the assertion, which constitutes one of the crucial points in the La Follette speech.

Senator La Follette will cross-examine the witnesses, and the testimony of the ex-Secretary may produce a hot exchange. Since the United States entered the war Mr. Bryan has changed front, and has declared in favor of a vigorous war as the only means to peace. Senator La Follette is expected to demand that the State Department produce all the documents bearing on the Lusitania case. Whether the department will comply is doubtful, as it probably will be held that such action will be "incompatible with the public interest."

The particular portion of Senator La Follette's speech that Mr. Bryan will appear to deny, as quoted in the Senate document purporting to contain a report of the St. Paul speech is this:

"Ah! But somebody will tell you American rights are involved. What American rights? The right of some venturesome person to ride upon a munition-laden vessel in violation of an American statute that no vessel which carries explosives shall carry passengers. Four days before the Lusitania sailed President Wilson was warned in person by Secretary Bryan that the Lusitania had 5,000,000 rounds of ammunition on board, besides explosives, and that the passengers who proposed to sail on that vessel were sailing in violation of a statute of this country, that no passengers shall travel on a railroad train or sail upon a vessel which carries dangerous explosives. And Mr. Bryan appealed to President Wilson to stop passengers from sailing upon the Lusitania.

"I am giving you some history that maybe has not come to you heretofore—the grievances that carried this country into the war, into a war the results of which, as to the loss of life and burdens, financial burdens, that will be put upon us cannot be calculated by any mind. I say that the conditions which carried us into the war needed to be weighed carefully, for I annunciate no new doctrine, but the doctrine of Daniel Webster, who said that when the Mexican war was on that it was the right of the people of this country to determine for themselves whether there had been a sufficient grievance of the people to incur all the burdens and risks that go with a war of this kind."

Before the last Congress adjourned there was a disposition to permit the charges against Senator La Follette to drop after a few perfunctory hearings. Since then the temper of the country has been found to favor a thorough sifting of the charges, and developments in Wisconsin, where a Senator is to be elected to succeed Senator Husting, killed in a shooting accident, has placed a new aspect on the situation. If carried to their logical conclusion the hearings, it is argued, will make for good in their deterrent effect upon pro-Germans. Also, it is contended, they may have a decided effect upon the Wisconsin Senatorial election by aiding in the choice of an out-and-out American to the vacant seat.

WATER BOARD DEFENDS SHANDAKEN TUNNEL

Gives Out Text of Letter to Hylan Refusing to Abandon $12,000,000 Extension.

The Board of Water Supply yesterday made public a letter to Mayor-elect Hylan, replying to his suggestion that the $12,000,000 contract for the Shandaken tunnel be held up, by saying that the board would not do so. The tunnel will connect the Schoharie watershed with the Catskill Aqueduct. In giving its reasons for not acceding to the request of the members of the next Board of Estimate, the Board of Water Supply stated that the tunnel was a last connecting link in the city's new water system, and that not to build it would mean that the system, with a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons a day, would have without the tunnel an available supply of only 250,000,000 gallons. A statement by the board said that it had hoped that Judge Hylan would make the letter public, but, inasmuch as he had not done it, the board would do so, in the belief that the people of the city should know the facts.

The letter began by repeating that part of the Hylan request which said that in view of the high prices no new undertaking should be started unless absolutely necessary. The contract was let on Nov. 6, and the request of Judge Hylan was that the board should not give the contractors word to go ahead. The reply then stated that the Shandaken tunnel was no new project, but a part of the original plan adopted in 1905.

The board made it plain that it was a State-constituted body and that the city administration had no authority over it, "as the Corporation Counsel has frequently had occasion to inform previous administrations." It stated that it had made up its mind about the water supply plans and saw no reason now to change them.

In reply to the Hylan statement that the work should not be done unless there was an "overwhelming necessity," the board said "that an 'overwhelming necessity' exists for the prosecution of this work can readily be established. First, to safeguard the health and comfort of the people of the City of New York—for drinking, sanitation, industrial, and fire prevention purposes; second, for financial reasons."

"The Catskill Aqueduct, the 'completion' of which has recently been celebrated," the board said, "has been built to the full capacity of the 500,000,000 gallons daily as originally contemplated, but the Esopus watershed furnished enough water to make use of half of its capacity only. For the $140,000,000 so far expended for a system capable of carrying to the city 500,000,000 gallons daily, only 250,000,000 gallons daily have been supplied, and for a relatively small additional expense this supply will be doubled and the whole Catskill water system completed."

The board then stated that if the work did not go on, the overhead charges, interest, and amortization, together with maintenance and operation charges would exceed the cost of the Schoharie development, and that the postponement of construction for five years would cost the city more than the whole cost of building the tunnel now. It called attention to the fact that the cost of the work was paid out of 50-year bonds, "redeemable long years after the present war."

The board stated that the immediate construction of the tunnel in the present water needs of the city was of paramount importance. While the Esopus watershed was supplying 250,000,000 gallons daily, the city was using from 250,000,000 to 450,000,000 gallons daily, drawing upon the reserve reservoirs, until the water in the Ashokan reservoir was now twelve feet below full level. It also called attention to the growing needs of Queens, and of Westchester towns, which must be supplied by the City of New York.

The board states that it is not reasonable to expect that within a few years after the war that labor will again be as cheap as it was before the war. And it added:

"In the doing of this work extending over a period of seven years, the estimate of expenditure for the first two years involves very little money and small man power, and for this reason will not appreciably enter into the economic side of war conditions."

The letter concludes by saying:

"Water is the most fundamental necessity for any community, and is especially so for a great commercial and manufacturing centre like New York. It must be provided in unfailing abundance. Due to the magnitude of the works, requiring many years for construction, the board charged with providing additional supplies of water cannot wait until the capacities of existing systems are seriously exceeded before beginning new construction. If foresight had not been exercised twelve years ago and the works now being completed had not been actively undertaken and energetically pushed to completion the city would now be in dire straits. Therefore, it is our judgment that the interests of the city will be best served by the continuous and speedy prosecution of this work to its final completion."

The letter was signed by Charles Strauss, President, and Charles N. Chadwick and John F. Galvin, Commissioners of the Board of Water Supply.

STRIKE TO BE UNIONS' LAST RESORT IN WAR

Federation of Labor Agrees That Work Shall Not Cease Where It Can Be Avoided.

RESENT PICKET INJUNCTION

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The American Federation of Labor tonight, by a unanimous vote, adopted a statement of the conditions and principles that must be applied to industrial problems arising from the war so far as union labor is concerned. The declaration is regarded as in line with the general understanding that has existed between President Wilson and Samuel Gompers, but there are some points that have been in doubt which the statement clarifies. The declaration does not say there shall be no strikes.

"It is advisable," the final paragraph says, "that production should not cease because of an apparent injustice or oversight contained in an award, for it is necessary to the nation's production as well as the welfare of the trade union movement that there should be no cessation of work except as a last resort."

The right to organize is claimed as essential to the solution of all problems arising between employer and labor, and equal representation will be asked with the employer on all wage boards and commissions.

Wage conditions, the statement says, will be governed by several vital factors to be considered apart from the increased cost of living, some of these factors mentioned being the comparative wage scale in other establishments in the same district and whether it was reached by collective bargaining between employer and employe.

The federation reaffirmed its position against Government by injunction, and declared that any injunction dealing with the relationship of employer and employe, based on the dictum that labor is property, "be held as usurpation and disregarded, let the consequences be what they may.

The declaration was adopted in connection with a resolution relating to a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the State of Washington, enjoining strikers from picketing. The resolution asked the convention to condemn the "reactionary attitude" of the court and to give its best counsel and effort to the affected workers. A committee favorably reporting the resolution to the convention added:

"This committee holds that decisions and practices of this kind are more harmful to our Government than any other influence in our land. The time is here when the legislative agencies of our State governments must be the exclusive means for the making of laws and rules of conduct. The courts must be denied the powers never intended to be exercised by courts. Government by injunction must end. Your committee holds that government by our courts by injunction for the benefit of the employing interest is in conflict with and contrary to the rights, liberties, and freedom of our people."

A resolution charging the United Hebrew Trades with attempting to undermine the American Federation of Labor so far as the control of the clothing trade is concerned brought on an extended debate. The resolution also charged that the United Hebrew Trades was instrumental in the formation of the People's Council and the Workmen's Council, pacifist organizations.

The convention approved a suggestion by the Adjustment Committee that a committee of five from the Central Federated Union of New York, five from the United Hebrew Trades, and members of the Executive Council meet to adjust differences and to review the charges. Failing to secure unity of action, the Executive Council was authorized to proceed with a reorganization movement.

The Committee on Education is prepared to submit to the convention recommendations on several important resolutions, including one protesting against the change in rates on second-class postage included in the war revenue law.

The resolution was submitted by delegates representing the photographers, the printing and pressmen, stereotypers, bookbinders, the Typographical Union, and the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

"It is the opinion of this convention," the resolution reads, "that Congress should not have altered the system of rates on second-class postage; that the system of taxes provided for are not a legitimate tax in that they are merely a destructive charge against a fundamental operation of a great and invaluable industry; that it will not raise revenue, but actually destroy business from which the Government seeks revenue."

SHOW MOVIES IN COURT.

A moving picture exhibition conducted in court by a blind attorney was the feature of the trial of a suit involving the use of the photograph of Sergius Michael Trufanoff, better known as "Iliodor the Monk," in the film "The Tyranny of the Romanoffs." Maurice E. Blumenthal, counsel for the film company, produced the film in court in support of his contention that Trufanoff had posed for the inserts in the film. They showed him garbed in a black tuxedo coat.

After Justice Gavegan had witnessed the film for a few minutes he asked if it was all like what he had seen, and when counsel replied affirmatively Justice Gavegan had the exhibition stopped. It was alleged that Trufanoff received $900 for posing. The case was not finished.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Western New York awoke this morning in the grip of a heavy snow storm, the first of the season, that came out of the north in the night. Six inches had fallen at 8 o'clock and the storm showed no signs of abating. Traffic on steam and electric roads was delayed.

COURT REJECTS A BARGAIN.

Factory Smoker Offers to Serve Time on Idle Saturday and Sunday.

Magistrate Edward Clarke, who was sitting in the Long Island City Police Court yesterday, was compelled to turn down a perfectly straight business proposition that was suggested to him by Samuel Gelbert, a finisher in the Rosenwasser shoe factory in Long Island City. Gelbert had been found guilty of smoking in the factory, and a fine of $20 or two days in jail had been fixed as the punishment. He indicated that he was unwilling to pay the fine, and then as he was about to be taken back to the pen to be sent to jail he said to the Magistrate:

"If it makes no difference to you, Judge, your Honor, I will come back here on Saturday and Sunday and stay in jail. I have work today, but I don't work on Saturdays, and the shop is closed down on Sundays. You see, I be nothing out and you be nothing out."

Magistrate Clarke said he could enter into no agreement with Gelbert about the way he should pay his fine, and the prisoner was taken to the jail, insisting that the Magistrate did not know a good bargain when he heard it.

RAILROAD SEIZES WIRES.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 23.—The Great Northern Railroad has taken over all of the property of the Western Union Telegraph Company along the road's right of way between St. Paul and Seattle, it was announced here today.

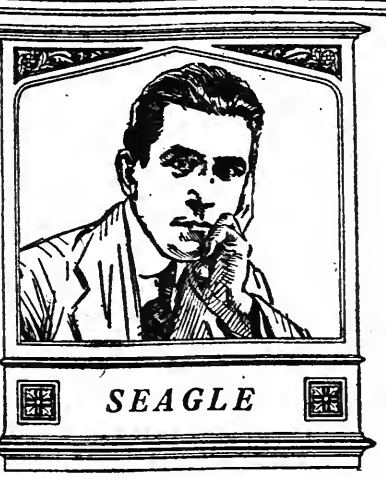
The property is valued at more than $2,000,000. It is said, and the transfer eliminates the old operating contract between the companies.

EXHIBITORS LOSE FILM SUIT.

Injunction in First Test of War Tax on Pictures Dismissed.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 23.—Common Pleas Judge Phillips today dismissed the injunction suit brought by thirteen Cleveland film exhibitors against eleven New York film producers seeking to restrain the latter from adding what they alleged was an exorbitant sum for war tax purposes to the rental price of films. It was the first film war tax test suit in the country and brought an array of film producers here.

Judge Phillips said the court was powerless to act in the case of producers raising the rental price of films, no matter whether it was called war tax or not. He said the case might come under the Anti-Trust law. The exhibitors will meet later to decide future action.



Oscar Seagle

Appearing at Aeolian Hall, November 26th

Columbia Grafonola

Oscar Seagle, baritone, is one of the few American artists who are classed with the great masters in the field of song. His interpretative ability, his glorious voice, his faultless diction, his thorough musicianship, combine in making him a singer of whom his country may well be proud.

Seagle makes records exclusively for Columbia—and what a variety of entertainment is afforded by his diversity of gifts! For here is an artist equally at home in grand opera, oratorio, old English ballads, Irish songs, French chansons, hymns, or negro melodies.

Ask any Columbia dealer to let you hear Oscar Seagle sing for you. Just say what kind of song you would like to hear, for, whatever your taste in vocal music, this singer can gratify it.

You will realize, too, as you listen to any of his records, the superb quality of Columbia reproduction and the matchless tone of the Columbia Grafonola.

REFORM 1918 STYLES AS A WAR ECONOMY

40% LESS IN MEN'S SUITS

Makers, Not Consumers, Will Be Consulted, and All Unnecessary Trimmings Barred.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—With the aid of the French Ambassador, M. Jusserand, reformation in women's dress styles for 1918 with a saving of 25 per cent. in the amount of material used has been effected by the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense. Men's clothing styles also have been simplified and to a great extent standardized with a saving of about 40 per cent. in material.

The story of how changes were wrought in the proposed creations of Parisian modistes for the American market next year was told today by W. S. Gifford, Director of the council, in announcing that the Economy Board was studying the problem of so-called essential and non-essential industries with a view to effecting readjustments as gradually as possible.

Faced with a shortage of wool the Economy Board called on the French Ambassador and explained that conservation of cloth was necessary to enable the nation to provide uniforms for its armies. M. Jusserand communicated with his Government with the result that the co-operation of the designers was procured. Whether dresses will be shorter or tighter, or merely less elaborate, has not been announced.

In all cases where it is necessary to curtail use of raw materials, the War Industries Board and the Commercial Economy Board would work with the manufacturers rather than with the consumers, Mr. Gifford said. This was decided after close study of all phases of industries likely to be affected by the war, in which it was found that injustice and waste would result from efforts to classify certain products as nonessential to the prosecution of the war, or as a frivolous use of material needed elsewhere.

While the Economy Board frowns on the use of unnecessary belts and trimmings, the public will not be urged to forego such luxuries, but the makers will be asked to stop their manufacture. Clothing already made with these adjuncts might be a total waste, it was pointed out, if a "slacker" charge were laid against them.

When shortage of raw material or coal threatens an industry with curtailment or suspension, the Economy Board will inform all such manufacturers. Advice will be given as to how the factories may be turned to war work or their output reduced gradually, and every effort will be made to avoid a sudden stoppage of work which might have a disastrous economic effect.

HOME DINNERS FOR TROOPS.

Spartanburg Women Organize to Entertain Wadsworth Men.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 23.—In order that every enlisted man of the Twenty-seventh Division shall get at least one home cooked meal in his period of training at Camp Wadsworth, the "take a soldier home to dinner army" was organized today among the housewives of Spartenburg. The organization's officers have not been named, but will include a Commander in Chief, several Generals, four Colonels, and so on down the military scale of rank. It is likely that Mrs. John F. O'Ryan, wife of the Major General, will be asked to act as Commander in Chief, with army officers' wives and local women evenly dividing the rest of the "commissions."

It is planned by a system of card indexing to have the households of the city entertain different enlisted men each Sunday.

Approximately 500 additional men and officers were shifted today from first line units to second line regiments. About half that number were advanced from the reserve to the picked organizations. The transfers were made so that none but men absolutely physically fit and without dependents would remain in the first line.

CORONER HAD NO WITNESSES

Vogel Says District Attorney Kept Them from His Inquest.

Coroner Vogel and District Attorney O'Leary, both of Queens County, have had a clash over witnesses which the former says the latter virtually "stole" from him to prevent him holding an inquest yesterday afternoon. The Coroner said he adjourned the inquest six times at the request of the District Attorney, but had set it positively for yesterday afternoon. He says the District Attorney on Thursday issued subpoenas for the witnesses to be at his office at the hour for which the Coroner had scheduled the inquest. The Coroner had no witnesses, and adjourned the case until Monday.

Coroner Vogel said: "Unless the District Attorney apologizes for this day's work I shall not allow him or any of his representatives to appear in this court while I am holding office." The case was that of the death of Harry Alexander, 28, of 35 Third Street, Long Island City, who was shot and killed in a saloon brawl on Aug. 3 last. Joe Martin and Thomas Comiskey, brothers, are under indictment for the murder, and will go to trial on Monday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Ruth Law, who has applied to the War Department for a commission in the aviation section of the Signal Corps, called today at the White House. She declined to discuss the purpose of her visit, but said she believed the prospect of her getting a commission was very favorable.

Miss Law holds the American nonstop flight record, and has participated in Liberty Loan drives by dropping "bombs" in various cities. When she called on President Wilson today Miss Law wore a regulation officers' uniform under special permission said to have been granted by the War Department.

REVOLUTIONARY FLAG FOUND AT DOBBS FERRY

Special to The New York Times.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Workmen excavating today alongside the foundation wall of the most ancient building in this town, in Main Street near Chestnut, dislodged a loose stone in the wall exposing a crevice in which was a buff-colored waistcoat of the sort worn by General Washington's Continental troops, rolled about a faded flag, both of which were later pronounced to be genuine and rare relics of the War for Independence.

The coat was motheaten and almost in shreds, but the flag, made of linen, was well preserved. It is 24 by 36 inches and painted across the top are the words: "Give us Liberty or Give us Death." At the left are pictures of two daggers with a red hat resting on the tip of one.

Michel Lavista, owner of the building, which he is remodeling for a garage, carried the flag and coat to Benjamin M. Shepard, Principal of the Dobbs Ferry Public School.

"I believe this is a genuine war flag that was carried by Continental troops in the battle of White Plains," said Mr. Shepard. "The coat, too, is undoubtedly a part of the uniform of that period." The Principal then compared the relics with engravings in the school library and found them to correspond in every detail.

"The battle of White Plains covered a much wider area than the district from which the battle took its name," said Mr. Shepard, "and the fighting extended west to the Hudson and far north of White Plains. This would account for the relics reaching Dobbs Ferry. Some soldier probably placed the flag where it was found for temporary safety, and the coat was merely wrapped around it for protection." The flag and coat are to be placed on exhibition in the school.

TO SUCCEED MISS DAVIS.

Captain Now at Upton to be Head of the Parole Board.

Mayor Mitchel announced yesterday that on Dec. 27, at the expiration of the term of Dr. Katharine B. Davis, Chairman of the Board of Parole, he would appoint to that place Captain Bertram De N. Cruger. The term is for ten years and the salary is $7,500 a year.

Captain Cruger is now a member of the board. He is on leave of absence as a Captain in charge of a depot brigade at Camp Upton. He was formerly executive secretary to the Mayor. It was not known at the Mayor's office yesterday whether Captain Cruger could obtain his release from the army to accept the appointment.

DWIGGINS INDICTED AGAIN.

County Grand Jury Charges Larceny Against Bond Swindler.

Elmer Dwiggins, the Bankers' Life Insurance Company agent, recently indicted by the Federal Grand Jury for misuse of the mails in connection with his Liberty loan frauds, was indicted yesterday by the County Grand Jury for grand larceny.

The latest indictment charges, among other counts, that Mrs. Clarence Lea of 256 West Seventieth Street bought $500 worth of bonds on Dwiggins's partial-payment plan, her butcher acting as Dwiggins's innocent agent. Mrs. Lea alleges that she paid the money to Dwiggins herself, but never received her bonds. According to District Attorney Swann, Dwiggins will probably be arraigned Monday.

INDICT A PROMOTER OF ARMY BAZAAR

SWANN WIDENS INQUIRY

Takes Up New Charges Involving High Commissions on Collections for War Charities.

C. Donald Fox, one of the chief promoters of the Army and Navy Bazaar, which was held in the Grand Central Palace from Oct. 27 to Nov. 3 last, was indicted yesterday afternoon by the Grand Jury on a charge of larceny and forgery. The indictment was handed up to Judge Nott in the Court of General Sessions, and a bench warrant for Fox's arrest was issued immediately. Shortly afterward Fox surrendered to Detectives Brown and Mayer in the office of his counsel, Benjamin F. Spellman, at 115 Broadway. He was arraigned before Judge Nott and held in $2,000 bail, in default of which he was sent to the Tombs.

The indictments against Fox allege that he induced Fred J. Halloran of 140 West Forty-sixth Street to give him two checks, one for $15.45 dated Aug. 31 and the other for $25.25 dated Sept. 5, and omit the payee's name, although the money was intended for the bazaar. Fox cashed these checks for his own benefit, according to the charge against him.

The indictment of Fox for alleged appropriation of these two small checks is considered by Mr. Swann as only the beginning of the Grand Jury investigation into the Army and Navy Bazaar. Waldemar De Bille, the general director of the bazaar, who has agreed to waive immunity; E. P. V. Ritter of the Grand Central Palace Company, and others will probably appear before the Grand Jury on Monday as the next witnesses in the inquiry.

While deading with the Army and Navy Bazaar, the District Attorney is investigating other war charities, among them a performance at the Hippodrome on Sept. 23 for the benefit of the 71st Regiment, for the promotion of which, according to information in Mr. Swann's possession, the firm of Forsyth & Fish received a commission of 70 per cent. Alexander Mayper, attorney for the firm, called with his clients at the District Attorney's office yesterday and said that Forsyth & Fish had assumed all of the risks incidental to the performance, and had taken in payment only what their contract had stipulated. He promised to give the District Attorney any information desired.

Mr. Swann is also looking into the matter of another benefit performance to be given at the Hippodrome, for which, he has been informed, solicitors are receiving a commission of 40 per cent. for collecting contributions and advertisements.

Another matter under investigation is the complaint of a business man of German descent that a solicitor formerly employed by a charitable organization in connection with its preparations for a booth in Hero Land, has been attempting to extort money from him. The complainant, whose name Mr. Swann withheld, said that the solicitor came to him well recommended, and that he lent the man $500. The solicitor sought more money after that, according to the story told to Mr. Swann, and threatened to tell the Federal authorities that the original $500 had been given to further German propaganda here if his demands were refused. Mr. Swann ascertained that the organization had discharged the solicitor in question some time ago, and could not be held responsible for his alleged attempts at extortion. The solicitor in question called at the District Attorney's office yesterday, but did not wait to see Mr. Swann, leaving word instead that he was going to Washington, and advising the District Attorney how to reach him there.

The District Attorney received yesterday an anonymous letter in which it was charged that a man, whose name was given, was collecting money in the interest of the Federalized National Guard regiments on the basis of 50 per cent. commission for himself. The District Attorney also has the name of a bookmaker who has been accused of cashing checks for bazaar and fund solicitors, retaining 10 and 15 per cent. of the amounts of the checks for himself.

Counsel for George F. Sweeney notified Mr. Swann yesterday that they had advised their client not to turn over to the District Attorney's office the estimated $6,000 which Sweeney is said to have taken for himself as 50 per cent. of contributions collected for the Army and Navy Bazaar. Mr. Swann recently demanded that Sweeney give him the money, as it had been paid by outright contributors, not by advertisers in the bazaar program, but Sweeney's contention is that his contract allowed him half of all money collected, whether as contributions or for advertisements.

THEFTS OF AUTOS PUT INSURANCE RATES UP

Underwriters Adopt Action to Make Owners Guard Against the Loss of Their Machines.

Automobile insurance rates and the methods of writing policies will be radically changed in the United States within a short time as a result of the action taken yesterday at the annual meeting of the National Automobile Underwriters' Conference at 80 Maiden Lane. Owing to the large number of thefts, especially in Detroit, Chicago, and other Western cities, propositions were presented by the leading insurance companies that the payment of full value insurance should be superseded by one whereby the insuring company would be liable for only half of the insured value. The principle was to throw a greater responsibility upon the owner for the safety of his car. Such a radical change met with some opposition and a compromise was effected by recommending the continuance of the present theft rates for the country as a whole, but to adopt increased rates for certain classes in cities of 200,000 population and over, and to authorize as an alternative method for covering this hazard a reduced value liability at much lower rates. It was voted, however, that this action must obtain the approval of a majority of the companies before going into effect.

As the recommendations of the national body are virtually assured of acceptance by the majority of the insurance companies, the changes as proposed will go into effect by Feb. 1. General Manager Hodgkins said that the theft evil was not nearly so bad in New York as in many Western cities, where many companies have reported that it was impossible to adopt rates sufficient to keep ahead of the losses. While the reduced value policy will be effective here, the insurance companies may use their discretion in insuring for full value.

Douglas F. Cox was selected President of the National Automobile Underwriters' Conference, and J. B. Levison was elected Vice President and W. A. Hamilton Treasurer. The meeting was attended by delegates from the Pacific Coast, Western, Southern, Eastern, and New England conferences.

Women on Home Defense Committee

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Appointment of a woman on each county Home Defense Committee has been recommended by Governor Whitman. Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill today sent the following letter to all committees: "The Governor desires me to say to you that he believes it would further the patriotic purpose for which your committee is organized if you would add to its number the Chairman of the local women's committee in your county, and that if such a local women's committee does not exist that then you select such woman for that appointment as, in your opinion, would be the most useful."

RAILROADS SEEK TO CUT SERVICE FOR WAR

with drastic orders that will shift the burden of the enormous increase in freight carrying from the large Eastern roads, which are putting forth every energy to move supplies that are urgently needed by our allies, or the railroads will take matters into their own hands and proceed to ignore the deterrent laws, trusting to the Government to ignore the violation in the knowledge that it is born of a patriotic desire to help win the war.

The railroad executives believe that much in the way of relieving the freight congestion would be accomplished if war material were manufactured at Far Western places. The hauling of enormous quantities of raw material from the West to Eastern manufacturing plants is one of the chief causes of the congestion. If the finished product were shipped from points west of the localities where most of the great war product factories are, the railroads would not be so heavily taxed. Furthermore, some of the finished products from the West could be shipped from other ports than those now overwhelmed with export trade.

A pooling arrangement that would allow equipment to be transferred from one railroad to another as exigency demanded is also suggested. Whether this could be accomplished under present laws without amendatory legislation by Congress is not clear, but it is felt by men who are working to make the war a success that the situation justifies immediate radical action. The question of whether the law has been violated could be taken up in due course, but doubt is expressed here that the Interstate Commerce Commission would put itself in opposition to directions that President Wilson might give under his general war powers in order to see that war supplies reached Europe with the least possible delay.

SITUATION LONG FORESEEN.

Railway Men Sought Law Changes to Make a National System.

Months ago, railway officials in this city declared last night, railroad executives foresaw that the Winter of 1917-1918 would bring the supreme test of the ability of transportation managers to operate the railroads as one continental system during the war. At the recent hearing of the latest application of the roads for increased rates it was time and again stated that added rates would not alone solve the railroad problem of the United States.

The Railroads' War Board has received plenary power so far as the roads themselves are concerned, but in the carrying out of their plans they have been hampered by laws, both State and Federal. As for the State interference, it may be recalled that last Summer, when curtailments of passenger schedules were put into effect, it was necessary in all cases for the railroads to appear before State Commissions in all States to show cause why the curtailments should be permitted. In some instances this caused a material delay. In other instances the railroads have been hampered by State regulations.

There are interstate commerce laws against the pooling of the railroads' interests and equipment. For six months the Railroads' War Board has been ordering cars from district to district, regardless of ownership, and this pooling of freight cars has materially helped stringent situations. The opinion has been advanced that this might be illegal, but no one has tested it.

The leading railroad executives want further pooling; they want carte blanche to go ahead with the shifting of locomotives from road to road without regard to ownership; they want the legal right to pool the use of terminals, bridges, and so forth. What they also will require to make the best use of passenger adjustment will be guarantees that local and State authorities will not interfere with curtailments.

Under the present law the railroads have not the power, from a legal standpoint, to route shipments as the best efficiency policy might direct. A shipper picks the road, although that route might not be the most efficient for the good of the whole country. There are leading railroad executives who would like the Railroads' War Board to have the summary power to route all shipments.

This situation may be illustrated by the fact that in the transportation of the troops to the Mexican border there were some instances that brought criticism because the troops were sent by roundabout ways, the supposition being that this was done to give as many railroads as possible a part of the receipts. This was later remedied and there has been no criticism since the War Board has been in power that soldiers and supplies have not been routed over the most efficient routes. If this plan could be extended to all business, it is believed that some of the recent cases of port congestion would have been relieved.

There is one barrier before such a plan, and that is that there is not now an arangement for splitting up the revenues among the roads. This is one feature in which the American plan of war road operation differs from that of the English. In England the Government has guaranteed all the roads an average return for each year of war service, and there is no incentive on the part of managers to look for profit.

If they need money they get it from the Government, and if they have a surplus it is turned over to the Government. It is the hope of many managers that some plan may be worked out for the United States that will make a financial adjustment of receipts possible, and thus aid the operation of the roads strictly on a service-first basis.

In announcing a week ago that the railroads would be forced to curtail service Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, said: "The transportation situation is becoming the subject of growing public uneasiness and agitation. Those responsible for the operation of the railways realize that transportation conditions, unless more vigorously dealt with by all concerned, will grow more acute."

Frank H. Fayant assistant to the Chairman of the Railway Executives Advisory Committee, said last night that the suggestions made in Washington yesterday had been under consideration for some time, and were no more radical than had been generally expected by railroad men.

"No railroad man any longer disputes the fact that the transportation problem is seriously acute," he said. "The roads have asked the public to aid them in the job of handling more freight than they can carry, and they have set themselves to the task of greater efficiency.

"The pooling of freight cars has helped much. It will be necessary, in the belief of many executives, to extend this pooling arrangement to include locomotives and other rolling stock. The roads have got to operate as one big system to give the country all the transportation they can, and to do that the interests of individual roads will not, I believe be allowed to hamper the general program."

Unfilled Freight Car Orders Grow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The excess of unfilled freight car orders on Nov. 1 was 140,012, an increase of 25,104 over the same date last year, according to reports to the American Railway Association as announced tonight by Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads' War Board. Of this number 97,000 were called for in sections other than the congested district east of Chicago and north of the Potomac. Mr. Harrison stated that the board was applying extraordinary remedies in an effort to relieve congestion in the East so that cars may be released for traffic in other parts of the country.

the lists of "non-essentials," as seen by railroad men and economists, and it is not expected that there would be a strong fight against the curtailment of the manufacture of athletic goods, as it would be of material assistance to the Government's prosecution of the war.

The proposal to curtail the manufacture of toys need bring no fear to Santa Claus, so far as his approaching job is concerned, because the toys for this Christmas have all been made.

The eleven commodities here enumerated are only a few of those for which the curtailment of the fuel and transportation service is under consideration at Washington. The authorities are gathering data as to the amount of fuel, as well as the number of cars, used in "non-essential" businesses, and the men employed. The unfilled requests for cars by manufacturers is growing every day, and the month just past set the record for the amount of freight handled by the American railroads. While the proposal to limit fuel is not directly connected with the railroads' problem of too much work, it has a very important relation. The railroads have a triple interest in the problem, because of the coal situation, because of the shipping problem, and lastly, because of the labor and material problem.

As Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, said last week, it is for the Priority Board and the Fuel Administrator to determine what are the commodities with which the public must first dispense. Then he added:

"We have no doubt that if non-essential commodities are eliminated, the railroads can transport all the commodities required by the Government in carrying on the war and by the people for subsistence and comfort."

It is pointed out by railroad men that the railroads themselves have not undertaken to lay any embargoes, either for the transport of fuel or for the transport of finished products. They have given to the Government, at the request of the Government, lists of things their experience tells them may be most readily dispensed with by the public.

U-BOAT POWER WANES; INSURANCE RATE CUT

Federal War Risks Reduced to 4 Per Cent., a Third Less Than Two Months Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Further evidence of improvement in the campaign against the U-boat was furnished late this afternoon when Secretary McAdoo announced a further reduction in the rates of war risk insurance on merchant steamers and their cargoes.

"The Bureau of War Risk Insurance," said the announcement, "has reduced its rates on all American steamers and cargoes traversing the war zone from 5 per cent. to 4 per cent. On Oct. 6 the rate was reduced from 6½ per cent. to 5 per cent. The new reduction is made because of the corresponding decreases in the risks."

There has been a reduction of 33 1-3 per cent. in the rates of war risk insurance in less than two months, and the interpretation placed on today's announcement is that all the confidential information in the possession of the Government indicates that since October the risk is at least one-third smaller than it was during the Summer months.

Reports to the Navy Department indicate that the American, British, and French war vessels engaged in the hunt for the submarine have been accomplishing steady results, and that they have succeeded materially in curtailing the menace.

The British statement of shipping losses last week showed ten ships of more than 1,600 tons sunk, compared with one the week before. Even the total of ten, however, is lower than the records of some weeks ago.

CARUSO AT HIS BEST IN ROLE OF SAMSON

Greeted by Large Audience on His Return as the Hero of Saint-Saens's Opera.

JULIA CLAUSSEN NEW DALILA

SAMSON ET DALILA, an opera in three acts and four tableaux, (in French.) Book by Ferdinand Lemaire. Music by C. Saint-Saens. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Samson....................Enrico Caruso
The High Priest..........Clarence Whitehill

Saint-Saëns opera of "Samson et Dalila" has become one of the standing features of the repertory at the Metropolitan Opera House, because Mr. Caruso has made of the hero one of his best parts. It was given there last night for the first time this season; and as Mr. Caruso took his part of Samson there was the assurance of a large audience amply fulfilled.

The opera is carefully balanced at times on the line between oratorio and opera, as in the first act, where the fugued overture and the chorus behind the curtain, as well as the first scenes of the chorus and Samson's long solos have little dramatic quality, however substantial they are as music. And there is little in opera that is less plausible than Dalila's love-making to Samson in the public square, coram populo, with his aged Hebrew friend pouring good advice into his other ear. But then the balance is turned the other way in the second act, when Dalila exercises her final and supreme allurement upon Samson and sings the air for which the opera has chiefly become famous. And there is the moment of final catastrophe at the end, when Samson pulls down the temple of Dagon. With Mr. Caruso in the part of Samson there is enough here to make "Samson et Dalila" satisfactory to the taste of the lovers of opera at the Metropolitan.

The performance last evening in many ways reached the high level that performances of this opera have had here. The music is admirably adapted for Mr. Caruso, and he sang last evening at his best. There was a new Dalila in Mme. Julia Claussen, who has been a leading singer in the Chicago opera, and who made her first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House. She has a powerful voice of dark color that at times takes on a singularly hollow quality. Nor is her method of singing always without fault. Last evening she frequently felt for her higher tones in what is known as a "scoop." She showed her art at its best in the second act. The part has been sung here with greater vocal beauty, and though Mme. Claussen showed ample skill as an actress and abundant resources to realize the essentials of the character, it has also been impersonated with greater charm.

One of the notable figures in the performance was Mr. Clarence Whitehill as the High Priest, whose violent incursion into the first act he represented with immense dramatic power and with superbly vigorous singing.

NORTHCLIFFE NOW IS A VISCOUNT

Viscount Reading, Lord Chief Justice, Raised in Peerage to Rank of Earl.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Viscount Reading, Lord Chief Justice, has been created an Earl, and Lord Northcliffe a Viscount, according to an official statement issued this evening.

The Right Hon. Rufus Daniel Isaacs was created Viscount Reading of Erleigh in 1916; he had already been raised to the Peerage in 1914 with the title of Baron Reading, and made a Knight in 1910. He was born in 1860, second son of the late Joseph M. Isaacs, a merchant in the City of London. Because of his eminence as a jurist and financier he was appointed Chairman of the Allies' Financial Commission from Great Britain and France which negotiated a $500,000,000 loan in the United States in the Fall of 1916. In September, 1917, he returned to the United States on a special mission from the British War Cabinet to convey information, particularly regarding financial affairs, to the Washington Government.

Alfred Charles William Harmsworth, son of the late Alfred Harmsworth of the Middle Temple, who as is well known is the owner of The London Times and Daily Mail among other publications, was born in 1865; he was made a Baronet in 1904, and raised to the Peerage in 1905 with the title of Baron Northcliffe of the Isle of Thanet.

A few days ago on returning to England from this country, where he was head of the British Mission for coordinating war work, he declined the portfolio of Air Minister, and expressed his dissatisfaction with the policies of Premier Lloyd George's Government. Northcliffe's letter resulted in the resignation of Viscount Cowdray from the Chairmanship of the Air Ministry because it contained the first intimation to the incumbent that a change was contemplated by the Premier.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 22, (Delayed.)—The decision of the Cabinet to transfer M. Hudelo, chief of the Prefecture of Police, and M. Bouju, head of the Secret Service attached to the Ministry of the Interior, is in no way a reflection on them. As they will be called upon to testify in cases under investigation, the Government believed they should be freed of the reserve they naturally would feel if they continued to occupy their present offices.

M. Hudelo was instrumental in starting the whole investigation of Boloism by giving evidence to the Ribot Government. It is understood that he will be appointed Prefect of the Loire Inférieure, and M. Rouju, Prefect of the Oise in place of M. Raux, who will come to Paris as Prefect of Police.

SINGERS CLASH OVER SINGING OUR ANTHEM

Mme. Kalna and Mme. Namara, Americans, Noisily Dispute Prior Right at Biltmore Musicale.

While Fritz Kreisler was waiting to play at the Biltmore's second morning musicale yesterday two young American singers in the same bill had a difference of opinion as to which prima donna should sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," the noise of their dispute even reaching an audience in the ballroom on the nineteenth floor. The women shared one dressing room, as hotels are crowded now, and when Mme. Mai Kalna appeared with a rosette of national colors at her waist, a trophy presented by friends in Boston, Mme. Marguerite Namara asked the reason for the other's decoration, saying that she herself was to sing the anthem.

"I have it in black and white," said Mme. Namara, showing a letter from the manager, R. E. Johnston.

"Well, I have it in red, white, and blue," retorted Mme. Kalna, "and I shall sing it. I go on first, and this is my first appearance in my own country."

After Rudolph Ganz opened the program, Mme. Kalna sang the air, and Mme. Namara did not. The two rivals later discovered that they were both Californians, old neighbors, in fact, and there were mutual explanations that ended in the ruffled feelings of both being pacified.

CUDAHY FIRM ACCUSED.

Cited to Answer for Fixing Retail Prices on Cleansing Powder.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Federal Trade Commission has cited the Cudahy Packing Company of Chicago to reply to the charge of violating the law by compelling customers to adhere to retail prices or suffer from severe discriminations in wholesale prices. The article involved is a cleansing powder.

The practice of the Cudahy Company, it is alleged, is to sell to its customers with the understanding that a certain schedule of resale prices must be maintained by the dealer. In case a retailer or jobber sells at a different and lower price the Cudahy Company, it is charged, raises the wholesale price to the offending customer which does not permit a fair profit. Those who obey the demands of the company get the goods at a lower price than do those who refuse to comply with the requirements, it is charged.

A complaint was also issued against the Mishawaka Woolen Company of Indiana to explain why it refuses to sell to customers who decline to co-operate in maintaining a fixed schedule of prices, the object being to eliminate competition in prices among jobbers. The Mishawaka Company is also charged with obligating its customers to report any price cutting done by patrons of the company, and that when firms are thus reported the woolen company strikes them off its list of customers, refusing to sell to them at all.

Mr. Reimer's Recital.

Mr. Paul Reimers, who gave a song recital yesterday in Aeolian Hall, has been well known for some years as a tenor singer here. It is a small voice, devoid of much quality or vigor. Mr. Reimers has attempted to substitute for them a high finish in style and in the minutiae of expression; but he has added to these things certain affectations and mannerisms that seem to have grown upon him not at all to the advantage of his interpretations, which are apt to be finicking in their finish. Mr. Reimers sang an aria of Handel's, German song, by Schubert and Grieg, a group of French songs, another of American, (some of which were heard for the first time,) and a group of "international folk songs."

Paulo Gruppe, Cellist, Plays.

Paulo Gruppe, an artist well known here and a Hollander by descent, as he chose to mention in a wartime program, was assisted by Viola Cole, a newcomer from Chicago, at his recital in Aeolian Hall last evening, when he presented "for the first time in America" a sonata for 'cello and pianoforte, Op. 64, by Emanuel Moor, some of whose larger works have been played by orchestras of New York and Boston. Mr. Gruppe, whose style is familiar, added solo numbers of Bach, Pergolesi, Klengel, Popper and Faure, and Miss Cole had pieces by Franck, Schumann, Chopin, and Debussy.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Carolyn Thomson has replaced Beth Lydy in the cast of "The Star Gazer." The piece will have its premiere at the Plymouth Theatre on Monday.

Helen Lowell has been engaged for a role in "The Grass Widow," coming to the Liberty Theatre on Dec. 3.

The Intermedio de Goyescas, by Granados, will be played in addition to the Valverde music at tomorrow night's concert at the Park Theatre.

Harry Fox will have the leading role in "Girl o' Mine," a musical comedy by Philip Bartholomae and Frank Tours, which will be brought into New York in January.

One hundred and seventy-seven employes of the First National Bank will attend today's matinee at the Century Theatre as the guests of President George F. Baker.

RELIEF IN ITALY NOW SYSTEMATIZED

SUPPLIES ARE POURING IN

Forty-six Carloads Come from France—Soup Kitchens Opened and Funds Distributed.

ROME, Nov. 22, (Delayed.)—Since the headquarters of the American Red Cross were established here a fortnight ago under Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, the organization has created three bureaus—administration, military affairs, and civil affairs, respectively. The Administrative Department has organized subsidiary departmental divisions of accounting, purchasing, and transportation of stores and supplies.

Forty-six carloads of assorted materials have arrived from France, and other supplies have been purchased elsewhere in Europe. A warehouse has been established, in which have been stored hospital supplies and clothing for men, women, and children. Consignments of condensed milk have been distributed from Genoa and Milan. Representatives of the Red Cross are establishing branch warehouses in Genoa, Florence, Bologna, Naples, Palermo, Milan, and Turin.

Additional hospital supplies are expected from America. The supply department already has dispatched carloads of relief materials to the principal Italian centres from the central warehouses.

In the Department of Military Affairs, twenty-three ambulances with experienced drivers from the French front have arrived at Milan from Paris, on their way to the Italian front. Contracts have been concluded for fifty additional ambulances to be delivered during the first fortnight of December. One hundred experienced drivers have been recruited in France to operate these ambulances, the number of which will soon be increased to 200. H. Nelson Gay, in the name of the American Poets' Ambulance Service, has turned over the Red Cross twenty-five ambulances.

After a preliminary examination of the various hospitals in Rome, Florence, and Bologna, a general list of the needs of all the Italian military hospitals was drawn up. Bedding, underwear, and anaesthetics have been brought from France, and contracts have been concluded in Europe for sterilizing and disinfecting apparatus, surgical instruments, rubber goods, drugs, and other hospital supplies.

The distribution of supplies to the hospitals has already been begun. A warehouse has been established for the hospital supplies, which will be distributed according to the ascertained local needs.

In the Department of Civil Relief one or more soup kitchens have been organized, respectively, in Rome, Ancona, Ravenna, Genoa, and Milan. Clothing and bedding have been furnished the refugees in the principal Italian towns, and funds for food and clothing also have been supplied. The equipment and maintenance for one year of 150 refugees in Milan have been authorized. A shelter has been constructed at the Genoa station for refugees. The Committee of Civil Aid in Rome has been supplied with 1,000,000 lire ($200,000) for work among the soldiers and the families of refugees. Representatives investigating local conditions throughout Italy carried with them 300,000 lire for general refugee work.

A committee of three experienced relief workers, consisting of Ernest P. Bicknell, Director General of Civilian Relief; Edward T. Devine, and Paul U. Kellogg, is engaged in preparing a general survey of the relief needs of Italy on which the future relief program will be based. Resident delegates of the Department of Civil Relief are in the principal Italian towns, while efficient local committees have been formed in Rome, Genoa, and Milan. Other such committees are in process of organization.

GERMANS HEAR JAPAN REFUSES PEACE OFFER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 23.—The Frankfurter Zeitung comments on the increasing frequency of reports from the Far East concerning Japan's closer bond with the Allies in the fight against Germany.

Although Japan refused to send troops to Europe, says the paper, the fact that she is to be represented at the Paris conference shows her good will toward the Allies. In order that she may appear still more loyal, it asserts, news comes from Tokio that Japan has refused offers of peace from Germany.

The paper holds that Japan has the greatest interest in attending the Paris conference, "for, as Russia's neighbor, Russia's interior collapse is of the greatest interest to her. As long as anarchy reigns in Russia, even the menace of Japan would amount to nothing, as the Maximalists would be indifferent to invasion by a Japanese army."

Japan's decision to be represented at the Paris conference, says the Zeitung, is in pursuance of her general policy, and that policy revolves around the questions of the Far East.

"Japan has just proclaimed her Monroe Doctrine," it continues, "and will hardly be inclined to render that doctrine invalid by interfering in other sections of the world, such as America."

The paper says that Japan's breaking off of negotiations with America over the question of tonnage is not her last word; that the Entente needs Japan's help, and if Japan withdrew her merchant fleets from the transatlantic and the Asiatic service, it would be inconvenient for the Entente.

"Negotiations will recommence," it says. "Anyway, Japan would not have made her menacing declaration if she was not sure of other sources of iron, namely Chinese."

The paper asserts that Japan has enough steel to continue her shipbuilding program until Spring, and that she hopes to have the Chinese iron mines organized by that time and be independent of America.

HINTS FOR CHRISTMAS MAIL.

Postmaster Patten Urges Public to Co-operate with Postal Service.

Postmaster Patten announces that commencing Nov. 25 important railroad time-table changes will be made which will cause an earlier closing of domestic, Canadian, and transpacific mails. Persons interested in the changes are advised to consult the bulletins displayed in the various Post Offices throughout New York City.

The Postmaster also urges the public to co-operate with the postal service in the coming holidays by prepaying the postage on their Christmas parcels, packing them securely, and putting the name and address in writing that can be easily read, also the name and address of the sender. Parcels should be mailed early and can be marked "Do Not Open Until Christmas." Written inscriptions such as "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year" are permissible on parcels.

Parcels for persons serving in the United States Navy or with the United States Expeditionary Forces are subject to domestic rates and conditions. Information regarding their dispatch can be obtained at any Post Office.

BRITAIN UNIFIES SHIP PLAN.

Council Will Co-ordinate Naval and Commercial Building.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The British Admiralty announces that the formation of a shipbuilding council has been approved and that it will be operated under the Chairmanship of the Admiralty Controller.

On this council representatives of the shipbuilding and engineering trades will be joined by officers of the Admiralty, and the problems of naval and commercial shipbuilding and of repairs will be considered.

"He has a perfect right to come back, hasn't he?" said the Mayor-elect.

"Have you any appointment with Mr. Murphy?" the Mayor-elect was asked.

"I have no appointment with Mr. Murphy or anybody else," he replied. "But I am here every afternoon and the door is always open. Mr. Murphy, Mr. McCooey, the Republican leaders, and everybody else is welcome to call. I want help and suggestions from everybody who backed me in my campaign. I want the aid and suggestions of those who honestly opposed me, too. The others are excluded."

Then Judge Hylan, who had been speaking with some warmth, withdrew to his inner room.

Murphy Returns in State.

Leader Murphy came back in state. With Mrs. Murphy, his niece, "Phil" Donohue, playmate of his boyhood and constant companion of his mature years, and Congressman Thomas F. Smith, he traveled in the private car "New York" which had been attached to an express train from St. Louis, which arrived at the Pennsylvania Station at 6:50 o'clock last night. The Tammany chieftain looked ruddy with health and did not seem at all perturbed.

"You arrived a little earlier than expected, but we are glad to see you back," Mr. Murphy was told by newspaper men who greeted him.

"I had two weeks of it," said the Tammany leader, referring to his abbreviated vacation.

"Have you anything to say regarding appointments and candidates for places?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"I am glad to hear that," said Mr. Murphy.

There was a report yesterday that the keen rivalry for patronage between Tammany and the McCooey organization in Brooklyn may have been a factor which hastened Mr. Murphy's return. It is no secret that the followers of Mr. McCooey, realizing that Brooklyn is the home of Mayor-elect Hylan and that they did well for him in the election, expect what one McCooey man described as "something better than a fifty-fifty split," and that in any event they are determined to make hay while the Hylan sun shines.

Some of this rivalry was reflected in a visit to the Mayor-elect last night by a delegation from the Brooklyn Business Men's League. This is an organization formed on the lines of the organization of similar name in Manhattan, with which Judge Hylan makes his personal headquarters. A plan has been proposed for the consolidation of the two leagues.

The proposal has not made a hit with many members of the Brooklyn organization. It was for this reason the delegation called on Mr. Hylan and urged him to assert himself in behalf of the independent existence of the Business Men's League in his home borough. Henry A. Meyer, former President of the Retail Grocers' Association, is Chairman of the league, which has affiliated with it some eighty taxpayers' associations and local boards of trades in the Borough of Brooklyn.

"We have too many interests of our own to guard, and we are strong for the idea of borough autonomy, even as applied to the Business Men's League," said ex-Senator John H. Duhamel, who was a member of the delegation. "While there is a difference of opinion even among the Brooklyn men in the league over the proposal for a merger, I think a majority feel that we can do better by remaining in the field as an independent body, looking after the interests of Brooklyn."

The Mayor-elect did not give the delegation, in which were included some men who fought hard for his election, any immediate satisfaction, but promised to give due consideration to their plea for independence.

Coler Frightens Tammany.

An alarming rumor reached the Tammany faithful yesterday when they heard that ex-Controller Bird S. Coler was a candidate for appointment as Police Commissioner. Mr. Coler has been very much in evidence at the Hylan headquarters, and a report that he has strong influence with the Mayor-elect, and really heads the list of applicants for the place at the head of the Police Department is generally credited. It was said last night that Douglas I. McKay, who was First Deputy Police Commissioner in the Gaynor administration, and actually in charge of the department for some months prior to the appointment of Arthur Woods as Police Commissioner, is second on the list of men being considered for the office.

It was said by Tammany men last night that all the influence of the responsible elements in the Tammany organization would be thrown solidly against the appointment of Mr. Coler.

Another report that shocked the faithful had it that Philip J. Britt, a corporation lawyer, was being seriously considered for appointment as Corporation Counsel, with the backing of an element in Wall Street that wielded strong influence with Tammany in the "good old days," but which the younger element in the Tammany organization is determined must be disregarded at a time when Tammany is anxious to make a strong appeal to the "common people" through its program of municipal ownership and freedom from corporation influences.

THE DIMINISHING SUBMARINE.

Mr. LLOYD GEORGE did not say that the submarine menace had been conquered or controlled. He said he had been afraid that the Allies might ultimately be defeated by the submarine, but that he had "no longer any fear" of that. By way of hinting at his reasons, he mentioned that on one day alone five submarines had been sunk. In other words, war upon the submarines is being made so mercilessly and successfully that, though they continue to inflict great losses on us, they no longer endanger us.

The best proof of this is not that for the week ended Nov. 11 the ships sunk numbered only six, of which only one was over 1,600 tons. The following week the list climbed to seventeen, of which ten were over 1,600 tons. The first week was an ebb-tide week, the second was at the beginning of a flood tide. The submarine campaign ebbs and flows, conjecturally because the boats have to put back for supplies and rest. The right way to form a conclusion about whether the menace is diminishing or not is to note whether in its flood-tide weeks it is as destructive as it used to be in such weeks, and whether in its ebb-tide weeks it falls to a lower ebb than it formerly did.

The fact that it killed off seventeen boats in its flood-tide week of Nov. 18, as contrasted with only six in its ebb-tide week of Nov. 11, is of no consequence. The important point is that in its flood-tide weeks it has killed off as many as fifty-five, and that seventeen used to be the number that marked not its flood but its ebb. Formerly we did not say, as we do now, "Submarine sinkings rose last week to seventeen," but "Submarine sinkings fell last week to seventeen."

The greatest period of submarine activity and destructiveness was from April 7 to May 5. For the week ended April 7 the sinkings were only nineteen. It was an ebb-tide week, in which most of the submarines were probably back in port, but it will be noticed that for that week of little activity the sinkings were two more than they were last week, which according to present standards is a flood-tide week. After April 7 the submarines went forth in large numbers, and by April 14 their sinkings had climbed to twenty-eight. The highest point they touched in this period of devastation was fifty-five, which they sank in the week ended April 21. In the following week they sank fifty, then forty-four, and the week ended May 12 was an ebb-tide week, when they presumably returned to port. But in that ebb-tide week they sank twenty-three ships. Nowadays, when they sink as many as seventeen, it is a flood-tide week, a week when the submarines are out at sea in force.

Further, the period of activity does not last as long as formerly. Last Spring the submarines, after a week in port, took the high seas and stayed at their work three and four weeks at a time. The length of time has been decreasing until now a single week of activity is all that comes after a week of inactivity. Like Dr. Jekyll's potion, the effect of which kept wearing off faster the longer he used it until he could not keep himself Jekyllized for more than a few minutes at a time, the submarine has to refit oftener and can play its part only for constantly lessening periods.

In the time of its greatest destructiveness, the submarine fleet took the sea in the week ended April 14 and did not return to port until the week ended May 12. Look now at the later periods. For four weeks, the last two of September and the first two of October, the submarines were comparatively inactive and sank from thirteen to eighteen ships a week. The week ended Oct. 21 they were apparently out in force, and rose to twenty-five, but they were unable to keep up the effort, and in the week ended Oct. 28 they had sunk back to seventeen again. In the week ended Nov. 4 they sank to twelve, and were down to six, which is the lowest ebb, by Nov. 11. Now they have risen, in the week ended Nov. 18, but risen only to seventeen. In all this period there was only one week of actual activity, and even in that week the sinkings were only twenty-five.

THE ZIONISTS.

The occasions and the opportunities for making and remaking history which the worldwide war presents are everywhere objects of absorbing interest, but perhaps they have nowhere been more attentively studied than by those of the Jewish race who look upon the impending fall of Jerusalem and the establishment of a British protectorate in Palestine as offering the promise of a restoration of the Jewish nationality. This aspiration, to which the name of Zionism has usually been given, is by no means universal among the Jewish people, many of whose leaders see dangers lurking in the attempt to realize the dream of a political establishment. Multitudes of orthodox Jews still cherish the belief that the return to Zion is to be preceded by the coming of ELIJAH, and among these there is either indifference to the proposed establishment of the Jewish State or doubt as to the wisdom of the movement.

Jews have wept as they remembered Zion, but those of modern ways of thinking understand that the course of history is not easily retraced. Giving due weight to the influence of national feeling, locally acquired, upon their co-religionists in the countries where they have lived during "disapora," or dispersion, they fear that the Zionist project might involve the possibility of a recurrence of anti-Semitism. It is a question of the greatest importance to the future of those of the Jewish faith and manifestly one to be decided by cool judgment rather than by the impulses of enthusiasm. A study of the practical working of attempts at repatriation wherever they have been made would serve as a safeguard against errors which might be committed under the guidance of yearning and idealism. The proposal has been made that the problem might be solved by the establishment of colonies in Palestine under the protection of Great Britain and France and the United States, and this suggestion has met with a good deal of favor among Jews who have given consideration to the practical side of the Zionist movement.

HAIG NEARING BELGIUM.

The advance of the British Army almost to the gates of Cambrai puts General HAIG well in the lead in the push for the Belgian frontier, and it suggests an inquiry into the progress the Allies are making in their joint operations to expel the Germans from French territory. Something like a deadlock still exists on the line Ypres-Dixmude-Nieuport to the north, although there are signs of a breakup east of shell-scarred Ypres, and the British are still outside Lens; but from Arras to St. Quentin trench warfare, as a problem for the British offensive, is practically nonexistent; or, to put it in another way, when the British decide to push on the enemy fails to hold them back. The operations are in such a fluid state that to speak of trench warfare in connection with them conveys no suggestion of a deadlock.

With Cambrai in front of him, Sir DOUGLAS HAIG's memories of the retreat from Mons must be less bitter when he reflects that the British are now headed for the Belgian frontier, which is not very far away. Sir JOHN FRENCH's expeditionary army was driven back in ten days 140 miles, from Mons to Lagny and Courtagnon, the latter south of the Marne and thirty miles southeast of Meaux. Most of the remnants of his army lay, before the great battle, near Meaux and the river. The retreat from Mons brought one division, the Second, past Cambrai, which was five miles to the right, or to the northwest. The other divisions, also fighting rear-guard actions, fell back in almost parallel lines. One passed through Le Catelet and another through St. Quentin. When the British take Cambrai they will be well on their way to the Belgian frontier, reversing their course, but not with the celerity that marked the terrible but gallant retreat from Mons. That city is eighteen miles in a direct line on the other side of the Belgian frontier, and from Cambrai to the frontier is thirty miles, but, measured by the roads over which armies must march, the distance is considerably longer.

It is now three years and almost three months since the allied armies turned upon the foe on the banks of the Marne and the Ourcq. VON KLUCK's retreat, when he failed to break through FOCH's Ninth Army, was rapid and masterly. The skill of it cannot be denied to the German commander. In the last two days of the battle he fell back in good order, and stubbornly fighting, from thirty to fifty miles, according to the conformation of his line. The next battle to be fought was known as the Aisne, for behind that river the German Army dug in before the race for the sea, with its many sanguinary conflicts.

It was to be nearly two years before the British could make any considerable progress by the measured mile from their intrenched positions. The battle of the Somme, five months of fighting, carried them forward a run from this idle territory, such a few miles; in the Spring of this year Bapaume and Péronne were captured, another gain on the road back to the Belgian frontier, but still only a few miles. Then came the battle of Arras, which placed Cambrai within striking distance; but it was not until the Battle of the Tanks, which has set all the world wondering, that several miles in one day, in this case six, could be marked up to the credit of the patient and resourceful HAIG. Today a British airman at a high altitude should be able to see in a clear medium the plains of Belgium through his binoculars. Another blow such as the British have struck in the neighborhood of Cambrai and it will not be a long way to the frontier.

THE RAILWAY SETTLEMENT.

The conference between the President and the railway trainmen puts everything in the way of settlement without, in fact, settling anything except that there shall be no strike. With that settled, the greatest obstacle to granting the trainmen all that they ought to have disappears. So long as they negotiated under threat of a strike they prejudiced their own cause by the appearance of asking for what they wanted with a threat of action contrary to the public interest. On the other hand, the unreserved submission of the railways to the President's award created a presumption in their favor which it was necessary that the trainmen should remove, if they wished to appeal to public opinion on terms of equality. Under such conditions, the trainmen could not hope to obtain treatment so considerate as that which will be accorded them now that the antagonism created by their menace has been removed.

It does not follow that the trainmen will or should receive all that they asked. It is conceded that they ought to have generous treatment. The railways must be kept running, and the wages necessary for that purpose must be paid. It is idle to argue about it. There is no alternative. But that is different from conceding that the trainmen's demands must be satisfied. Nobody is asking the trainmen to man the railways at a sacrifice to themselves. But the trainmen have no standing to ask that the railways shall be operated at greater cost than is necessary. No blame attaches to them for asking more than the railways can pay, or, perhaps, more than the trainmen expected to get. That is the customary manner of procedure. As unionists they are not guardians of public interest. As unionists it is their right, even their duty, to make the best collective bargain they can. Only in their capacity as citizens is there ground for suggesting to them that there are economic limits to humanity.

This brings out the difference between the situation of the President and either the railways or the trainmen, alone or together. The President is charged only with the public interests. Wages and profits are nothing to him as President. He must keep the railways running with prime regard to the public interests. The antagonisms between labor and capital, the equal necessity that both shall have a living wage, can be considered only secondarily. It might be necessary that the public should contribute to the cost of keeping either party to the wage contract in working condition. That would be better than to have the railways inefficient because either side of the contract had been starved into incapacity for work. But before giving assistance from public funds there ought to be a demonstration of its necessity. If the joint product of the railways and the trainmen can earn the upkeep for both of them, it would be better than that outdoor relief at the common cost should be given either or both of them. That solution would be both economic and humane.

Both capital and labor are deserting the railway industry by millions of money and thousands of workers. The condition which confronts the country is the necessity of finding capital and labor for the railways at a cost which the railways can pay. If it cannot be done, then tax money must make good the deficit. The President cannot give less than justice to either the railways or the trainmen at the expense of the other. That has been done, and with the result of raising larger questions instead of solving the original question.

TAMMANY AND THE NEW COURT HOUSE.

Tammany is continuing its campaign wherein old inventions about the new Court House project were sedulously revamped. The voters were told that the project was the Fusion administration's; that it was a branch of a more grandiose and costly Civic Centre; that the site chosen was over the old Collect Pond and could not be used; that, when $12,000,000 had been squandered on it, the plan had been given up, and so on. Having planted these falsehoods among the uninformed, the proleptic Tammany administration, beginning early, seeks to use the new Court House plan not merely as a discredited Fusion scheme, but as a means of persuading the Tammany voters of the sincerity of Tammany's promise of municipal ownership. Here is a lot of property which costs the city a round sum a year in interest and taxes lost. Let us make it fruitful, develop it. Some ingenious economist even proposes to build model tenement houses on the site, so as to give the city some revenue from this idle territory, such an eyesore to the vigilant Tammany watchdogs of the treasury.

Tammany talks of going to Albany next year to ask the Republican Legislature to abolish the Court House Board, whose members are getting no pay, and to ask for legislation, "if any legislation should be necessary," to kill the new Court House for all time. Thus Tammany is to show its passion for "economy," and if the Legislature, as is certain, finds a city too poor to build a Court House too poor to indulge the Monte Cristian dream of municipal ownership, why, Tammany can point to the defeat of its efforts therefor by wicked Republican partisanship.

It is hard to believe that the intelligent leaders of Tammany are making anything more than a political manoeuvre. The Judges and the lawyers who complained so bitterly about conditions in the ramshackle Tweed Court House will have something to say about the "abandonment" of a project which the Board of Estimate postponed more than a year and a half ago on account of the risen and rising cost of construction and the shrinking of the city's borrowing limit caused by the subway appropriations. The site cannot be given up unless the Legislature changes its mind, a contingency not to be apprehended. The State had the power, and by statute exerted it, to provide for the erection of a Court House where courts are to sit which are a part of the State judiciary system. The act is mandatory. The Board of Estimate had no choice in the matter. In 1915 the Corporation Counsel held that "the State has "imposed a mandatory duty to erect "a Court House under this act, and "that the project cannot be abandoned."

So much for the Tammany pretense of doubt if legislation is needed to end the new Court House project. It is needed, and it cannot be had, and Tammany knows it. The State will see that its courts are adequately housed, when a more propitious time for building comes.

Since Tammany is now proposing to act in accordance with the legends which it has spread about the new Court House, it may interest the public to hear the true story. In 1902 the movement for a worthy successor to Mr. TWEED's monument began. In 1903 the Legislature required the appointment of a Court House Commission and the provision by the city of funds for site and structure. In October, 1911, when Judge GAYNOR was Mayor, these requirements were made severely mandatory, and the time to choose the site was limited to six months. From that time to this, the city has done what the Legislature prescribed. The Corporate Stock Committee of the Fusion Board of Estimate at the time was against the project and wished to remodel the Tweed Court House. The Judges, various civic bodies, most of the newspapers, insisted on the other plan. It was the Legislature, by them persuaded, that approved that plan and the work on it.

Site after site had been selected and rejected, for cause. The present site, the least expensive and most convenient suitable site, was chosen on the advice of expert engineers and architects. Collect Pond as a hidden enemy of sound and cheap foundation of the proposed Court House is mere cock-and-bullism against categorical engineering authority. More land than was needed was bought, by taking advantage of the principle of "excess condemnation." Thus the land not needed will ultimately be sold at the increased valuation which a great improvement is sure to produce. This is a financial consideration which Tammany will do well to bear in mind. The cost of the previous sites studied by the Court House Board ranged from $12,000,000 to $18,000,000. The cost of the actual site, when the "excess" land has been sold, is estimated by real property experts at between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000. A city-built "Civic Centre" is an idea or dream which the Board of Estimate never had, a landless dream.

Mayor GAYNOR's Court House Board and the Judges of the Supreme Court chose the plans for the Court House, as the law ordained. The Board of Estimate had only the power to cut the estimates. It reduced those estimates on Mr. GUY LOWELL's plans from $15,000,000 to $7,500,000. In 1916 it decided, as has been said, that the building should be delayed. There has been nothing but economy, too severe economy, perhaps, so far as the structure itself is concerned, in the course of the Board of Estimate. The land has been providently and skillfully acquired. To carry it vacant for a year or two is far cheaper than to build. The value is there. It will grow.

Tammany would be wiser to accept the facts. It will have to accept the fact that the city needs, and the State has ordered, the new Court House.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Deception as Practiced in Germany. Nothing could better illustrate the methods used by the German Government to perpetuate in the minds of its subjects the belief that the war is going well for them and it than do the official reports which contain all the information regarding this week's events near Cambrai that has been allowed to reach the German public. Other Governments, it is true, are not at all eager to give out minute details of their reverses, but in no case can it be charged that any of the Entente peoples have been deliberately deceived, as have the Germans this week, by the turning of an important defeat into a glorious victory.

Perhaps this should be called a method of delaying news—of letting the facts come out slowly in order that their force may be weakened—rather than an attempt permanently to misinform. Certainly not all Germans will refrain from looking up on their maps the names of the villages mentioned in the official outgivings, and these are enough to reveal just how large was the area described as "a little ground," and they can discover, by measuring the distance between Cambrai and Fontaine Notre Dame, how far beyond the Hindenburg line the British had penetrated before they reached a place they could not hold.

Investigation of this sort takes time, however, and a majority of the German population have neither the inclination nor the facilities for making it. They prefer to accept the news as provided by their masters, and, as the truth slowly filters down to them, they can postpone its acceptance by the ever-convenient exclamations about "British lies." In these battles along extensive fronts, too, there are always points where the attack is a complete or comparative failure—where the losses of the assailants have been heavy. These points are always mentioned in the German reports, and mentioned as if they were the whole battle.

The German press of necessity permits itself to be used for the concealment and distortion of facts, and there was evidence yesterday to show that the papers went even further than did the military publicity officers in minimizing the severest reverse yet suffered on the western front. But, after all, such expedients are nothing less than desperate, and terrible will be the penalty for them except in one contingency—ultimate victory for those who resort to them.

Householders Should Do the Same. Cynics who observe that recent changes in the bills of fare offered by many New York hotels have not been accompanied by a congruous lowering of prices may say—and in fact do—that the smaller portions and the absence of certain foods are not wholly unrelated to a yearning on the part of the hotel keepers for larger profits. How much of basis there may be for this suspicion in some cases is a matter of small consequence—of none at all, indeed, in comparison with the unquestionable fact that these changes have resulted in the saving of meat by the hundreds of tons and of wheat by the hundreds of bushels every week since they began.

The exact figures showing the amounts of various foods that thus have been left available for export to our allies, and for diminishing scarcity and therefore prices in the domestic market, have come from the Federal Commissioner in Washington, and the totals as printed yesterday were impressive. No patrons of the hotels and restaurants that have established wheatless and meatless days have suffered at all from hunger in consequence, nor would there be any painful deprivations if this excellent example were followed by all other establishments of the same kind.

The number doing it is steadily increasing, but in this field, as in so many others, it seems that the presence and activity of the alien enemy have been revealed. For while some of the providers of public tables have merely been slow in joining the movement, others have refused to do so because they are out of sympathy with its object, which is, of course, to increase the military efficiency of Germany's foes. That there are places where that feeling of antagonism prevails is definitely charged by those who ought to know, and presumably do know, of what they speak. In those places not only is it asserted that no efforts to save are made, but that there is carried out a deliberate purpose to consume more than the ordinary quantity of just the foods in regard to which economy should be practiced.

The accusation probably cannot be proved definitely. It is too plausible, however, to be dismissed as incredible by anybody who reads the daily revelations of what a minute, but industrious and not negligible, fraction of our population is doing.

Successfully Started Discussion. While protests against the exemption of baseball players from military service lack the unanimity in baseball circles they would have if all of the league officials, club managers, and players were as wise and as patriotic as they should be, it is yet encouraging to observe that the true quality of President JOHNSON's astounding proposal is appreciated in those circles as well as out of it. And of its originator it can at least be said that it has not taken him long to realize his mistake. For already he is saying that his purpose in formulating his demand was merely to start a discussion of the subject.

This assertion, however, would be a better palliation of his very grave mistake if he did not weaken his new position by revealing that in his opinion baseball is a business as deserving of freedom from interference in wartime as are any of the other businesses upon the continuance of which, in war as in peace, the welfare and safety of the country are largely dependent.

As a matter of fact, professional baseball is not a business at all, except in the eyes of the few who make money out of it, and that their private profits should go on is of consequence only to themselves. To the public at large baseball is a sport or game, innocent enough as such, but only innocent, or even tolerable, on condition that it involves no minutest diminution of the nation's military efficiency and does not rob our armies of a single man who ought to be in them.

We could get along quite well for no short period without a single game of baseball played by anybody within the draft age limits.

A Sailor Made Welcome.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It gives me pleasure to call the following note to your attention, and through your columns to the attention of the public, as it is just one example of the appreciation of one of our stranger sailor boys for just the simple act of making him welcome in our home for a single evening:

Dear Mrs. ——.

Only a note must suffice as I attempt to tell you how much I enjoyed last evening. Such a welcome may seem the more gladdening to those who are further away from their old friends than I, but if so, it is only because they are more lonely, and not because they can appreciate any better such complete and cordial friendship.

I feel sure that I speak from the hearts of most of the fellows when I say that nothing can instill in our hearts the spirit of the Homeland or the feeling that the fight is worth it all than the knowledge that somebody cares whether or not our contentment is as complete as it can be.

Hoping to be able to see you all again some time, I must close.

Faithfully,

I trust that the publication of the above may help to further the spirit of good-will in our country. E. E. L.

ART NOTES.

First Exhibition of the Taos Society of Artists.

The Taos Society of Artists is holding its first exhibition at the Hotel Majestic. The art colony of Taos is very well known throughout the United States, and this society, formed two years ago, comprises nine members, E. Irving Couse, Bert G. Phillips, Ernest L. Blumenschein, J. H. Sharp, W. Herbert Dunton, O. E. Berninghaus, Victor Higgins, Walter Ufer, and Julius Rolshoven. The Taos Indian is shown in their paintings engaged in his various activities, remarkably mild in aspect for a type that has resisted invasion and change through many centuries. Walter Ufer paints a Laguna Indian interior which testifies also to a high degree of cleanliness, the clothes of the inhabitants and the walls of the primitive shelter wearing a shining morning face, innocent of either dirt of untidiness. Mr. Rolshoven's portraits of "Summer Deer," "Eagle," and "Rain Cloud" are as dashing as Mr. Henri's, but have a certain surface polish and finish which the painter of sophisticated types is more apt to avoid, one may infer, than the painter of the so-called "savage." The pure blues and blond yellows in the street scenes by Victor Higgins interpet the color of New Mexico with a charming radiant delicacy. Mr. Berninghaus strikes a pleasant narrative note in "His Favorite Pony," and the bluish pallor of his color is echoed in Mr. Dunton's "The Range Rider." Mr. Couse and Mr. Blumenschein are well known to gallery visitors. The exhibition as a whole has the interest of new subject matter, but the painting is done in the spirit of illustration, perhaps the right spirit, when it is an affair of making records of a race certain to vanish. The exhibition closes Dec. 22.

Paintings by Violet Mège.

A young Algerian painter and sculptor, Violet Mège, is exhibiting her work at the Touchstone Gallery. When very young her talent was recognized as unusual, and she was sent to Paris as a protegée of the French Government, working there for several years. Her pictures in the present exhibition are divided into the Algerian group, the French group, and the American group, but the division brings with it no special evidence that the artist is sensitive to the spirit of place. She carries her Algerian atmosphere with her when she is painting an American "Red House" as when she is painting the Seine and the Luxemburg. One feels her, indeed, rather more racially different in these paintings than in those made in her native country, which have no surprises, but are vivid sketches of the picturesque places dear to the Occidental. Her portraits are her strongest achievements, "The Student Girl" showing a very serious effort toward characterization. The exhibition is well worth visiting and lasts until Dec. 1.

PAY FOR PRISONERS.

The Law of Nations as Explained by the Adjutant General.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A letter recently appeared in your editorial page from a gentleman much disgruntled over what fat salaries he had heard were paid the interned Germans, salaries far in excess of what our boys are receiving while fighting for our country and its Government, which these insolent Germans have been doing their utmost to hamper and destroy.

I was seriously concerned myself at such seeming injustice and wrote to the War Department to make inquiry, receiving the inclosed letter.

E. H. B. LATHROP.

Hillsdale, N. J., Nov. 22, 1917.

[Inclosure.]

War Department,
The Adjutant General's Office,
Washington, Nov. 19, 1917.

Mr. E. H. B. Lathrop, Grey House, Hillsdale, N. J.

Dear Sir: Referring to your letter of the 15th instant, in which you make inquiry concerning the treatment by this Government of German prisoners of war, I am directed by the Secretary of War to advise you as follows:

International law provides that a captor nation pay commissioned prisoners of war a certain amount which is used to defray the cost of their food and clothing, and for the purchase of any other articles permitted them by prison regulations. Upon the conclusion of war the amounts so expended shall be refunded to the captor Government by the prisoners' own Government. International law further provides that enlisted prisoners of war shall be clothed and fed by a captor nation and shall be paid for certain labor performed by them. This money is not given to the prisoners, but is used to better their condition, and reimbursement by their own Government is not an indemnity.

The rules of international law just given are being complied with by all of the belligerents, including Germany, of the present war, and what the United States is doing is only what is required of them by the laws of war.

Very respectfully,
J. S. JONES,
Adjutant General.

Denies Felix Diaz Is Pro-German.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Friends of General Felix Diaz are scandalized by a news item in a New York paper alleging that the Diaz movement in Mexico has German support. As spokesman, I emphatically declare that General Diaz himself and all who are in harmony with his reconstructive plans for Mexico are, and from the beginning have been, unfailing in their sympathy for the allied cause. Witness the uninterrupted shipment to France, England, and the United States of oil from the Tampico oil fields, which for two years have been in full control of the Diaz forces. The prosperity and the right economical development of Mexico depend absolutely on the friendship and the success of the United States and its allies in the war.

ITALY.

Rubies burn thy boiling sea,
Dripping rubies from thy heart;
And afar we pale, and start
As we first had felt a blow,
Though a thousand scars we bear.
Little of our world we know,
Little of her ways can read;
Lies her head we know not where;
Or her shifting hands and feet;
But her heart we know is set
(Like a song within a deed,
Like a jewel all may see,
Like a glory all may wear)
Golden warm in Italy;
And, there wounded, we must bleed.

Thou art bleeding, Italy!
Hot the tears that blind us; we
See no sin of all thy sins.
All we know is in our veins,—
Veins that burn with hurt to thee.
All we know is, thou dost call;
That thou in the darkness strove,
And the spear is in thy side.
All we know is that we love,
And the blows that on thee fall
Fall as blows upon a bride,
Italy!

OLIVE TILFORD DARGAN.

THIS BAZAAR FOR CHARITY.

Mrs. Atherton's Assurances for the Patrons of Hero Land.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hear some apprehension expressed that the disgraceful fiasco of the Army and Navy Bazaar will injure the prospects of Hero Land; that people, reading the revelations in the newspapers, will assume that all charity bazaars are in the same class and that they would far better give their money to their favorite war relief organization.

But nothing could be further from the truth. If the raison d'être of the Army and Navy Bazaar were given the ghost would be laid at once, but as it is a principle of our law that the greater the truth the greater the libel, I refrain. Suffice it to say that the poor Army and Navy are as innocent as lambs, and that there is a certain class of men (the vulgar word "bunch" best describes them) who make their living out of entertainments for charity. These men charge high for their services, and although they may have altruistic spasms (who am I that I should judge?) they hate, like the American race in general, to show their feelings.

With the National Allied Relief and the Committee of Mercy, organized and run by John Moffat, it is quite another story. Mr. Moffat has worked for three years with no salary whatever, and spending something like five thousand a year out of his own pocket. Meanwhile he has sent, or helped the sixty war relief organizations co-operating with these parent trunks to send, sums amounting to almost twenty millions of dollars. The personnel of these sixty organizations, numbering the most prominent people in New York, each organization with one of the great banks as Treasurer, have the utmost confidence in Mr. Moffat's integrity, management, and executive ability. That portion of the New York public in a position to know the inside history of such matters has equal faith in him.

Now Mr. Moffat is running the Hero Land Bazaar. The idea was his, and he has given thought and attention to every detail. All the prominent people associated with him are donating their services. Large donations enabled him to have it decorated as no bazaar has ever been decorated before; it will be like an escape into the Arabian Nights from the dull horrors that are coming closer every day.

He has stated in THE TIMES the insignificant sum which must be deducted from the gross receipts. Only one or two of the decorators are paid, and the clerical staff.

To show how determined he is that not a cent shall be wasted, it is only necessary to state that no one will receive a pass, no matter what his services, to or in the bazaar. For instance, I, as President of Le Bien-Etre du Blessé, have a large booth on the third floor—where all the allied charities are—but I must buy my own season ticket and that of my three associates in the general management of the two sections of the booth, Miss Elsa Maxwell, Mrs. Laird, and Mrs. Russell. I must also buy one hundred and forty entrance tickets for my twenty-four volunteer assistants, who will distribute themselves over the sixteen days of the fair. There is no appeal from this rule, and thousands of dollars will be saved, besides much dishonesty averted—people sometimes pass their passes on.

Each of us running a booth gets for our charity every cent we make, the only charge being our share of the electric lighting. We furnish our own booths, although counters are supplied without extra charge. I went down to the Grand Central Palace the other day to see my booth, ask questions about carpenters, and get a good deal of other general information. I expected to hang around for an hour and then learn little, if anything. I found no confusion whatever, but a most business-like official in charge, who showed me my beautiful booth and gave me all the information I wanted in five minutes. It is the same thing at the offices of the National Allied Relief. Questions are answered promptly and satisfactorily, with none of the maddening vagueness and procrastination I have always associated with these affairs, and not one of us but is confident that the bazaar will be run with as few jars as is humanly possible, and that it will be as successful as it will be unique and beautiful.

If THE TIMES will give me space I will embrace this opportunity to inform the public interested in Le Bien-Etre du Blessé that our booth is divided into two parts—a fortune-telling "tent," (very mysterious, with black velvet curtains and dim lights, and incense—unless the fortune tellers choke and object,) and a beauty shop where Mrs. Laird's creams, skin foods, hair tonics, and powders alone can be bought. Mrs. Laird has given us a large donation, besides her personal services every night, and furthermore has gathered in the few remaining bottles of J. Giraud Fils' perfumes and cakes of soap in this country. Young men, buy them for your best girls. They are very expensive, but they are the pure essence, and it will be many a long day before France sends us any more.

De Wolfe and Wachner are dressing twelve large dolls, donated by Wanamaker, to represent the Broadway stars of the moment. Miss Florence Nash will auction them off. In the fortune-telling booth the three eminent professionals who have so generously donated their services are Dr. de Kerlor, Mrs. Cochlaine, and Mrs. Piper. I should like to give the long list of the accomplished dilettantes who are also giving me many afternoons and evenings, as well as the list of pretty and attractive women who will serve in the beauty shop, but I dare not consume more space.

Sinn Fein as Suffrage Model.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of today on woman suffrage you say:

Turn to England. . . . For such invaluable services, such "concrete" fruitful patriotism, great numbers of English women are to be enfranchised.

Are they? So far as I am aware the question is by no means settled: the proposal to enfranchise a very limited number of women is merely one of many points under consideration in the measure now before the British House of Commons and there is yet no guarantee that even this limited woman suffrage will become law. Such as it is, the proposal is to extend the franchise merely to women over thirty years of age, and, as most of the women who make bombs and run elevators are under thirty, it is not quite clear how their "fruitful and concrete" patriotism is to be rewarded. Moreover, the women of Ireland (even those over 30) are to be excluded entirely from the proposed new franchise clause.

I notice that the same illusion—that Great Britain has pledged herself to enfranchise women as a reward for being "patriotic," seems to prevail in the minds of New York suffrage leaders, being used by them as an argument for woman suffrage and by you as an argument against American women getting the vote. As a matter of fact, none of the European allies have given their women the vote, except Russia; they and the Central Powers alike exclude women from citizenship. The Sinn Feiners in their proclamation of an Irish republic, on the other hand, granted the franchise to all men and women over 21, an ideal that both Allies and Central Powers would do well to emulate.

HYLAN FACES FIGHT ON COURT HOUSE SITE

MUST GO TO LEGISLATURE

Lawyers and Judges Counted Upon to Unite in Opposition—No Work Likely Till After War.

It was made plain yesterday that Mayor-elect John F. Hylan will abandon the Court House project only over the strongest opposition of the Court House Board. In reply to the Hylan suggestion that the Court House project be given up and model tenements built on the site owned by the city, L. Laflin Kellogg, Chairman of the Court House Board, pointed out that the new administration could not abandon the project unless the Legislature said so, and that as long as the present law stands he cannot build model tenements or anything else on the site without the consent of the Court House Board. It is very evident that the Judge will not get such consent.

Of course, as Mayor, Judge Hylan expects to get rid of the Court House Board, and the law making mandatory the building of a new Court House in New York City. It is the belief of those opposed to giving up the Court House project that the coming administration will have difficulty in persuading the Legislature that it should reverse itself, pointing to the fact that the 1918 Legislature will be Republican. It is believed that a majority of the lawyers of the city will fight a repealer of the Court House bill. The Justices of the Supreme Court have already approved the plans prepared by the Court House Board.

It was pointed out by members of the board yesterday that the Hylan argument that the Court House should not be built at present high prices of labor and materials did not amount to anything, inasmuch as at the beginning of the war the Court House Board had adopted a resolution stating that more favorable conditions should prevail before construction work was started, and offering the site to the city for whatever use it could make of it during the war.

"The Court House Board," said Chairman Kellogg, "has had the plans approved by the Judges, by the Art Commission, and by the Board of Estimate, and would have asked for bids before this, but for the high prices prevailing. That was the only reason for not going ahead with the work.

"Now I have no wish to antagonize Mayor-elect Hylan, but it should be pointed out that we are a State board, and appointed without term of office being stated. Judge Hylan cannot carry out his reported plan unless he has the Legislature repeal the act making mandatory the building of a Court House and creating the board.

"Whether or not Judge Hylan can do that remains to be seen. I doubt it. The Court House Board will fight such a repeal bill, as I believe most of the lawyers of the city will. We need a new Court House, and I want to see it built. That is the only object I have in the matter. I want to see the thing go through."

Mr. Kellogg admitted that the board could not construct the Court House unless the Board of Estimate supplied the money. On the other hand, he pointed out that it would have to furnish the money unless the Legislature permitted it not to.

Other members of the board were not pleased with the attitude taken by the Mayor-elect. They did not wish to express an opinion for publication, referring all inquiries to Chairman Kellogg.

It is known that Charles Steckler, a member of the board, intends to resign in the near future. However, he stated his intention prior to the statement of the attitude of the Mayor-elect toward the Court House project.

The members of the board have been serving without pay since the passage of the resolution at the beginning of the war not to go ahead immediately with the construction of the Court House.

HYLAN ATTACKS BUDGET.

Urges Board of Aldermen to Cut Salaries and End Useless Jobs.

Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Aldermen, conferred for two hours with Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen, over proposals to reduce the 1918 budget, now before the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen. It is understood that they discussed proposals emanating from Mayor-elect Hylan as to certain salary curtailments and the abolition of several hundred minor jobs. After the conference the Sheriff gave to newspaper men a letter from Judge Hylan to President Dowling suggesting that the Aldermen reduce salaries and abolish useless positions. This is Judge Hylan's letter:

Nov. 23, 1917.

The Hon. Frank L. Dowling, President, Board of Aldermen, City Hall, New York City:

Dear Mr. President: Upon an examination of the budget I am prompted to the suggestion that the Board of Aldermen exercise its authority under the charter and reduce what in their judgment would be inordinate salary increases and strike from the budget the places not necessary to the conduct of the city's business.

The financial stringency the country is facing at this time and the already heavy burden placed upon the taxpayers and rent payers of the city suggests that you do your utmost along fair, just, and equitable lines to give what relief can possibly come from Aldermanic action. Very truly yours,

JOHN F. HYLAN.

The Sheriff said he had nothing to add to the letter. When asked what concrete steps the Aldermen had been advised to take he said, "Wait and see."

AGAINST PARTY FOR WOMEN.

Mrs. Lillian S. Griffin Says All Voters Have Common Interest.

"If you ever hear any one say anything about such a thing as a 'Woman's Party,' sit upon it," said Mrs. Lillian S. Griffin, President of the Woman's Law Club, indignantly, at a meeting of the club at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday afternoon. "When the women live upon the east side of the city and the men upon the west then will be the time for a Woman's Party and a Man's Party. Until then, while all our interests are in common, we will work together. Parties do not mean as much as they did. The party now is more for the service of man, and man not so much for service of the party."

A member had asked about voting, and Mrs. Griffin said that it was not possible, as the laws were at present for women to vote at the primaries without being affiliated with a political party, and woman asked about the possibility of a party for women.

"When we started this club," said Mrs. Griffin, "it did not matter so much what we did, for we did not have influence. Now we must have less talking and more deeds, not only to elevate ourselves, but for the principles for which suffrage stands. Our constitution gives a good idea of the work for which we stand, to 'take an interest in the law and discuss the same' and to 'uphold the law when justice is impugned.' We may want to educate voters for next October."

Big Growth in Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Nearly $100,000,000 will be received this month from ordinary internal revenue collections, mainly taxes on liquor, tobacco, and automobiles, according to estimates made today, based on receipts of $71,000,000 since Nov. 1. This record is almost three times as high as that of November, 1916. Since July 1, total internal revenue receipts have been $284,000,000, as compared with $176,000,000 in the same period last year.

NO PEACE PROSPECT IN SUFFRAGE VICTORY

State Party's Program Stirs Anew Opposition of the Antis to Federal Amendment.

FORESEE SEX ANTAGONISM

Alice Hill Chittenden Reviews Convention and Points to Dangers of Platform Adopted.

The platform adopted by the New York State Woman Suffrage Party at its convention, just adjourned, has ended all probability of the antis joining them in a united woman's movement. Both the reprisal plank, which narrowly escaped incorporation in the platform and the Federal amendment indorsement test for all candidates for Congress and the State Legislature have further antagonized the anti sentiment. Those who supported Miss Harriet May Mills's proposal to change the name of the organization to the New York State Women's Political League on the ground that up-State women still found the name suffrage "a red rag" and that the party could do its work of educating the woman voter far better under a less contentious title, were shown to have gauged rightly a phase of sentiment in the city as well, according to expressions of opposition feelings yesterday.

Though the State anti party will adhere to its intention of turning its organization into a patriotic league to wage war on pacifism and all forms of disloyalty, a platform on which it appealed to the suffragists to unite with it, the determination of the suffragists to make the Federal amendment propaganda their chief aim will result in a sturdily organized fight in New York State against the Federal amendment.

It was learned yesterday that the antis are earnest in their intention not to let apathy on the part of those who think the States alone should deal with suffrage to enable the State body to win easy victories. A State Committee of the national anti-association will be appointed, and it will try to unify every phase of opposition to the State party's program.

Miss Chittenden's Review.

An analysis of the convention proceedings from the standpoint of the opposition was made yesterday by Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, who said:

"The prophecy made by one up-State paper editorially that the extension of suffrage to women 'would revolutionize present political conditions,' is already in process of being fulfilled.

"The political leaders of all parties in the Empire State must have received a pretty severe jolt when they read in the papers a few days after election that many members of the Woman Suffrage Party favored holding their organization together as a militant or nonpartisan agency, which would have as its chief plank the immediate passage of the Woman Suffrage Federal amendment, and which could, and would, throw its vote for or against men who favored or opposed measures indorsed by the Woman's Party.

"The suffrage convention came within an ace of going a step further. It took the sagacity of one of its leaders, Mary Garrett Hay, to amend the reprisal plank, which, as originally framed, provided that the suffragists should throw their voting strength as a unit against men in public life who had opposed them in the past and in favor of such men only as have given their previous support or who agree in the future to uphold any measures advocated by the Woman's Party. If any such plan should be adhered to and carried out it would lead inevitably to an ever-menacing antagonism between the sexes. This is one of the possible evil effects of woman suffrage which anti-suffragists apprehended and deprecated.

Predicts Sex Warfare.

"The suffrage part of the female population of the State have clamored for equality as citizens, but if they are going to use the ballot as a club with which to attempt to coerce the male voters, lawmakers, or candidates for office to do their bidding, then the male politicians in turn will have to appease the women's organizations by bargaining, or they will use them as mere pawns in the political game, and instead of men and women meeting on equal grounds and equal terms as voters we shall have a continuous sex warfare.

"The suffrage movement is, as one eminent feminist has said, 'An essential branch of the tree of feminism,' and the driving power or force of the feminist movement is engendered by a desire to overturn the relations and therefore the relative power of the sexes.

"The New York suffragists are not the first ones to threaten to throw their voting power against men who opposed them. 'This is in reality a resumption of the "black list" of Congressmen and Senators issued by the suffragists as far back as 1914, when they announced they would defeat all those men who had refused to consent to vote for the Federal amendment.'

"A similar threat was made by the women voters of the Western States to defeat President Wilson, because they could not force him to a declaration in favor of the Federal Amendment. The utter disaster which may result from the continuous employment of such reprisal methods in politics was pointed out in an editorial in The New York World on Aug. 5, 1916, which said: 'There can be no stability in Government, no security in Government, if 4,000,000 votes can be used as an instrument of blackmail in compelling amendments to the Constitution of the United States whenever a few bosses of either sex so determine.'

Coercion Suggested.

"A woman voter of one of the Western States recently advised New York suffragists to adopt this coercive method of obtaining legislation by means of the Woman's Party, declaring that method had proved very successful in her State, inasmuch as the women banded together had forced the passage of such legislation as they demanded. It may be enlightening to the voters of New York State to know that the State had the reputation a few years ago of having passed the most extravagant legislation of any State in the country.

"The French Revolution may seem to many to be a far cry from the present tense days in New York State, where the war overshadows even the activities of the suffragists, but to the men of New York who really have the best interest of government at heart I commend a book, 'The Rights of Women,' written a few years ago by Ostrogorski, who received the prize in an international competition for the best essay on this subject, offered by the Paris Faculté de Droit. History repeats itself, and the women of the French Revolution were indeed the forerunners of some of the suffrage leaders of the present day. Ostrogorski states in one paragraph that, 'having flung themselves into the Revolution with an ardor and an enthusiasm not devoid of grandeur at the outset, they soon lost all balance, intellectual and moral. The Terrorists themselves,' he continued, 'were disgusted in the end by the habit into which the women fell, of exciting the people, of remonstrating with the men in office, and of promoting disorder in the cities.' These words read like paragraphs in the daily papers regarding the action of the pickets in Washington, as well as the suffrage attacks made upon all men in public life who do not agree with their point of view.

"Things came to such a pass in Paris that the Committee on Public Safety in 1793 asked the Convention to take measure against female politicians, and the Convention thereupon decreed the suppression of female clubs and societies, and subsequently prohibited any public assemblage of women. The female politicians then completely disappeared and did not reappear until nearly a half century later.

Other Periods of Feminism.

"There have been other periods in the world's history when the women attained political power, but they have not been periods of advanced civilization. The semi-barbarians of ancient Lycia gave much power to their women, but the Athenians, the most civilized of the ancient races, would not follow this example of their barbarian neighbors. In Sparta, Athens's great rival, women had much power. They were even soldiers; one Princess marched at the head of her female troop to rebuke the Senators for the decree that the women and children should be removed from the city before an anticipated attack by an enemy. But the birth rate declined in Sparta while women sought to direct and control public affairs, and the Spartan Nation ceased to exist.

"The dropping of the reprisal plank by the Woman Suffrage Party will not satisfy the male voters of the State, for just as long as the suffragists keep their organization together to work as a unit in the body politic there is sure to be friction, bitterness, and sex antagonism. In these critical days, when our country is in peril, men and women voters should all join together with only one plank in their platform—the plank of unqualified loyalty to the Government in the prosecution of the war."

NATION'S SUFFRAGISTS WILL HONOR NEW YORK

As a finale to its forty-ninth annual convention, the Executive Board of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party met at headquarters, 303 Fifth Avenue, yesterday to plan for the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association in Washington on Dec. 11. New York State, because its women are the most newly enfranchised, are to be guests of honor at the convention.

Among those who will attend as New York's representatives are Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Mrs. Raymond Brown, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Miss Mary Garret Hay, Mrs. Arthur Livermore, Mrs. Frank J. Tone, Miss Mary Dreier, Mrs. William Belknap, Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, Miss Alice Morgan Wright, Mrs. Noel Edge, Miss Adella Potter, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. Willis Mitchell, Miss Alice Duer Miller, Mrs. Henry Bull, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, Miss Katherine Devereux Blake, Mrs. John Blair, and Mrs. William Hays. The city party, affiliated with the State body, has not yet appointed its delegates.

The city party yesterday planned to rush its plans for the political education of women voters, Miss Mary Garret Hay, its Chairman, announced. A committee for the purpose is made up of Mrs. Adolphe Borie, President of the Bryn Mawr Club; Miss Lillian D. Wald, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Dean of Barnard College; Miss Edith Morgan, Mrs. Herbert Croly, Miss Lina Gano, Mrs. Thomas B. Wells, Mrs. V. Simkovitch, Miss L. Davis, Miss M. Harvey, and Mrs. John Blair. Classes will begin the first week in December.

Under the auspices of the city party a series of jubilees over the victory of Nov. 6 are to be held in the various Assembly districts. Suffrage Captains are to give dinners to the leaders and leaders are to entertain workers. Simple, wartime menus are to prevail. The Ninth Assembly District will celebrate at the Café Boulevard tonight, Miss Belle C. Howard, its leader, presiding. Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock there is to be a suffrage thanksgiving service in St. Mark's in the Bouwerie, at which many members of the Protestant Episcopal Suffrage Association of New York will attend.

At the State party headquarters yesterday it was said that in seeking fair representation for women among State officeholders a natural preference would be shown for such activities as public health, education, social problems generally, and welfare work among industries in which women and young girls are employed.

WOMEN IN NEW SOCIETY.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Democratic Fusion Committee of 170 at the Hotel Martinique yesterday went out of existence, and in its place was formed the woman's regular Democratic organization of New York. These officers of the old organization were chosen for the new: Miss Isabella M. Pettus, President; Mrs. C. McCall, Secretary; Mrs. Charles Hirst, Recording Secretary; Mrs. James P. Nieman, Treasurer; Mrs. Murray Hulbert, Financial Secretary, and Mrs. F. O. Leary, auditor.

The Executive Committee is composed of Mrs. Ella Hastings, Chairman; Mrs. John D. Haney, formerly President of the Women's College Clubs; Mrs. Julia Sanders, Mrs. J. I. Berry, Mrs. Robins A. Lau, and Mrs. Edward M. Dresser. Some objection was made to the formation of a new organization, the suggestion being that the auxiliary ally itself with either the Woman's Democratic Club or the State Democratic Forum, but it was decided to form a new organization to work along political lines.

WEST SIDE REPEAL HELD UP BY BOARD

Estimate Members Refer New York Central's Rights to Corporation Counsel.

RANSOM'S PROTEST IN VAIN

The Service Board, He Urges, Wants Its Way Clear So It Can Act After Dec. 1.

The proposal of the Public Service Commission that the city repeal the ordinance of 1847 granting the New York Central the use of certain streets was warmly, though not altogether favorably, received by the Board of Estimate yesterday. Discussion of the proposal was marked by clashes between members of the board and between Controller Prendergast and W. L. Ransom, counsel for the commission.

The upshot was that the request was referred to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion as to the power of the Board of Estimate. This was not altogether pleasing to Judge Ransom, who said that on Dec. 1 the Public Service Commission achieved full power in the west side controversy and it wanted the ordinance of 1847 repealed before that time.

At the opening of its session, the board received and filed a report of the Joint Committee of the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission, saying that it could reach no agreement with the New York Central as to the west side improvement plans. Then there was read a separate communication from the commission asking that the board give consideration to a resolution repealing the ordinance of 1847 together with other ordinances and resolutions and permits approved at various times since 1847.

"What is this matter?" asked Mayor Mitchel when the communication had been read.

"Whose requiem?" asked President Connolly of Queens.

"The requiem of the committee," replied the Controller.

"It seems to me," said Mayor Mitchel, "that I introduced a resolution to rescind the 1847 ordinance in 1910 or 1911, and I also have a recollection that I was sat upon very hard."

Then Judge Ransom said the commission would like to have the ordinance repealed at once, so that by Dec. 1 the commission could clear the way for a definite ascertainment of just what rights the railroad held.

"Do you ask that seriously?" asked the Controller.

"I ask it very seriously," replied Judge Ransom. Then he assured the board that he would stake his professional reputation that the board had full power to rescind the ordinance.

"That may be true in your opinion," remarked the Controller, "but you are not our counsel and we must take the word of the Corporation Counsel."

Then Judge Ransom said he hoped that the Board of Estimate had not for several years been considering reports on the west side problem without an opinion from the Corporation Counsel as to the railroad's rights under the ordinance.

"I am sorry, Judge, to shatter your hopes," said the Controller, "but we have had no such opinion." Despite the insistence of Judge Ransom that Corporation Counsels had passed on the matter, a motion was carried to ask Corporation Counsel Hardy to give an opinion on the subject by next Friday, if possible.

The specifications and estimate of cost of $61,500 for the restoration of the cupola and the reconstruction of the third floor and roof over the central portion of the City Hall, which was damaged by fire last May, were accepted. The plans provide for the restoration of the cupola in sheet copper, backed with fireproof material. The cupola will be made to resemble the original cupola on the City Hall.

TRINITY GIVES RECTOR FOR WORK AT UPTON

Trinity Parish yesterday granted, by action of its Vestry, a leave of absence to its rector, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, to enable him to enter upon war work. The leave is not absolutely fixed, but it is expected to be for three months, or perhaps to the beginning of Lent. The work to be taken up will be that of an Episcopal rector at Camp Upton, in common with ministers of other bodies, which are selecting men of their prominent churches to serve enlisted men in this way. There was signed in this city yesterday two important war contracts. One was for the erection of a church and community building, to be located upon the Government reservation at Camp Upton and to cost $30,000. The building is to be owned jointly by Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregational, and Lutheran War Commissions, and is to be used by these bodies at hours to be arranged. Offices are provided for the various preachers, who are also to be pastors and always to keep in close touch with enlisted men of their respective bodies.

The other contract, signed under Presbyterian management, is for a community building at Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., to cost $20,000, and seven bodies join in the expense. It is to be located on leased land of fifty acres held by Bishop Matthews of the Episcopal Church. The feature will be a great common room, 24 by 40 feet, and there will be seven offices provided for the present seven bodies entering into the plan, with some additional rooms in case other bodies wish to come in. There will also be a big dining room and dormitories. Work is to be pushed with all speed upon both the Camp Upton and Camp Dix buildings.

Churches in many cities are taking action similar to that of the Vestry of Trinity and are granting leave with full salary and also paying for supplies for periods of three to six months. In some cases famous preachers go and stay at cantonments, and in others they go from one to another for Sunday sermons. The Rev. Dr. W. T. Wilcox of Westminster Presbyterian Church at Bloomfield, N. J., has been granted leave to go to Camp Dix, and the Rev. Dr. James Ramsay Swain of the Woodland Avenue Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, will go to Camp Upton for the period covered by the Rev. Dr. Manning there. At Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, women of Ohio are to provide a building costing $25,000 for the entertainment of parents of enlisted men, and a fund of fully $250,000 is already guaranteed for the entire Ohio work for soldiers done through Protestant bodies.

Hears Stiassny Estate is Insolvent.

A statement that the estate of Mrs. Sarah Stiassny, whose death from a bullet wound is still under investigation by the District Attorney, may be insolvent, was made before the Surrogate yesterday, when an application for the appointment of a temporary administrator was heard. Counsel for Mrs. Mollie Goldsrein, who says she is an aunt of Mrs. Stiassny, said that the estate probably amounts to $250,000, but Isador Hershfield, who was named as an executor in the last will, said that Mrs. Stiassny's personal property was not sufficient to pay her debts, and that her realty is nearly all mortgaged to the full extent, and in several cases foreclosure proceedings are threatened. The Surrogate adjourned the case to Dec. 28.

HERO LAND OPENS GATE TO THE PUBLIC TONIGHT

"Hero Land," the Allied War Relief bazaar, which is expected to eclipse any spectacle ever produced, will be opened at 7 o'clock this evening at the Grand Central Palace. Artists and decorators, who have been interested in the pictorial success of the affair, have been hard at work for the last few days putting on the finishing touches, and practically everything was in readiness last night for the opening.

Never has the palace undergone such a complete overhauling. Tons of bricks, mortar, and lumber were brought in to build the trenches, dugouts, and booths, until the building has largely been transformed. Many interesting events of history are depicted on one of the four floors, which are to be used for the bazaar. The dugouts and trenches are an exact copy of a portion of the Hindenburg line and are realistic even to the weapons used in battle. As it was considered unwise and impossible because of the limited space to find room for the British "tank," a building was erected especially for it on the Park Avenue side and with it will be shown other interesting relics sent over by the British Government.

"Bagdad," in charge of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, will occupy the entire third floor, and most of the second floor has been taken by the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers, where Bowling Green will be reproduced as it was in 1680. Mrs. Eli Du Bose Hoyle, wife of Brig. Gen. Hoyle, U. S. A., commander of the Department of the East, will preside over the booth of the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund booth. A feature of this exhibition will be a number of blind men engaged in manufacturing electrical goods, having been taught by the Double Duty Finger Guild, established by Dr. Schuyler S. Wheeler. The fund has founded two institutions at Neuilly, near Paris, where totally blinded soldiers are educated to earn their living. Some paintings donated for the blind soldiers will be exhibited and disposed of at the booth.

American night will be celebrated at the opening, and in addition to the attractions at the different booths a musical program has been arranged. A chorus of 1,000 voices will sing the national songs of the allied countries, under the direction of Harriet Ware, and the soloists will include Mary Jordan, who will sing the "Star-Spangled Banner"; Florence Perini, Mary Lawton, and Mme. Christine Eymael. They will appear in the costumes of the large countries now at war. There will also be a program of dancing by Mme. Thamara Swirskaya, assisted by M. Patopovich and the Balalaika Orchestra. Artists from the St. Nicholas Rink will appear on the skating rink in the course of the evening. Under the direction of the Stage Women's War Relief, moving pictures of Pauline Frederick, Constance Talmage, Carlisle Blackwell, Thomas Meigham, and Earle Ford will be taken under the direction of Hugh Ford, and later exhibited.

Society women will preside over the Red Cross Tea Room and will also act as hostesses at the various booths. Luncheon and dinner will be served in the Café de Paris, where reservations have already been made for the entire period of the bazaar by persons of social prominence. The bazaar will be closed tomorrow. Monday will be French and Alsace-Lorraine Day, with French and Alsatian plays and spectacles, and exclusive French official motion pictures of the war will be shown.

Flonzaley was the name of Mr. De Coppet's château on Lake Geneva, and the quartet took its name in compliment to him. The members spent their Summers in the Swiss city and their Winters touring the United States. Mr. Pochon now makes his home in this city.

TRAINING CAMP ELEVENS IN GRIDIRON FRAY AT POLO GROUNDS AND EBBETS FIELD TODAY

CAMP TEAMS TAKE PLACE OF COLLEGES

No Yale and Harvard Battle Today, but Service Elevens Will Furnish Excitement.

TWO GAMES FOR NEW YORK

Upton and Devens National Army Representatives to Mingle in Football Treat.

The disorganizing effect of the war on the football season is more noticeable on today's schedule than at any other period of the year. The games would, under normal conditions, have marked the climax of the college season. Yale and Harvard were to have played their annual classic in Cambridge today, while West Point and Annapolis were to have clashed at the Polo Grounds.

Not only have the majority of the young men, who would have made up the Harvard and Yale teams, enlisted, but those who go to make up the great part of the crowds which attend the big football spectacles are now in the army and navy training camps.

Instead of seeing West Point and Annapolis in action this season New Yorkers will have a chance to see teams made up of former college stars play at both the Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field. Instead of the waving college banners, red, white and blue will be the predominating colors. At the Polo Grounds thousands of soldiers from Camp Upton will drill before the game. It will be New York's first chance to see these boys since they started training at Yaphank, and a big surprise is in store for their relatives and friends when they see the erect, square-shouldered youths, who a few months ago were stooping over desks in offices in New York skyscrapers. The soldiers will drill at 1:15 this afternoon, and the game will start at 2 o'clock.

The Camp Devens players arrived in New York late yesterday afternoon and are at the Hotel Astor. The Camp Upton team practiced at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. The Devens team is made up almost entirely of old Harvard players who have been coached by Percy Haughton. The Camp Upton eleven has been coached by Frank Glick, the former Princeton quarter back, who has been assisted by Crawford Blagden and Bob Storer, both former Harvard players. The Upton eleven has not had the experience that Camp Devens has had, although the team from Long Island is a strong one. Bill Langford will referee the contest and Big Bill Edwards will umpire.

Stars on Newport Team.

The Newport Naval Reserve eleven, which will play Rutgers at Ebbets Field at 2:30, is perhaps the greatest collection of former college stars which has ever been collected. Cupid Black, who led the Yale eleven last season, is Captain, and he is surrounded by such players as Charley Barrett of Cornell, Elwood of Notre Dame, Schlacter, Syracuse; Howard Miller, Columbia; Gerrish, Dartmouth; Callaran, Yale, and numerous others.

This Newport Naval team has swept everything before it this season and Rutgers has a hard task on its hands. The game will show what a well-drilled eleven can do against individual playing. Rutgers, coached by George Foster Sanford, knows a lot of football and has made an excellent showing this season.

The admission tickets sold at the ticket offices include the war tax. The lineup of the elevens will be as follows:

Rutgers.	Position.	Reserves.
Robeson	L.E.	Elwood, N. D.
Feitner	L.T.	R. H. Dunn, Mich.
Neuschaefer	L.G.	(Capt.) Black, Y.
Rollins	C.	Callahan, Y.
Francke	R.G.	Schlachter, Sy.
Rendall, (Capt.)	R.T.	Paisley, Mich.
Breckley	R.E.	Green, Dart.
Baker	Q.B.	Hite, Ky.
Gardner	L.H.B.	Barrett, Cor.
Kelley	R.H.B.	Gerrish, Dart.
Whitehill	F.B.	Gardiner, Neb.

Brown and Dartmouth will resume gridiron relations after a lapse of years when they meet at Braves Field in Boston. It will be the thirteenth time the rivals have clashed, the first game having been played in 1894. In the twelve games played, Dartmouth has won 5, Brown 6, the other resulting in a tie. The elevens last met in 1906, when Brown won 23 to 0. Early in the season Dartmouth and Brown looked like two of the most promising elevens in the East, but both have encountered severe reverses and it is difficult to choose between them. The game has aroused a great deal of interest among the followers of the two colleges in New England.

Another local game which commands no little attention is the Columbia-New York University game, which will be played at South Field. Columbia is favorite in the contest and expects to win by a comfortable margin.

One of the best games of the season should result in the Army-Boston College game at West Point. Charley Brickley, the Boston coach, has done much with the material he had this year, while the Army squad has never shown the football it is capable of playing. The game will mark the end of the West Point season.

Yale to Meet Tigers.

Followers of Yale and Princeton football will journey to New Haven to see the Eli and Tiger Cubs in battle. This is the only game of any importance which has been played at the Yale Bowl this season and a good-sized crowd is expected. All indications point to a Yale victory, for Dr. Brides has developed an eleven of unusual strength. Harvard beat the Princeton freshmen and Yale defeated the Harvard youngsters, so it doesn't appear as if the chances of the Tiger youngsters against the Blues were any too bright.

Washington and Jefferson and Notre Dame should furnish an interesting game at Washington, Penn. Fordham will entertain an eleven of former college players at Fordham Field, when they play the Pelham Bay Naval Reserves. Pennsylvania should have no trouble with the Carlisle Indians, which should be nothing more than a practice game for the Quakers in preparation for Cornell next Thursday.

No eleven in the season has come along with such leaps and bounds during the last few weeks like Syracuse. Buck Whittemore, one of the Brown coaches, says that Syracuse ranks with Pittsburgh and Georgia Tech, and the defeat the Salt City team suffered at the hands of Pitt came early in the season before Syracuse had hit its stride and when Pittsburgh was in mid-season form. Syracuse has taken a trip West and today will play the Michigan Aggies, and next Thursday will tackle Nebraska.

Several important games will be played in the West. Michigan will meet Northwestern, which is coached by Fred Murphy, the former Yale player. Minnesota will clash with Illinois, and Chicago plays Wisconsin. In the South the important elevens will take a rest in anticipation of important games on Thanksgiving Day.

RUTGERS READY FOR FRAY.

Team Has Final Practice for Game with Newport Reserves.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 23.—George Foster Sanford put his Rutgers team through a final workout this afternoon in preparation for the game with Cupid Black's Naval Reserves at Ebbets Field tomorrow. The practice was devoted chiefly to running through the repertoire of plays devised for this contest. Baker ran the team from quarter back, Whitehill was at full back, and Kelly and Gardner at halves. Bill Gray was at his old position at centre, with Rollins and Neischafer guards, and Captain Rendall and Feltner at tackle. Robeson was on one end and Beckley at the other. This is the team which will start for Rutgers tomorrow.

YALE VS. PRINCETON TODAY.

Freshmen Elevens to Meet in Annual Game at Bowl.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 23.—Yale's most extensive efforts at football will be focused on the freshman game with Princeton here tomorrow. In addition to local enthusiasts, military companies from Yale and Princeton and the New Haven soldiers from Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., will take part in a military review and inspection before the game.

Word has just been received at Yale that Keck, Opie, and Jacobs have been declared eligible by the Princeton Faculty, although Sweet, the best Tiger punter and quarterback, will be unable to play. Davis, right end, will go behind the line for the punting. The following lineup has been selected for the game:

Yale, 1921.	Position.	Princeton, 1921.

CORNELL GRIND GOES ON.

Absence of Game Today Permits Hard Work for Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The surprising announcement was made by Dr. Al Sharpe, head Cornell football coach, today that the Cornell squad would not leave Ithaca for the annual Thanksgiving Day contest with Pennsylvania until the night before the game. Ordinarily it is the custom of the Ithacans to depart Monday night and to spend the two days before Thursday at Atlantic City, and this trip has been a great help to putting a finely conditioned team on the field.

The decision not to leave before Wednesday night is in harmony with the policy to reduce to the minimum the time away from university work on athletic trips, and is also in the interests of war-time economy. The coaches refuse to say if the all-night ride the day before the game will harm the team, but outside opinion is unfavorable. It is felt on the campus that this is going too far.

The 'Varsity having no game tomorrow, hard practice continued, though there was no scrimmage. The Cornell and Pennsylvania cubs will ring down the curtain on the local season in their annual battle tomorrow afternoon. Both teams have made a good record and a lively battle is anticipated. The Cornell youngsters are proportionately much stronger than the 'Varsity, and their backers are looking for a victory. Neither team has been beaten this year.

N. Y. U. TEAM CONFIDENT.

Expects to Gain Victory Over Columbia's Eleven Today.

The New York University football team finished its preparation for today's Columbia game with a signal practice and blackboard talk yesterday. As Ohio Field was used for the New York University-Columbia Freshman game yesterday afternoon the 'Varsity squad went to Berkeley Oval and there went through signals until dark. The team showed lots of dash and life. The whole lineup was intact yesterday, including Brin, who reported for the first time this week. The Violet team is in good condition for today and while a hard battle is expected at Morningside the N. Y. U. students are confident of success. Last night the entire 'Varsity squad listened to a blackboard talk by Coach Wail.

NO OPPONENT FOR RUTGERS.

Sanford's Team Gives Up Polo Grounds to Service Teams.

Although Rutgers had an option on the Thanksgiving Day date at the Polo Grounds, the New Brunswick college was unable to get an opponent for that day and has turned the date over to two United States service elevens. On that day the Mineola Aviation Corps team will play the Pelham Bay Naval Reserves at the Polo Grounds for a fund which will be used for athletic equipment for these branches of the service.

FOOTBALL, POLO GROUNDS, Sat., Nov. 24, 2:30. Camp Devens vs. Camp Upton. Tickets at J. B. Crook & Co., Sporting Goods, 549 Fifth Av., at 45th St. Admission $1.00; reserved and box seats, $2.00.—Advt.

BAKER ALSO SCORES EXEMPTION PROJECT

Phillies' Head Berates Johnson for Implying the National League Backed Plan.

President William F. Baker of the Philadelphia baseball club held a conference in this city yesterday with President John K. Tener of the National League and was emphatically outspoken against the action of Ban Johnson of the American League in implying that the National League was anxious to have the Government exempt its players from the draft.

"The National League will now have to suffer," said Mr. Baker, "for something in which it took no part whatever. Johnson had no authority to include the National League as a party to his surprising suggestion. President Tener hit the nail on the head in his statement when he said that our league never has been, nor would it be, so unpatriotic as to ask the Government to show favoritism for its players."

"There has been altogether too much calamity howling from the baseball people," said Mr. Baker. "There is no use looking forward for trouble. The only way to do is to start the season with what players we have and then see what will happen."

The owner of the Phillies believes that after the players have been drafted will be plenty of time to plan for the future. The one look-out of the club owners now will be to practice economy. Mr. Baker thinks that the clubs can get along well enough with eighteen players, or even less if necessary. With the greatly advanced railroad and hotel rates, Mr. Baker believes that it would be advisable for the clubs to carry only about fifteen players on their road trips.

There is no reason, under war conditions, why the pitchers could not be played in the outfield if necessary, as they used to be in the old days of baseball. The utility players could be left at home, and if there was need of their services while the clubs were on the road, they could be summoned to join the team at a day's notice. Mr. Baker thinks that it would be a great saving for the clubs to carry as few players as possible on their road trips.

There is no reason why baseball could not get along just as other businesses have which have been hit hard by the draft. If the draft should take away many of the good players, the ranks could be filled up with the veterans who have retired to the minor leagues if necessary. It would also be possible for the major leagues to get the best of the minor league players who were exempt from the draft for legitimate reasons, or who were over the draft age.

In fact, it looks as if the major leagues would have to call on the minors for players next season to fill up the ranks of the players who are called to the colors. It is very evident from the indications at the minor league meeting in Louisville recently that several of the minor leagues will not attempt to operate next season. That would throw a great many players on the market.

After all, it isn't the star players who furnish the attraction in baseball, but the closeness of the pennant races. It must be taken for granted that all the clubs will be weakened, but this does not necessarily mean that the pennant races will be one-sided. If the leagues are able to furnish close races next season, that is all the fans will ask for, even if the star players are absent. Lively competition is what makes the game and not the stars. The Boston Braves, who won the world's series in 1914, had no real stars, and yet it was one of the greatest world's series clubs which ever won the honor; in fact, it was the only club which won the series in four straight games.

President John K. Tener of the National League will reside in this city after the first of next month. Since President Tener was elected four years ago he has retained his residence in Philadelphia, spending about four days a week at his offices in this city. The fact that President Tener will hereafter reside in New York is taken as an indication that he will be re-elected for a term of years at the National League election here next month.

All negotiations for the trade of Pratt and Lavan of the St. Louis Browns, two players the Yankees are anxious to get, have been held up pending the outcome of the libel suit which these two players have brought against Phil Ball, owner of the Browns. Mr. Ball said that he would not consider any offers whatever for these players until that little difficulty had been adjusted.

Word has been received at the offices of the Yankees that Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder who broke his leg at the Polo Grounds last Summer, has entirely recovered from the injury and is now playing again in Cuba. The report says that Marsans can hit and run the bases as well as ever, which is good news for the new manager, Miller Huggins.

NAVAL TEAM AT FORDHAM.

Maroons to Meet Squad from Pelham Bay Reserves.

The Fordham team faces the naval reserve eleven from the Pelham Bay Park Station this afternoon on Fordham Field. Fifteen hundred jackies and two bands will whoop up things for their comrades and lend a martial color to the game. A parade of the sailors will precede the contest.

The Fordham team went through a brisk drill yesterday as a final preparation for the game. Frank Frisch, the star back, who has not played since the Rutgers game, caused some surprise when he donned his togs and went through signals. He is not slated to play today, however. The Fordham team will line up as follows:

With Cochran, Houlahan, and Rosen Back, Players Are Confident.

Columbia, with Cochran, Houlahan, and Rosen back in the game once more, is counting on a defeat of N. Y. U. in the annual game at South Field today. Not only should Cochran's play at right end help the team, but his newly discovered drop-kicking ability may count for Columbia whenever the ball is within the forty-yard mark. In practice yesterday Cochran was putting nine out of ten attempts over from the thirty-five and forty-yard points. Rosen, who has been disabled on account of an infected toe, will start the game at guard, while Campbell will take Farer's place at tackle.

The Blue and White eleven ran through a snappy signal drill yesterday, and Coach Metcalf put the scrubs against the 'Varsity for a dummy scrimmage in order to illustrate the best defense against New York University plays.

On comparing the records of the Wesleyan and Union teams, the only teams that the rivals have played, the Violet played a scoreless tie with Union, whom Columbia beat 21 to 0. N. Y. U. lost to Wesleyan by one point, 7 to 6, and Columbia lost to the same team 6 to 0.

The issue of the game rests with the back fields, since both elevens are unusually strong in the forward line. Columbia has developed an aerial attack which may gain against any ordinary defense. The Columbia lineup will be:

FRESHMEN IN SCORELESS TIE

Columbia and N. Y. U. Cubs Struggle on Even Terms.

The New York University freshmen and the Columbia freshmen struggled in a hard-fought scoreless tie on Ohio Field yesterday. Both sides made frequent use of the forward pass, but those of Columbia were all incomplete. Several times the Blue and White succeeded in intercepting a pass from the Violet. The University Heights rookies made some telling passes, but subsequent mistakes always undid this good work.

Bartlett, at half back for the Violet, was the individual ground-gaining star of the game. He not only carried the ball for long distances, but successfully stopped several Columbia runners who had gotten free. For Columbia Cherkasky, at right half, was the main ground gainer, and also helped stem the victorious march of the Violet in the second quarter.

In the first quarter Saunders tried a drop kick from the 30-yard line, but it went wide. In the second period by means of line bucks and end runs by Hunter, Saunders and Bartlett, the ball went to the 25-yard line after coming from the Violet 30-yard line. Here Cherkasky intercepted a forward pass and saved him team.

In the last quarter Columbia by means of two long passes came to New York's 10-yard line. Here the University Heights freshmen held and Cherkasky tried a drop kick from the 20-yard line which failed.

The lineup:

N. Y. U., '21, (0.)	Position.	Columbia, '21, (0.)
Kandel	L.E.	Johnson
Friedman	L.T.	Relyea
Massa	L.G.	Weiss

Bivona	R.E.	Echlis
Saunders	Q.B.	Stewart
Tendler	L.H.B.	Lasky
Bartlett	R.H.B.	Cherkasky
Hunter	F.B.	Carroll

Substitutions—N. Y. U.: Weiss for Massa, Goldberg for Poselsky, Fleischer for Kandel, Greifinger for Bivona, Goldstein for Tendler. Columbia: Bachrach for Relyea, Relyea for Bachrach, Mulincs for Lasky. Referee and umpire—Ed. Thorpe, De La Salle. Linesman—J. Goundry, New York University. Time of periods—8 minutes each.

NEW UTRECHT TRIUMPHS.

Defeats Manual Eleven at Football by 7 to 6 Score.

New Utrecht, showing excellent football knowledge, defeated the Manual Training High School, 7 to 6, at Ulmer Park yesterday, but not until one of the stiffest games of the scholastic football season had been completed. A delay in the start forced the teams to play the final two quarters in semi-darkness. This aided the Manual Training eleven in scoring its only points on a touchdown by Tobey in the final quarter. On an attempt at goal from this touchdown Daisley failed when the pigskin hit the uprights and rebounded to the field.

Smith scored New Utrecht's touchdown in the first quarter on a blocked kick play on the Manual Training five-yard line, and Hettrick kicked the goal.

BLAMES BOXING PROMOTERS

Governor Whitman States He Is Not Opposed to the Sport.

Governor Charles S. Whitman is strongly opposed to the methods of the boxing promoters who have been conducting the glove game in this State. Yesterday he explained that his opposition to the sport was aimed at promoters who exploit the skill of the boxers as a means of livelihood, rather than at the sport of boxing itself.

Governor Whitman made known his views in a statement given to The Brooklyn Standard Union. His letter is as follows:

I have your letter of Nov. 15, requesting my opinion of the value of boxing as a part of the training for vigor of body and quickness of mind as demonstrated under professional instructors in the camps of the national army and Federalized National Guard.

You seem, in your letter, to make no distinction between boxing as a training for vigor of body and quickness of mind—that is, as a healthy exercise—and boxing carried on as a public exhibition to which an admission fee is asked and received.

Last year in my message to the Legislature I quoted from the message sent to the Legislature by Governor Roosevelt in 1900, in which he said:

"When any sport is carried on primarily for money—that is, as a business—it is in danger of losing much that is valuable, and of acquiring some exceedingly undesirable characteristics."

At that time I pointed out that the Governor who sent this message to the Legislature was, himself, a firm believer in all athletic sports.

It is very likely that boxing is one of the best exercises to put men in good physical condition, but that has nothing to do with the question of the advisability of permitting certain managers and promoters, who never took a step of healthy exercise, to make their living by exploiting the skill of certain individuals who, in turn, make their living by taking part in prise fights, and who do not look upon boxing as a healthy exercise, but a means of livelihood.

BOXING CASE POSTPONED.

Broadway Sporting Club Gets Stay for a Week.

The hearing of charges against the officials of the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn for conducting a professional boxing show under the club membership plan last Saturday night opened yesterday at the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, before Magistrate Howard Nash, but nothing definite was adduced. The case was adjourned until next Friday, upon petition of Frank X. McCaffrey, of counsel for the club officials. Eleven of the thirteen men connected with the club, for whom warrants were issued, appeared before the Magistrate to answer the charge of violating Section 1,710 of the Penal law.

The complaint in the case covers seven typewritten pages, and was filed by William J. Wiegand of Deputy Police Commissioner Godley's office. In it Wiegand alleges he saw several men in line at the ticket window, paying money and receiving tickets. He also describes a series of signs posted about the entrance to the club's boxing arena, instructing, it is alleged, potential purchasers of tickets where to procure the pasteboards.

The Broadway club will put on another show this evening consisting of two ten-round exhibitions and a series of wrestling exhibitions. In the boxing bouts Italian Joe Gans will oppose Walter Laurrett and K. O. Circus will box Joe Leonard.

KRAMER IN SIX-DAY RACE.

Frank Kramer has finally consented to start in the six-day cycle race in Madison Square Garden, the week of Dec. 2 to 8. The perennial champion signed for the grind last night. Manager Wellman offered Oscar Egg as a partner, and Kramer accepted.

The world's champion for sixteen consecutive years is the last rider to get into the fold, and his entry rounds out the field of starters. There are no less than seven winners of previous Garden races in the list.

Two other formidable teams were signed up last night. Alfred Goullet agreed to Freddy Hill as a partner, while Eddie Root, four-time winner of the New York race, was teamed up with Marcel Dupuy, the French champion, who with Egg won last year's classic.

Fifteen teams are now signed for the test, and this is the number that will face the starter a minute after midnight Dec. 2. Fifteen prizes, ranging from $2,000 to $500, a total of $16,000, furnish the incentive for the riders.

JOCK SCOT TAKES RICHMOND PURSE

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 23.—Jock Scot, a cast-off from the stable of Gifford A. Cochran, captured his second purse of the meeting this afternoon for his new owner, R. L. Bresler. The three-year-old son of Ogden was well favored by allowances in the Richmond Purse event, which was the feature of the card, and with only 99 pounds on his back, H. Wakeff had no trouble in keeping him in front to the end of the mile route, which Jock Scot negotiated in 1:41 4-5. J. S. Tyree started two in the small field of six, the two-year-old Sweep Up II., finishing second to Jock Scot.

F. Houseman's Brooklyn ran one of his good races in the claiming event for three-year-olds at a mile and twenty yards. Even though Buxton had the mount Brooklyn was better than 5 to 1 in mutuels, but the crack jockey had little difficulty in landing him in front of Thorn Bloom, which was ridden by Walls. WILSON ELECTED STEWARD.

Named for Jockey Club Board, Succeeding Late Schuyler L. Parsons.

The place on the Board of Stewards of The Jockey Club left vacant by the death of Schuyler L. Parsons was filled yesterday by the election of Richard T. Wilson, as a member of the board. Mr. Wilson has been one of the stanch supporters of the turf, specially since the hostile legislation about ten years ago. He is President of the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses and has made a great success of the recent meetings at the Spa. The new member of the board breeds most of the horses that race under his colors and was the largest money winner of the season of 1917, chiefly through the efforts of Campfire, the leading two-year-old of that season.

SPIRITED MATCHES IN SQUASH TOURNEY

Racquet Stars Begin Competition and Play Advances to Third Round.

The annual Fall squash tennis tournament at the Squash Club awoke to real activity yesterday, a number of spirited matches being contested in the event. Many of the stars of the game got into action and progress was made to the third round by six contestants. The fortunate ones were A. W. Riley of the Squash Club, Sterling Martin of the Greenwich Field Club, G. W. Mead of the Squash Club, J. W. Appel of the Harvard Club, A. Baxter of the Crescent Athletic Club, and R. C. Coburn of the Harvard Club.

Only two second-round matches remain to be played. In one, J. Onativia of the Harvard Club will meet N. T. Torrance of the Crescent A. C., and in the other F. S. Hyde of the Harvard Club will play against W. H. Vander Poel of the Squash Club. This latter match promises to be the chief attraction of today's competition. Hyde was one of the notable players of last season and Vander Poel is one of the most proficient racquet wielders of the Squash Club.

F. S. Keeler of the Columbia Club attempted to carry the burden of two matches yesterday and was forced to bow under in the second before the aggressive attack of Sterling Martin. Keeler won a first-round match from G. E. Cruse of the Squash Club at 15—11, 15—11, but in the second against Martin he was vanquished after a spirited contest at 15—11, 15—7. J. W. Appel, one of the leaders of the Harvard Club coterie of squash tennis enthusiasts, displayed a formidable game in a second-round contest against W. J. Knapp of the Squash Club and secured the victory in straight games at 15—3, 15—7.

A. W. Riley, the Princeton Club and Squash Club expert, who is looked upon by some as one of the most formidable players in the tournament, swept along easily to a 15—11, 15—6 victory over R. Goepel of the Greenwich Field Club. Riley drove hard and placed well and there was ever present a cool strategy that baffled the efforts of his rival.

There was only one match that went to more than two games. This was between R. C. Coburn of the Harvard Club, the eventual winner, and G. E. Ells, also of the Harvard Club. Coburn's victory was registered at 15—12, 9—15, 15—9.

The summaries:

FIRST ROUND.—A. W. Riley, Squash Club, won from I. M. Cornell, Columbia Club, by default; F. S. Keeler, Columbia Club, defeated G. E. Cruse, Squash Club, 15—11, 15—11.

SECOND ROUND.—A. W. Riley, Squash Club, defeated R. Goepel, Greenwich Field Club, 15—11, 15—6; Sterling Martin, Greenwich Field Club, defeated F. S. Keeler, Columbia Club, 15—11, 15—7; G. W. Mead, Squash Club, won by default from Crocker, Greenwich Field Club; J. W. Appel, Harvard Club, defeated W. J. Knapp, Squash Club, 15—3, 15—7; A. Baxter, Crescent Athletic Club, won from M. Sterling, Crescent Athletic Club, by default; R. C. Coburn, Harvard Club, defeated G. E. Ells, Harvard Club, 15—12, 9—15, 15—9.

FOOD BOARDS ORDER PRICE OF TURKEY CUT

Nation, State, and City Unite to Fix Cost of Storage Fowl for Thanksgiving.

MAXIMUM TO BE 37 CENTS

One-Half of Frozen Goods Must Be Released Now, and the Rest for Christmas Trade.

The National, State, and City Food Administrations, acting jointly, checked yesterday the advancing cost of turkeys and announced prices at which frozen turkeys must be sold between now and Thanksgiving Day. This was done at a meeting held in the afternoon at the office of the State Food Commission in the Metropolitan Tower. There were present City Food Administrator Arthur Williams, State Food Commissioners Dillon and Miller, and City Commissioner of Markets Henry Moskowitz. Facing them across the table were some thirty-five wholesalers, retailers, and jobbers in fowl. These did not look pleased, especially as many of them are going to lose largely on the goods they are now forced to bring out of cold storage.

Here are the prices that the housewife will pay for her Thanksgiving fowl if she buys a frozen turkey and is willing to carry it home, for the joint commission wants it understood that these prices are fixed on the "cash-and-carry" plan:

Texas plain, not more than 28 cents a pound; Texas fancy, not more than 35 cents a pound; Northern plain, not more than 32 cents a pound, and Northern fancy, not more than 37 cents a pound. The wholesale prices are: Texas plain, between 23 and 25 cents a pound; Texas fancy, not more than 30 cents a pound; Northern plain, not more than 28 cents, and Northern fancy, not more than 32 cents a pound.

The Commissioners want the housewives to bear these prices in mind and to report at once to the City Food Commissioner at the Municipal Building any overcharging, for the Commissioners have received the pledge of the leading men in the trade that these prices will be adhered to. The Commissioners also want the housewives to report any attempt to unload any low grade turkeys at high-grade prices.

Dealers to Suffer Loss.

Last Thanksgiving the poultry men attempted to obtain 40 cents a pound for turkeys. The housewives rebelled, and in consequence of their refusal to pay the price asked fully a third of the supply went into cold storage. One-half of all goods in storage have been ordered out at this time, and the other half must be put on the market at Christmas time. There will be no further holdings for a rise in price. Many of the present holders are said to have paid as high as 28 cents to the farmers, and they have had to sustain the cost of storage and the loss by shrinkage. It means a loss for them to sell at the prices now fixed. This situation was explained by Mrs. Julian Heath, President of the Housewives' League, who was present at the meeting.

"The law of supply and demand has been largely suspended by reason of the war, and men are called upon to do things for the good of their country that they would not do under normal conditions," Chairman Mitchell told the dealers. "There is now a law against withholding supplies from the market in order to increase the price."

A distinct warning was sounded by Arthur Williams, who said that Government experts would be put on the books of firms believed to be offending the regulation. "I don't know whether you understand the situation," he said, "but the Government has the right to put its experts on your books, and will exercise it if it thinks you are getting all you can get rather than a fair price proportionate to your cost. There are experts today going over a great many books in New York City. You are acting on your honor under the law, and our thought is to get your co-operation. Regardless of the supply and regardless of the pressure of the demand, every one of you is on trial before your own Government at a time of war. You are on the defensive to prove that the prices you get from your consumers represent only a fair profit to yourselves.

"The poultry trade is on trial and you might as well look at it seriously. We are in the position of feeding our own people enough to sustain them properly, and feeding our allies, which is the same as feeding our own people. The man who holds back goods and says 'I paid 34 cents for goods and I am going to hold them back until next week and get what I can'—that man is an enemy of his country. He may not know it, but he is.

"My thought would be that exactly as the milk producers and distributers have united with these three commissions to square themselves with the public, the poultry men of New York should be doing the same thing. Let us not dwell in the past. Last year, as we understand it, a lot of men went around the country and bid against each other and prices went very high. The dealers laid in large stocks because of the anticipated demand this Fall; they thought because of the war our allies would pay any profits. Last year's prices were practically double those of any preceding year. Let us make a new start. Take your loss today. Charge it to experience, to patriotism, if you like."

During the conference the following statement from the Food Administration at Washington was read into the record:

You will note that turkeys have been sold at 28 cents to 29 cents, fine stock. This is a reduction of 6 to 7 cents per pound from the price of two weeks ago. It looks very much as though prices will be lower. We are insisting that owners of frozen turkeys must sell one-half for Thanksgiving and the other half during December.

We will certainly appreciate your efforts to call the attention of the housewives to the readjusted prices on frozen turkeys, and to urge all of them to order from their market men frozen turkeys. Also tell them that the Food Administration says that a turkey frozen in December one year and consumed in November the following is of better quality than a fresh bird in November, due to the fact that the average turkey does not develop and get in perfect condition until December.

To provide a holiday feast for the soldiers and sailors in and about New York, the Government purchased yesterday 300,000 pounds of cold storage turkeys at prices ranging from 30 to 31 cents a pound. P. Q. Foy, price expert of The Daily Market Report, estimates the present storage holdings of turkeys at 3,538,398 pounds. During the last few weeks great quantities have moved into the market because of the heavy demand.

Yesterday was sugar distribution day at the Municipal Building. About seventy employes of the Bureau for Collection of Assessments and Arrears of the Finance Department clubbed together and bought 400 pounds of sugar from a refinery. The employes of the Department of Water Supply also bought 500 pounds. This sugar arrived yesterday, and was distributed in five-pound packages at a cost of 46 cents each package.

In advising the public to eat cheese, Cyrus C. Miller, Director of Food Distribution of the New York State Food Commission, charged yesterday that the retailers were not giving the consumers the benefit of a recent drop in prices, a matter that might be investigated soon. He said that there was 60 per cent. more cheese now than at this time last year and that the wholesale price had been declining during the last few weeks. He asserted that every woman in New York City ought to be able to buy good cheese at from 25 cents to 29 cents a pound.

H. Snowden Marshall, former United States District Attorney, and H. A. Emerson, receivers appointed by the Federal Court for the All-Package Grocery Stores, a firm that conducts 150 retail stores in New York, wrote to Federal Food Administrator Hoover and State Commissioner of Markets Dillon yesterday stating that the Borden Milk Company had refused to sell milk and cream to the receivers for sale in the stores, even though the receivers offered to pay cash. Mr. Dillon announced that he would investigate the matter immediately.

FOOD BOARD TO PUNISH UNLICENSED CONCERNS

Calls for Reports on Firms That Have Not Sought Grants Under President's Decree.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The United States Food Administration is preparing to proceed against firms coming under President Wilson's proclamation of Oct. 8 which have not applied for licenses to continue in business. This telegram has been sent to the Federal Food Administrators in all States:

"The trades covered in the President's proclamation of Oct. 8 should have applied for licenses to the license division of the United States Food Administration in Washington before Nov. 1. Some firms have not applied and proceedings will be immediately initiated to suspend trading operations of such firms unless their applications are received at once."

The Food Administration also announces that complaints are being received that many firms have neglected to insert their license number on stationery used for negotiating and completing sales. Rule 22 of the Rules and Regulations governing the conduct of businesses and trades subject to license, follows:

"The licensee shall place on every contract, order, acceptance of order, invoice, price list and quotation issued or signed by him relating to food commodities the words 'United States Food Administration License No. ——,' followed by the number of his license.

"No licensee shall knowingly buy any food commodities from, or sell any such commodities to, or handle any such commodities for, any person required to have a license who has not secured such license and complied with the provisions of this rule."

City Food Administrator Williams received a message last night from Food Administrator Hoover informing him that there were some large food firms in this city who had not applied for a license under the President's proclamation of Oct. 8. He is instructed to begin proceedings at once to stop these firms from trading unless they at once make applications for licenses.

Mr. Williams announced that he would immediately carry out this order, and asked that all complaints of violations should be sent to him and not to Washington.

OHIO MOVES TO STOP HOLDING UP OF FOOD

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 23.—The Ohio Food Administration today began an investigation to find who is responsible for the sidetracking and neglect of scores of carloads of perishable foodstuffs, and to have immediate action taken to clear the tracks, free the cars, and get the food where it will not freeze and be wasted.

Food Administrator Croxton called a meeting of all commission merchants in Ohio to be held here to discuss the tie-up of cars loaded with perishables. This step was taken after reports came that commission men are blamed by the railroads, in many instances, for cars remaining on sidetracks without being unloaded.

Inspectors directed by J. B. Dugan, railroad expert of the Food Administration, were today at Akron and Cleveland, from which most serious complaints have been received. Four men were detailed to Cleveland, where it was reported that more than a hundred cars, most of them loaded with vegetables, including potatoes, apples, cabbage, and other perishables, were standing idle on the tracks.

An Akron report coming from a local food administration committee brought information to Food Administrator Croxton that forty-seven carloads of perishables, all consigned to one commission concern, had been sidetracked on three railroad switches there. It was said at the Food Administration office that action will be required or prosecution begun.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—City and Federal officials today took up the task of placing blame for a situation which permits millions of pounds of perishable vegetables to rot on spur tracks of the New York Central Railroad at Cleveland depots. It is said that United States District Attorney Wertz and County Prosecutor Doerfler will be called upon to find out who are the consignees and the shippers of the cars, and then determine whether they or the railroads are to blame. Commission men blame the railroads, saying that they are unloading the cars as fast as the railroads switch them to unloading tracks. The railroad men blame the commission houses for tardy unloading.

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 23.—Investigation today revealed that more than seventy-five carloads of perishable foodstuffs are being held in local railroad yards, the goods rotting, while dealers refuse to present bills of lading in the hope, it is said, of stimulating higher prices. Federal authorities have been notified, and drastic measures may be taken against the offenders.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 23.—The Federal Grand Jury which has been investigating the charge that more than 1,000 carloads of food had been held up in Pittsburgh railroad yards, reported today that the condition was due to economic causes and not to flagrant violations of the food laws. The jury also found that the high price of foodstuffs in this district was due to the handling of incoming supplies by three classes of middlemen.

Coal Shortage Up State.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The fuel situation is becoming serious in St. Lawrence County. It is reported here tonight that St. Lawrence University at Canton may have to close because of lack of coal.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Spring Hats in Bright Colors.

The early offerings of women's hats to the Southern trade by local milliners include a wide variety of gay and brilliant colors. The new olive drab shades are also extensively used, and it is expected that they will be one of the best sellers, not only for the Southern trade, but for next Spring as well. A number of attractive sets are shown, including hat, parasol, and wrap, and buyers are said to be well impressed with them. In these sets, georgettes throughout are most frequently used. A great many of the designs are of Oriental origin, though stripes, plaids, and other figures are also said to be in good demand.

Demand for Women's Neckwear.

The demand for women's neckwear, particularly stocks and jabots, which set in early in the Fall season with the return to favor of the high-collared waist, has continued vigorously throughout the season. With a wider variety of prices in these lines than in almost any other item of women's wear, the appeal has been general, for women, from the poorest to the richest, could all find something attractive within the limits of their pocketbooks. Filet continues most in favor for these neckpieces, with organdy a close second, in spite of the lateness of the season.

Mail Order Houses Buying.

It is said in the local cloak and suit trade that buying on the part of large mail order houses for next Spring has been unusually heavy during the last week or ten days. It seems also that these houses are devoting much more attention to the better grades of merchandise than in past seasons. They have taken liberally, it is reported, of velours, serges, gabardines, and poplins, and of high quality bolivia cloth, which proved so popular last season. Tan, taupe, pekin blue, and plum are said to be the favored colors. In styles they are choosing a wide variety, with a good assortment of military effects, which are expected to be among the best sellers.

Men Taking Extra Trousers.

It is looked upon by certain members of the men's wear trade as rather significant that, though higher prices have not curtailed business to any marked extent, sales of extra trousers with suits have increased this Fall. While men are not cutting down on expenditures now, and in many cases are actually spending more than ordinarily, this is taken to indicate that they plan to spend as little as possible in the future and to get the full wear out of their suits.

To Exhibit Separate Skirt Styles.

The initial exhibit of the First Skirt Designers' Association of Greater New York will be held in the ball room of the Hotel McAlpin on Dec. 5. The object of the association, whose members consist of the leading skirt designers of the city, and which has been in existence for more than two years, is to create American styles for American women, rather than adapt accepted French models. The show will be participated in by every prominent skirt manufacturer in the city, each of whom will exhibit a number of skirts on living models. The styles to be shown will feature the best ideas for the coming Spring and Summer season. Indications point to a very large attendance of buyers.

Military Ideas in Sport Shirts.

The entrance of the United States into the war and the resultant assumption of a sterner bearing on the part of American men were cited yesterday as reasons for believing that the flaring collar, "Little Rollo" type of sport shirt that has been having its inning in the last few years, is to be largely superseded this Spring by garments smacking strongly of things military in cut and color. Even some of the more masculine models that sold last year are expected to give ground before shirts of the type that take the English officers' garment for their model. These are offered in approved khaki shades, in becoming effects, both with and without collars attached. They can be worn not only for sports purposes, but for the street as well.

Does Not Fear the Knitting Bag.

"Rank nonsense," was the reply made yesterday by an executive of a local dry goods store when asked what he thought of reports heard here concerning the possibility of increased shoplifting this holiday season as a result of the case with which small articles can be concealed in the huge knitting bags the women now carry. "There are always certain women who victimize the stores at this time of the year," he went on, "but it is absurd to think that the knitting bag is going to increase the number. No woman is going to steal this year, when she never has before, simply because her bag might give her a better chance of getting away with the thing she takes. How any merchant in his right mind can suggest asking women not to bring these bags into his store is a puzzle to me. It would be a deliberate insult, and would and should mean commercial suicide for the man who is foolish enough to ask it."

As to Buying Holiday Gifts.

Admitting that the holiday sales figures to date show distinctly in favor of useful Christmas gifts, as compared with those of lesser utility, a store executive yesterday predicted that sales of the latter type will pick up later. "The recent floating of the second Liberty Loan," he said, "has for the time being made the average customer more economical. This is showing itself in the sales of the less useful kinds of holiday gifts. Particularly it is noticeable in the case of toys. Mothers and fathers who have resolved to cut down on these kinds of presents this year, and who are not only buying a sled for John and a doll for Mary, are going to have a twinge of conscience about two weeks from now that will bring them back here on the run to make up lost ground: 'Why take it out on the kids?' they will ask themselves. I look for the same thing in the case of gifts bought by grownups for one another."

Sheetings Had a Good Day.

Sheetings in the gray had a good day here yesterday. Many of the inquiries of the previous day crystallized into orders, and a tidy volume of these goods was reported sold. Higher prices were quoted on several staple numbers for quick delivery, among them five-yard goods, which were held at 11⅝ cents, and 5.50s, which brought a cent less for the same shipments. For 4.70 sheetings 12¼ cents was paid for nearbys. Four-yard 56-60s were priced at 14@14½ cents, according to deliveries, some houses demanding the latter figure for spots and nearbys. Nearby lots of 30-inch 3.25-yard drills, which are said to be scarce, are held not far from 17 cents in certain quarters. In the specialties the continued run on wide and narrow sateens and twills, at steadily advancing prices, was a feature.

Printcloth Prices Running Wild.

Prices are shooting up on printcloths in the local gray goods market like a thermometer with a match held under the bulb. Not only is the result the breaking of previous high price records on many kinds of goods, but the astounding of experienced buyers as well. At the moment no one seems willing to predict where it will end. Spot lots of 39-inch 68-72s, which only a day or two ago sold at the record price of 13 cents, are now hard to get at a quarter of a cent higher. Thirteen cents was paid for these goods for 1918 shipments running to April. Ten cents is now the general spot and nearby price on 38½-inch 60-48s, with contracts sold at 9⅞ cents. Spot 38½-inch 64-60s cannot be touched now under 11½ cents, with some houses showing a disposition to hold them still more firmly. Nearby sales of 39-inch 80 squares have been put through at 15½ cents, and contracts have been sold at 15⅝ cents. It is reported that spots of this construction have sold at 15⅝ cents. Prices closed this way for spots:

39-inch, 68-72s...13¼c	38½-inch, 60-52s..10¼c

Tobacco Reaches Top Prices.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 23.—Tobacco prices reached top marks here today when a Louisville firm disposed of 950,000 pounds of burley at 30 cents a pound and 450,000 pounds of Indiana dark, one sucker leaf and lugs, at an average of 18¼ cents a pound. The sale is said to be the largest single tobacco transaction in the history of Kentucky. Seventeen cents a pound was considered a fair price for burley in 1916.

New Owners of Hudson Woodworking Company.

I. Seigel and S. Schwartz stated yesterday that they had taken over the Hudson Woodworking Company, against which a judgment was filed in the Bronx on Thursday, and that the action was taken against the old concern.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Unless present plans are changed, the next Fashion Show of the Retail Millinery Association of America will be held at the Hotel Astor on Feb. 7.

J. Gordon Noakes, sales manager of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, is en route by steamer to New Orleans on an extended business trip in the interests of the corporation. From there he will go on to Nashville, Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Oshkosh, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Toronto, Montreal, and Quebec. He will be away about thirty days.

The account of the Ellsberg Company of Chicago is now being represented in this market by the Munzer-Lyon-Kahn Company, resident buyers, 1,133 Broadway.

Harry L. Gips, who was associated with F. Neugass & Co. for several years, will in the future cover the New England States for these manufacturers: B. Stern & Co., Inc., infants' and children's headwear; Stern, Heineman & Herff, infants' and children's coats, and S. Stern & Co., infants', children's, and juniors' dresses. He will make his headquarters in Boston, where an office will be opened soon.

Alexander A. Bloch, who was formerly with the Bloch Purchasing Company, has opened a resident buying office at 1,133 Broadway.

NO RISE IN FIRE RATES HERE.

Insurance Men Say 10 Per Cent. Increase Will Not Apply in City.

Although fire insurance rates in all other parts of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and the South Atlantic and Gulf States have been raised 10 per cent. during the last ten days because of what the fire insurance underwriters consider to be the extra hazards due to war conditions, the cost of fire insurance in this city will probably not increase, according to Willis O. Robb, Manager of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange, yesterday.

Although company losses in this city during the last eleven months were almost twice as great as in the same period last year, all fire insurance companies have found that their profits in this city have been greater than elsewhere, and will hold off raising the rates as long as they can, Mr. Robb said.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

List Narrow, but Strong, with Striking Improvement in Smaller Steel Issues.

Wall Street is regaining its poise after the severe shock administered by the liquidation and short selling, and is emerging from the long period of forced suspension of new financing due to the Government's bond programs. Business is gradually falling back into its old lines, although, of course, the war continues to dominate every form of enterprise. The market comes nearer to being a normal affair today than has been the case in several months. Yesterday, on very moderate dealings, running to less than half a million shares, many of the industrials forged easily ahead under the leadership of the smaller steel issues. There were gains of as much as 4 or 5 points in numerous stocks, some of them inactive issues, and advances of smaller denominations in most others. The railroads did not reflect any improvement on the announcement of the understanding reached at Washington that no strike would be called by the brotherhoods during the war. As a matter of fact, most owners of railroad securities are not so much afraid of a strike as they are of the concessions that are likely to be made to the men as a reward for not striking.

There were numerous developments yesterday to account for the return of the financial district's normal spirit of optimism. For one thing, the Lackawanna Steel Company's extra dividend of 3½ per cent. led to an expectation of increased payments by other steel companies. The General Chemical Company followed yesterday with an extra dividend. The General Electric Company succeeded in disposing of $10,000,000 of two-year 6 per cent. notes on a basis to yield the investor 6.65 per cent., removing a problem which the financial district had been discussing for several weeks past. The Treasury Department's reduction in rates on war risk insurance followed naturally the increased success of the offensive and defensive measures in use against the submarines, but the announcement had a helpful effect as indicating that the Government authorities do not look upon the reduction in sinkings as an extraordinary showing. Call money eased off, loaning yesterday at from 2¾ per cent. to 3½ per cent. The bond market reflected signs of a reawakening demand among individual investors.

Unfortunately, not many industrial concerns, and none of the railroads now in need of financing, can offer a statement showing such a satisfactory financial position as the General Electric Company. Even that company was able to sell its three-year 6 per cent. notes four months ago at 99.75, indicating a steady rise in the cost of short-term borrowing. The Erie Railroad has made inquiries for funds, but no plan is likely to be announced until the Interstate Commerce Commission makes known its decision in the rate application.

FIRM UNDERTONE IN LONDON

But Business Continues Mostly in Specialty Shares.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Notwithstanding the Treasury bill maturities, money was in strong demand today. Discounts were quiet. A further amount of Italian credit bills was placed on the market.

In the stock market the war news continues to be responsible for a firm undertone in gilt-edged securities and Allied bonds, but business still is mostly in specialties, among which armament, oil, and shipping shares are prominent. Peruvian bonds were buoyant on the increased dividend. De Beers was supported on its good revenue statement.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 59 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London (unofficial) 27 francs 23½ centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 80 centimes.

Court Halts $60,000,000 Sales.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—In the litigation over the bankrupt estate of Josiah V. Thompson, Uniontown, Penn., coal operator and banker, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today issued an order temporarily restraining Sheriffs' sales of part of Thompson's $60,000,000 coal lands in Monongahela and Greene Townships, Greene County, Penn., which were fixed for Dec. 1. The order is to remain in effect until the court has decided an appeal by Thompson's trustees from a decision which dissolved an injunction against the Sheriffs' sales.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

"The record of business," says Dun's Review for the current week, "continues mainly one of adjustments to new and extraordinary conditions, and requirements in regular channels are more than ever subordinate to the pressing necessities of the Government. Not only is consumption changing in character, with civilian demands centring more fully in the staple commodities, but production likewise is coming more closely under the domination of war influences, and outputs of what are termed nonessential articles are being lessened, or eliminated altogether.

"The element of price control also enters more largely into calculations. Where revisions have already been effected, and uncertainties removed, there has come an improvement in sentiment, and in some instances a moderate, though distinct, revival of activity after a considerable period of hesitancy. The volume of general business remains large in about all sections, and in some cases is broadening; but the drawbacks in many industries and trades increase rather than diminish, and the curtailment of operations through fuel and labor scarcity becomes more noticeable. With last week's lessening of selling pressure, it appeared as if the long-continued decline in stocks had about spent its force, and this week brought noticeable betterment in both sentiment and prices."

Bradstreet's says:

"More cheerful feeling, probably born of the apparent successes of the allied arms oversea, heavy governmental buying, the return of Liberty Loan money into circulation, 30-cent cotton, unrestricted ordering by the excellently situated surplus crop zones, record high bank clearings, and superanimated activity in most industrial lines turning out essentials of war, are factors that easily eclipse any lagging tendencies that prevail."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Rediscounting 90-day Notes.

An interesting situation has been created by the Federal Reserve Board's recent statement that ninety-day notes issued under a renewal agreement are undesirable as investments for Federal Reserve Banks. This pronouncement was generally approved by bankers, but officials of the local Federal Reserve Bank, including its general counsel, have declined to say whether the board's statement means that the American Tobacco Company's notes were not eligible for discount. They have also declined to say what action would be taken if a member bank offered them for rediscount. It is known, however, that some of the B. F. Goodrich Company's notes have been rediscounted by the bank. It would seem that the bankers were indiscreet in urging the rediscountability of the Tobacco notes and in giving the matter so much publicity, for if they had said nothing, and individual banks would have been able to tender to the Reserve Bank some of the notes for rediscount, without any mention of the existence or non-existence of renewal agreements, the Reserve Bank would have rediscounted them without question. Now that the Federal bank has information that the banking syndicate executed renewal agreements with purchasers of the notes, and in the light of the Reserve Board's general disapproval of the issuance of two-year notes in the guise of ninety-day liquid commercial paper, it is evidently very embarrassing, to say the least, for the Reserve Bank to agree to their rediscount. Further developments in regard to these notes are not unlikely.

Value and Quantity.

There appears to be a discrepancy in the relationship of values to quantities which has induced misconception of the character and extent of the country's activities in the production and movement of essential commodities. "Figures for the nine months ended September of this year," says The Wollman Review, "show exports of nearly 22,000,000 bushels of wheat less than for the corresponding period of 1916, 2,500,000 barrels less of flour, 30,000,000 pounds less of hams and shoulders, 11,000,000 pounds less of pork, and 1,341,000 bales less of cotton. On the other hand, for these smaller exports of wheat the country received in payment nearly $60,000,000 more than it received in the first nine months of 1916; it received nearly $20,000,000 more for the smaller quantity of flour, $5,500,000 more for the hams and shoulders, $3,800,000 more for the pork, and $48,320,000 more for the cotton."

Increase in Production.

The estimated increase in production of all grains in this country this year is more than 20 per cent. over 1916, but the estimated increase in farm value is more than 100 per cent. The increased production of various vegetables and fruit staples is above 20 per cent., but the advance in farm value is placed at more than 90 per cent. The total value of farm products during the first three years of war was actually 58 per cent. more than the total value in the last three years preceding the war, although there was relatively a slight difference in production.

Retiring United Kingdom Bonds.

Confirmation was obtained yesterday of the report that J. P. Morgan & Co., acting as agents for the British Treasury, were buying in the open market the short-term notes and bonds of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and selling the securities pledged as collateral for these issues. By so doing, the volume of the British obligations outstanding is being gradually reduced, and support is given to the market. Purchases made when quotations are low are advantageous to the British Government, for the redemption is accomplished at a price lower than that at which the bonds were sold to the public. A part of the collateral deposited as security for the British obligations consists of American stocks and bonds, but most of these have been offered for sale only when the market has been favorable. Figures giving the total of bonds bought by the British Treasury are unavailable.

Adams Express Shares.

A sale in Adams Express on the Stock Exchange is a rare enough event in itself to be worth chronicling, but even more significant of the present difficulties of the big express companies is the price. A hundred shares of Adams changed hands yesterday at 70. The bid price had previously been 65; asked, 80. The last previous sale was in the month of August, the price 110. President Barrett of the Adams Express Company recently stated that the company had suffered heavily, not only by voluntary enlistments and the draft among its employes, but even more by the lure of far higher wages than the company could pay, offered by shipbuilding and munitions plants. And on top of this freight shippers, discouraged by railroad congestion, had been dumping additional loads upon it—in several instances sending grand pianos by express!

Regional Express Troubles.

The troubles of the express companies, it appears, have been acutely localized in New England and along the Atlantic seaboard. Wells Fargo & Co., whose business is mostly in the West, has suffered much less from traffic congestion than Adams and the American, which have been compelled from time to time to resort to local embargoes. All, however, have felt the pinch of rising costs, the drain upon their skilled labor due to higher wages elsewhere and the stationary, or nearly stationary, character of their income. President Barrett has estimated the increased load upon his company, due to war conditions, at 20 per cent., and much of this increase, being bulky freight, was hard to handle.

OFFERS $10,000,000 NOTES.

General Electric Co. Seeks Additional Working Capital.

Formal announcement was made yesterday of an offering of $10,000,000 two-year, 6 per cent. notes of the General Electric Company at 98⅝, yielding about 6.65 per cent. on the investment. The purpose of the issue is to provide the company with additional working capital, the increased cost of raw materials requiring a larger outlay of funds to finance current orders.

The notes have been sold to a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Lee, Higginson & Co., who are offering the same to the public. Subscription books will open at 10 o'clock this morning and close at noon. The notes will be dated Dec. 1, and interest will be paid semi-annually.

Directors of the General Electric Company will meet in Boston today, and it is expected that an additional issue of $10,000,000 of stock will be authorized. It is understood that the stock will be offered to present shareholders at par.

THE COTTON MARKET

New High Records for the Season Again Reached — Net Gain 19 to 27 Points.

The cotton market yesterday came out of the doldrums, which of late have never had power to restrain it more than twenty-four hours at a time, and for the third time within a week bid up all the active months to new high records for the season. December soared above the 29-cent level and remained there until the close. January touched 28.70, and the close showed a net advance of 19 to 27 points.

Liverpool's early advance brought an opening 3 to 11 points above Thursday's close, but there was a prompt and general attack of realizing which held the market down in the morning hours, at times bringing prices below the Thursday level. Southern advices, however, showed spot cotton very stiff, and it developed that some of the short interest, disappointed in their expectation of a further reaction, felt in need of cover. Private crop estimates were very bullish, and helped in the advance which ensued. The reaction from the high level of the day, however, was considerably stronger than usual, carrying prices down from 10 to 19 points from the highest.

The most prominent crop estimate, issued by a local firm, gave a yield of 10,500,000 bales without linters, or 11,700,000 with linters. This is considerably below even bullish previous estimates. Trade demand, moreover, continues unchecked, and mills are reported booked far ahead at safe margins above present prices.

Exports for the day were 17,013 bales, making the season's total 1,600,885, more than 600,000 bales below last season's total at this date. Southern spot markets officially reported ranged from 50 points lower to 25 points higher, but generally unchanged.

In the last hour of trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange buying appeared all through the list, which broadened considerably, and final prices were at or fractionally under the high. The lead was taken by Republic Iron & Steel, which advanced 5¼ points from the opening and sold at the top. Among the few weak spots was Marine preferred, which sold down to 96½, but later rallied to 97, a net gain of ¼. The railroads were second to the steel industrials, traders in this group feeling that the position taken by the Administration promises early harmony between railroad labor and capital.

WHEAT.

According to the Modern Miller, the acreage seeded to Winter wheat this Fall, while possibly 5 per cent. larger than last year, will fall below expectations. The most serious reductions are in the Southwest, where seeding was retarded, principally in Texas, by the long drouth. Primary receipts at Western points were slightly under last week, and so far this week show a falling off of about one-half million bushels from last week. Rye market firm; No. 2 Western, $1.88¼, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market was firmer, the December position in Chicago selling within ⅛c of the high point of the season and within 2¾c of the fixed minimum of $1.28. The advance seemed to be due more to covering on the strength in oats than to any individual feature. At the same time the fact that cash corn continues to sell at big premiums over futures is looked upon as a factor which should have a very sustaining influence, at least as long as it lasts. In the local cash market new yellow corn was quoted at $2, cost and freight, ten days shipment, and Argentine corn, $2.05 to $2.10, free on board cars New York to arrive.

OATS.

New high records were made in the oats market, the December position selling in Chicago at 70¼c, while May sold at 69⅝c. The close was only slightly below the top, with net gains for the day of 1⅜c to 1⅞c. The advance was due to further evidences of Government buying and on reports that exporters were trying to make purchases at outports. Country offers were again light and many complaints were heard regarding the inability to secure cars. The local cash market was strong and higher; standard quoted at 78c to 78½c; No. 2 white, 78½c; No. 3 white, 77½c to 78c; No. 4 white, 77c to 77½c; fancy clipped white, 78c to 80c; ordinary clipped white, 77c to 78c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The upturn in grain and firmer hog market had a stimulating influence on the whole provision list, and prices were generally higher. Business, however, was light, and operators were inclined to be timid about taking chances either way. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 26,000; estimated for Saturday, 18,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 6,800.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The restrictions placed against operations in cottonseed oil have reduced the volume of business almost to the vanishing point. Total sales yesterday were only 400 barrels, and traders as a rule were inclined to be pessimistic, as many figure that the local restrictions, together with the license system for all operators in cottonseed and cottonseed product, make a double burden on the local trade. COFFEE.

The advances of the previous two or three days were followed by rather a reactionary tendency in the coffee market yesterday. The foreign buying, which had been a feature earlier in the week, was not in evidence, and the advance seemed to have gone far enough to attract scattered realizing. There may also have been a little trade selling, and after opening 1@5 points lower, active months sold about 4@6 points under last night's closing figures. Partial recoveries followed on reports of a steadier tone in the cost and freight market, with the close net 1 point higher to 1 point lower. The local spot market was steady at 7½c for Rio 7s and 9⅛c for Santos 4s.

SUGAR.

The feature in the sugar market was a rumor that President Menocal of Cuba had accepted this Government's offer of 4.60c, free on board Cuban ports, for the new crop Cubas. There was no confirmation, however, and for weeks past Cuba has been holding out for a price of 4¾c. There were also rumors that this Government was negotiating with Cuba for a large quantity of new crop sugars for shipment early in 1918 at a price to be agreed upon later. There have been small arrivals of sugar from Cuba recently, which will add to the refined supplies here and help out a little on the general scarcity in this territory. Spot quotations remain nominally unchanged as follows: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅝c. By the end of December it is expected that there will be about 25,000 tons of Porto Rico sugar available for the United States. About 2,000 tons could be landed in New York by Dec. 15 and could be bought at 6.90c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 3,811 packages. Quite a shortage of high-grade fresh butter and prices advanced sharply. Many receivers had difficulty in piecing out the goods in a way to supply the pressing needs of their trade. The choice qualities sympathized in the firmness, but the medium and lower grades are unimproved, and there is quite an accumulation. More doing in storage creamery and top quotations are firm. Ladles and packing stock quiet. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, 47¼@47¾c; extras, (92 score,) 46½@46¾c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42½@46c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@42c; thirds, 38@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 48@48½s; extras, 47@47½c; firsts, 43½@46½c; seconds, 41@43c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43½@44c; extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 41@42c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 44½@45½c; good to prime, 41@44c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33½@34c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31@32c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 5,450 cases. Fresh eggs are extremely scarce and the competition to secure the few lots of desirable quality arriving is driving prices to still higher levels. Offerings are of irregular quality and showing very wide range in value. Storage eggs quieter and favoring the buyer. Quotations given cover most of the moderate business reported; some fancy lots are held above our top figure, but to effect any important movement prices would have to be shaded still further. Nearby eggs in light demand. The offerings are of very irregular quality and value, possibly strictly new-laid stock of uniformly large size would exceed our quotations, but we see none such. Most of the receipts are mixed in size or quality and much of the business is in range of 65@74c. Nearby brown eggs of fancy quality are very scarce and wanted at full prices. Fresh-gathered extras, per dozen, 57@58c; extra firsts, 55@55c; firsts, 50@54c; seconds, 44@48c; thirds and poorer, 35@42c; fresh-gathered dirties, No. 1, 35c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@34c; fresh-gathered checks, good to choice dry, 32@33c; under grades, 25@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34@34½c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 32½@33½c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 30@32c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@30c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 74@78c; ordinary to good, 60@72c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@72c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 55@62c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 55@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 58@62c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 48@58c.

M'ADOO TO CIRCULATE LIBERTY LOAN MONEY

TWO-THIRDS OF TOTAL PAID

Cash Pouring In from Subscribers Has Resulted in an Accumulation of $2,000,000,000 in the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Secretary McAdoo announced tonight a new plan to place in circulation the huge sum of nearly $2,000,000,000, accumulated in the Treasury as a result of big overpayments received this week from the Liberty Loan. Three hundred million dollars of certificates of indebtedness, due Dec. 15, were called in for redemption on Dec. 6, and another issue of $400,000,000 of certificates, also due Dec. 15, will be redeemed Dec. 11, both issues at par with accrued interest. This arrangement will leave only the $685,000,000 issue to be paid Dec. 15.

The Secretary decided to call in the two issues before their maturity when it became evident that the aggregate amount of the payments Nov. 15 on Liberty Loan subscriptions in cash, credit, and Treasury certificates was about $2,400,000,000, three and a half times more than was due on the 18 per cent. installment. In other words, it is now disclosed by belated reports trickling into the Treasury that nearly two-thirds of the aggregate subscriptions to the second Liberty Loan have been paid in full. Tabulations tomorrow are expected to show that about $1,750,000,000 in cash was received this week.

Subscriptions to the latest issue of certificates of indebtedness, to be dated Nov. 30 and due June 25, 1918, to counteract the flood of income and excess profits taxes on the latter date, have been generous since the issue was announced two days ago. The exact amount of subscriptions, however, has not been announced by Secretary McAdoo. The statement on the early payment of certificates, due Dec. 15, given out tonight, follows:

"The series of $300,000,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness, dated Sept. 17, 1917; and maturing Dec. 15, 1917, is hereby called for redemption on Dec. 6, 1917, at par and accrued interest, pursuant to the provision for such redemption contained in the certificates. On Dec. 6, 1917, interest on all certificates of said series will cease to accrue.

"The series of $400,000,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness, dated Sept. 26, 1917, and maturing Dec. 15, 1917, is hereby called for redemption on Dec. 11, 1917, at par and accrued interest, pursuant to the provision for such redemption contained in the certificates. On Dec. 11, 1917, interest on all certificates of said series will cease to accrue.

"The series of Treasury certificates of indebtedness dated Oct. 24, 1917, and maturing Dec. 15, 1917, will not be redeemed before maturity, but will be paid on Dec. 15, 1917."

ASK FEDERAL AID FOR ROADS

New Englanders Urge $500,000,000 Loan to be Secured by Equipment.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—Immediate Government financial aid for American railroads was advocated by Frederick H. Prince, banker and railroad expert, and ex-Mayor Fitzgerald of this city at today's session of the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on freight and passenger rate increases for New England roads.

Mr. Fitzgerald wanted to know why the Government could make loans to France and Russia and for the construction of a shipbuilding plant at Squantum and not be able to render financial assistance to the railroads of the country. He urged Commissioner Anderson, who is conducting the hearing, to suggest this to the commission on his return to Washington.

"It seems not unreasonable," said Mr. Prince, "that a loan of $500,000,000, to be secured by railroad equipment, should be made to our railroads, which are as necessary for the war as any other agency. The mere knowledge that such a loan was available would automatically restore credit, the life blood of the railroad."

Mr. Prince favored the rate increases proposed, and also suggested the formation of a company similar to the Pullman Company to control freight cars. In order to force less-than-carload traffic to bear its share of the burden of operation, he urged that the railroads be required to make a loading and unloading charge of 10 cents a hundredweight, with a minimum charge per package. "It is a fact," he added, "that the handling of this class of business results in an annual loss to the New Haven Railroad of $6,000,000 and to the Boston & Maine of $4,000,000."

$50,000 FOR POOR RICH BOY.

Referee Rejects Notes That Would Have Depleted Mother's Estate.

The report of Franklin Couch, referee appointed by Surrogate Sawyer of Westchester County to pass upon the accounts of Thomas Frederick Lee of White Plains, executor under the will of his wife, the late Mrs. Georgia Crossman Lee, William Crossman Lee, dubbed the "Poor Little Rich Boy," of White Plains, is $50,000 richer than when the accounting was first filed Objection was made to the judicial accounting of Mr. Lee upon the ground that three notes aggregating $50,000 made out to Frederick F. Green, as Trustee, by Mrs. Lee, were not executed by her and therefore could not be surcharged against the estate by the executor.

The referee finds that two notes for $20,000 each, which were made out in Green's favor, were made on April 15, 1915, while Mrs. Lee was in a New York hospital and in a serious condition. Mr. Couch says that, while the signatures on the notes are in the genuine handwriting of the decedent, no other part is in her handwriting. Then he adds that "Mrs. Lee's condition was such that she might easily have been made the victim of fraud."

In refusing to allow the three notes to be charged against Mrs. Lee's estate, the referee further reports:

"If the notes are sustained the only child of the testatrix and the entire object of her affection and bounty takes nothing under his mother's will and gets no part of her estate. It does not comport with the instincts of maternal love to strip her child of his legal rights and cut him off from inheritance."

By the terms of the will of Mrs. Lee, mother of the "millionaire boy," Mr. Lee, who is the stepfather of William, inherits $50,000, while the residuary estate goes to the son. If the notes had been allowed there would have been nothing left for William.

The boy inherited an estate estimated to be worth $2,000,000 from his grandfather, William Crossman of Manhattan. Recently this estate was increased $150,000 by investments made by De Witt H. Lyon of Port Chester the general guardian.

YALE'S DEFICIT $162,094.

Treasurer Recommends Independent Fund for Graduate School.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 23.—Yale's total appropriation for the year to meet deficits among the different departments was $162,094, according to a statement today authorized by George Parmly Day, Treasurer of the university.

The largest deficit was that in the Graduate School, which has recently been reorganized by Dean Cross, and was $70,360. Mr. Day said in discussing this deficit: "During the year the work of the Graduate School has been thoroughly organized under Dean Cross, with a view to utilizing to the fullest extent the money now placed at its disposal by the university. It is increasingly evident, however, that the university cannot afford to pledge itself indefinitely to provide from its general income each year the sums necessary for the proper and systematic development of the Graduate School. If, then, its Faculty is to be encouraged to plan intelligently for its future, the Graduate School must be given endowment at least sufficient to render it normally independent of fluctuations in university general income."

Other deficits reported for the year were:

Sheffield Scientific School, $36,322; School of Medicine, $25,601; Law School, $6,124; School of the Fine Arts, $14,716; School of Music, $9,000.

PREDICTS TRADE WAR.

Redfield Warns Against German Craft, Energy, and Application.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Warning of the craft, energy, and application with which German business will seek to regain favor in the world markets after the war was sounded today by Secretary Redfield in the interest of American trade. He counseled familiarity with German trade theories and what he called "the artful and formidable organization that, with Government aid at every turn, has been built up in Germany during the last twenty years to dominate the world markets."

The Department of Commerce announced today that German preparations for trade were being scrutinized carefully by its experts, and that its recent report on "German Trade Organization" by Chauncey D. Snow has been in such great demand as to establish a new sales record for Government trade reports. The department officials say that future prosperity of the country will depend partly on Germany's loss of good-will in practically all foreign markets and upon America's ability to maintain its new prestige. The department will get out supplementary bulletins on German trade and preparations for the commercial future early in the new year.

Hudson Tube Earnings Increase.

The report of earnings of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company for the month of October shows a slight increase over the earnings for the same month in 1916. Gross revenue increased to $549,352, or $35,887 more than in 1916, while the net income increased from $66,935 to $67,330. For the four-month period ended Oct. 31 the net income was $172,271, an increase of $7,675 over the corresponding period in 1916. The operating percentage for October, 1917, showed an increase of 1.11 per cent. to 43.22 per cent. and for the four-month period increased from 42.20 per cent. to 44.56 per cent.

Two Lawyers Disbarred.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court disbarred Joseph Wilkenfeld and Benjamin Gunner yesterday. The court found that Wilkenfeld had converted $640 paid to him on a judgment held by a client. He gave his client a check for the money which proved worthless. Lawyer Gunner's disbarment followed his conviction of attempted grand larceny in the second degree.

TRADE ACCEPTANCES FIND GENERAL FAVOR

URGED FOR FOREIGN TRADE

Meeting Here Bases Adoption on Patriotic Grounds as Aid in Fight for Liberty.

All phases of the trade acceptance plan to do away with ledger accounts and put credits into available liquid form, were considered yesterday at an all-day conference held under the auspices of the American Trade Acceptance Council, in the assembly room of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building. Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Board of the Irving National Bank, and Chairman of the Trade Acceptance Council, presided at morning and afternoon sessions, which were attended by many local and out-of-town bankers, wholesalers and retailers.

A striking unanimity of sentiment prevailed regarding the desirability of applying the trade acceptance to all classes of transactions of buying and selling merchandise. In this connection, speakers from the Middle West made it plain that that section of the country had outdistanced the East in the use of this new class of commercial paper. George Woodruff, President of the First National Bank of Joliet, Ill., and bankers and merchants from Cincinnati, Ohio, and other Western centres, all bore testimony to the beneficial results of the use of the trade acceptance.

The advantages of utilizing the facilities offered by the Federal Reserve banking system in connection with a general use of acceptances were emphasized by nearly all the speakers. It was agreed that with the Federal Reserve Board favorably disposed toward the new plan, the time was most opportune, considering the nation's financial war requirements, for dropping the so-called "open book" system of carrying accounts.

Thomas B. Paton, general counsel for the American Bankers' Association, explained that a trade acceptance, payable at a particular bank, legally constituted in order on that bank to charge it against the account of the drawee when it became due. In this way, a trade acceptance would be made to collect itself, so to speak, without further formalities.

E. A. de Lima, President of the Battery Park National Bank advocated the extension of the acceptance plan into this country's foreign trade, and gave it as his view that a general use of this form of circulating paper would prove of distinct benefit in building up overseas trade.

Considerable time was devoted to demonstrating that the trade acceptance could be adapted to all sorts of business transactions even down to the retailers' sales to the consumer. The question of offering special inducements for the use of the acceptance came up for discussion but without any definite conclusion being reached. There also came up the problem of the development of an open discount market for trade acceptances. Chairman Pierson speaking on the attitude of New York banks in the matter of preferential treatment said he believed that the trade acceptance was the best paper in the market, and that it represented a most desirable banking asset, and "formed almost a second reserve line for the bank."

It was the judgment of the conference that the extension beyond fixed maturity of merchandise obligations expressed in trade acceptance form should be accomplished by means of a promissory note, rather than by a reacceptance. The theory upon which this conclusion was reached was that the use of the trade acceptance properly should be confined to obligations arising out of current merchandise transactions, and that if not paid at maturity, it fell into the class of past-due obligations, and should be treated as such.

Just before adjournment, E. A. de Lima, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, brought in a report commending the work being done by the Trade Acceptance Council. A resolution adopted recommended the use of the acceptance "as a means of strengthening the financial system, protecting the commerce and industry of the nation, and aiding the Government in its great struggle for human liberty and freedom."

It was announced that the council would proceed with the work of organizing committees among all trades to carry on the campaign for the adoption generally of the trade acceptance.

EXTRA CHEMICAL DIVIDENDS.

Disbursements Declared by General and Grasselli Companies.

Directors of the General Chemical Company declared yesterday an extra dividend of 5 per cent. in common stock at par and a special dividend of 2½ per cent. in cash on the common stock, payable Feb. 1, 1918, to holders of record Dec. 31. The company also declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. on its preferred stock, payable Jan. 2 to holders of record Dec. 19. Following the meeting it was announced that William M. Kerr, Manager and Assistant Treasurer of the Philadelphia office, had been elected a Director to succeed the late Edward H. Rising.

The Grasselli Chemical Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, declared yesterday the regular quarterly dividends of 1½ per cent. on the preferred and common stocks, and an extra amounting to approximately 4.15 per cent., payable in common stock. The reason for the fraction is that the amount will bring the total of common stock issued up to $15,000,000, which is the total authorized.

RABBI DEPLORES WASTE.

Calls It a Cardinal Sin and Illustrates Results of Economy.

The effect of the war on America's approaching Thanksgiving Day was discussed by the Rev. M. H. Harris before several hundred members of his congregation last night at the Temple Israel, Lenox Avenue and 120th Street. Rabbi Harris praised the non-sectarianism of the Young Men's Christian Association for opening all its war-work institutions to Jews and urged his congregation to help win the war by following Food Administrator Hoover's directions regarding the saving of household food.

"Thanksgiving is an American festival and, whether we are Hebrews or Episcopalians, we all observe it," Rabbi Harris said. "But some people wonder whether, with the year's record of carnage, they have anything to be thankful for. Surely, however, we can be thankful for the lessons and examples of duty which the war has given us. The United States is pouring out its money and its blood that the world may be better.

"Food, just now, has come to be a prime question. We used to take our food for granted, but we don't do so today. Nevertheless, we should be thankful that the earth is proving itself more fruitful than ever to the needs of mankind.

"The cardinal sin today is waste. If each person saves one slice of bread a day, the United States will save 18,500,000 barrels of flour every year. If each person saves one ounce of sugar a day, the nation will save 21,000,000 100-pound bags of sugar each year."

CAPPS OUT AS CHIEF OF SHIPBUILDING

FERGUSON DECLINES POST

Hurley Asks for Another Naval Officer to Take Up the Construction Project.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The resignation of Rear Admiral Washington Lee Capps as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the United States Shipping Board was accepted tonight by President Wilson, and after a short rest he will be assigned to less arduous duties.

Admiral Capps asked to be relieved because of failing health, but requested that he might be permitted to serve his country in some other position where the demands upon his strength would not be so great.

It was stated today that the position of General Manager of the Fleet Corporation had been offered to Homer L. Ferguson, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, and that, after consultation with other officials, he had declined. Mr. Ferguson has been asked to serve in an advisory capacity with the Fleet Corporation.

The Admiral's letter of resignation, and the President's reply, and a letter from Chairman Hurley to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, were made public tonight. Mr. Hurley recommended that a naval constructor be selected to replace Admiral Capps.

Capps's Letter of Resignation.

Here is the correspondence:

Navy Department,
Washington, Nov. 15, 1917.

Dear Mr. President: With great regret I beg to inform you that the physical disability under which I labored at the time of my assignment to duty with the Emergency Fleet Corporation has increased to a serious extent, and my medical adviser has stated that I cannot continue my present duty without very serious impairment of health, the developments during the last month having been especially unsatisfactory.

In view of these conditions I request that I may be relieved from my present duties with the Emergency Fleet Corporation as soon as possible.

This matter has previously been brought to the attention of the Chairman of the United States Shipping Board and the Secretary of the Navy, the last-named officer having, by your direction, assigned me to my present duty.

May I add, in conclusion, how deeply I appreciate the trust and confidence you have at all times reposed in me, especially as shown in my present assignment to duty as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and I shall look forward to the privilege of giving such further service as may be within the limits of my physical capacity as soon as I have had the opportunity to recuperate somewhat from the recent rather severe strain. Very respectfully,

W. L. CAPPS,
Chief Constructor, U. S. N.

To the President,
Via the Secretary of the Navy.

Wilson Commends Retiring Official.

The White House,
Washington, Nov. 23, 1917.

My Dear Admiral Capps: It is with something more than regret that I have received through the Secretary of the Navy your letter informing me of the necessity you are under to relinquish your duties in connection with the Emergency Fleet Corporation. I have admired the work you have done there most warmly, for I have kept informed concerning it, and know with what devotion and intelligence you have done it. It will be a very great loss to the Emergency Fleet Corporation that you must withdraw, and it particularly distresses me to know that the cause is your impaired health.

Of course, I will yield to your desire and assign you to other duties as soon as your health will permit you to undertake them, but I want you to know with what reluctance I do so and with what genuine personal esteem and confidence. I realize now that you have remained longer at your present post than your strength justified, and I know that you have done so from motives of patriotism. May I not express my obligation to you as a public servant? Cordially and sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON.

Hurley Wants Another Naval Man.

United States Shipping Board,
Washington, Nov. 19, 1917.

My dear Mr. Secretary, Admiral Capps has informed me that he has asked you to detail him to some other post. He has told me of the advice of his physician, which is that his health will not stand the constantly increasing strain of the work of General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Dr. Grayson suggested to me a few weeks ago that it was very doubtful whether the Admiral could continue to bear the burden.

I need not tell you that these reports, confirming what Admiral Capps himself has told me on numerous occasions, are a source of great concern to all of us. The work that Admiral Capps has been doing has won the admiration of the officers and trustees of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. No consideration, other than personal concern for his health, could bring us to join in his own request for a transfer to work less arduous.

We have been building up the organization of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, bringing into it the best organizing and engineering skill in the country, and we have been hopeful that, by relieving Admiral Capps of part of the tremendous work he has been doing, we would be able to ease the pressure upon him.

As the program of shipbuilding is enlarged, the duties and responsibilities of General Manager also must be enlarged, and Admiral Capps reluctantly has yielded to the advice of his physicians. My association with Admiral Capps has been so congenial, his remarkable abilities have so won my admiration, that I am divided between a sense of loss in letting him go, and the sense of personal loyalty to him in suggesting that you approve of his request, in order to conserve his health and retain his skill and experience in work where physical endurance will play a smaller part.

Incidentally, Admiral Capp's work has convinced me that his successor should be some one trained in the same service—a naval engineer or constructor. Might I not ask you to look over the field and suggest some one of equal skill and devotion to the nation's interest?

Faithfully yours,
EDWARD N. HURLEY,
Chairman.

Pies Takes Part of Task.

Secretary Daniels said that the Admiral's weakened physical condition had been known to him for some time, and on that account he had hesitated to suggest his name to the President when General Goethals resigned.

It is probable that Admiral Capps not only will have to quit the fleet corporation, but for the present at least will be obliged to abandon active duty entirely.

Under the reorganization of the Shipping Board to speed up the construction program, Vice President Charles A. Pies already has taken over a large share of the work formerly done by the general manager, and has as his assistants some of the country's leading shipbuilders. It is probable that a further reorganization will follow Admiral Capps's retirement.

Ferguson Replies to Offer.

Shipping men in New York yesterday were interested in the news that Homer L. Ferguson, President and General Manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, had been asked to succeed Rear Admiral Capps as General Manager of the Shipping Board's Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"They have a real shipbuilder in Mr. Ferguson," said a man prominent in shipping affairs here. "He gets results out of his work at least. A builder can go to shipyards and tell for himself whether or not the work is progressing satisfactorily."

Mr. Ferguson declined to say whether or not he had accepted the offer.

"I received a letter offering me the place of General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation," he said. "You can say for me that I answered that letter, and my reply is now in Washington. Further than that I have nothing to say."

7 NEW CARGO SHIPS SOON.

To be Launched by Emergency Fleet Corporation by Dec. 31.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Emergency Fleet Corporation expects to launch four steel and three wooden cargo ships by Dec. 31, aggregating 45,700 tons. The first of the ships, a steel vessel of 8,800 tons, will leave the ways in Seattle tomorrow and plans have been made for an appropriate celebration.

The seven ships were contracted for in May and June of this year and have been built according to schedule despite shortage of materials and labor troubles which for a time threatened to tie up the shipyards. Here is the schedule of proposed launchings:

Dec. 15.—Two steel ships of 8,800 tons built by the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Los Angeles, Cal.; one wooden ship of 3,500 tons built by the Merchant Ship Corporation at Grays Harbor, Aberdeen, Wash.; one wooden ship of 3,500 tons built by Kruse & Banks, North Bend, Ore.

An official of the Emergency Fleet Corporation stated today that the program of 6,000,000 tons of shipping by Dec. 31, 1918, probably could be carried out "if the people of the country woke up to the fact that the nation was engaged in a death struggle and got behind the drive." To turn out the 6,000,000 tons on schedule, he said, it would be necessary to obtain a full complement of workmen in the yards so that two and in some cases three shifts could be put to work.

Supplies, it was stated, were being moved with greater expedition than was the case a few weeks ago and the labor situation, so far as absence of strikes was concerned, was looked upon as most favorable to rapid construction. Lumber for the wooden ships being built on the Atlantic Coast will be rushed to the East from the fir forests of Oregon on 1,500 cars which have been contracted for by the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The ships given in this schedule are exclusive of the vessels which were contracted for by foreign Governments and were commandeered by the United States. These vessels, some of which were practically completed when the requisitioning order went into effect, are being launched at brief intervals.

FEWER DRY GOODS BUYERS.

Wholesale Distribution Is Below That of a Year Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"The current wholesale distribution of dry goods for the week is not quite equal to the record period of a year ago. The total volume of road sales for both immediate and future deliveries has been holding its own with the corresponding week of 1916. Merchants have been in the market in fewer numbers. The market on domestic cotton goods is strong. Collections are excellent."

Alters New 25-Cent Pieces.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—New 25-cent pieces in circulation since August have caused such a multitude of inquiries as to their genuineness that the Director of the Mint today explained that a slight change in the design had been made to improve the beauty and stacking qualities of the coins. Draperies of the Goddess of Liberty on the face of the quarters have been rearranged, and the flying eagle on the reverse side has been placed higher on the coin with three stars beneath.

JAPAN SEEKS TRADE UNION WITH AMERICA

WILL STUDY FINANCE HERE

With Trade Relations Arranged, He Says, Political Questions Will Be Easily Settled.

A hope for closer commercial and financial ties between the United States and Japan and a fuller co-operation, especially in the Far East, were expressed by Baron Tanetaro Megata, head of the Special Japanese Finance Commission, in responding to Mayor Mitchel's welcome to the members of the commission in the reception room of the City Hall yesterday. The commission reached New York from Washington at 11:30 o'clock and was escorted to the City Hall, by Philip J. McCook, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense; George F. Baker, Jr., Chairman of the Mayor's Reception Committee, and Henry W. Bull. Besides Baron Megata, the commission is composed of Osama Matsumoto, Secretary of Japan's Department of Finance; Takenosuke Sakaguchi, Baron Bunkichi Ito, Chozo Koika, Kenjiro Matsumoto, Seiji Hishida, Umekichi Yoneyama, and Yochitara Yamashita.

"Our mission here," said Baron Megata, who is a Harvard graduate, in replying to the Mayor's welcome, "is to study conditions, to tell of conditions in Japan, and to urge the fullest co-operation between the two countries. Japan has developed rapidly since her contact with Occidental nations. The development of machinery for international trade and finance has not, however, kept abreast of progress along other lines, and this is a matter for serious thought and consideration. We hope in our studies and conferences here plans may be formulated to very greatly facilitate international finance and commerce. The closer we are knit together economically, more firmly will we be bound in friendship.

"While our purposes are essentially economic, the ties of intimate and considerable commercial and financial relations are, after all, ties that bind, and we cannot help but feel that with such international trade relations, political questions offer easier solutions. Personal interchanges of views and proposals will tend toward more speedily attaining the desired end, and it is for that reason we have come here. We hope the result of our efforts will be freer intercourse between the two countries, closer ties binding us and fuller co-operation, especially in the Far East—all conducing to the peace and prosperity of the world." In welcoming the mission, Mayor Mitchel said, in part:

"We realize with you that we are engaged in a great world struggle to preserve the liberties of our respective peoples. We realize that we are Allies. We realize the great work Japan has done in the East in keeping the Pacific clear of the navies of our enemy and open to the lines of communication with the Far East. We realize that the day may not be far distant when the work of Japan in this great war will take on still greater proportions, and when our nation and yours will be still more intimately in co-operation for our common purpose. For all these reasons, because of the long existing friendship and because New York is always glad to receive distinguished foreign visitors, we delight to welcome you."

Later the members of the commission were given a luncheon at the Bankers' Club at 120 Broadway. Among those attending were Mayor Mitchel, A. Barton Hepburn, the host; Elbert H. Gary, Jacob H. Schiff, Henry Seligman, Henry Clews, J. P. Grace, Lewis L. Clarke, George T. Wilson, J. B. Lumger, H. W. Bull, Oliver Harriman, and Eugene C. Warden. There were no speeches.

COMMODITIES PRICES

The Rise in Major Provisions Was a Feature of the Week.

Were it not for the advances in the major provisions at Chicago, Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices would be practically without feature this week. To begin with, there were fewer changes than for several weeks, only 59 of the 334 listed articles showing variation from last week. Of these 38 were advances, and 21 were declines. Last week's changes, which totaled 66, embraced 46 upward revisions.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on thirty-nine standard commodities this week at this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week last year:

*Nominal.

The total of advances and declines in foodstuffs this week was smaller than is usually represented by one side of the slate alone. There were only eight of the former, and four of them were shown in the Chicago market for provisions. There higher prices were recorded on live beef, live hogs, prime lard, and mess pork. Live sheep and short ribs did not change. In this city bacon was advanced. There were no changes in flour.

The only changes shown by the vegetables were another drop in potatoes, which are now 25 cents a barrel cheaper than at this time a year ago; a decline in rutabagas turnips, and a further rise in choice red kidney beans. There were no changes either way in the listed fresh and dried fruits. The dairy products were featured by the fact that they showed fewer price revisions than for months. They consisted solely of an additional advance in the best creamery butter and a drop in fancy nearby eggs. The break in the latter left them only 7 cents a dozen higher than in the corresponding week in 1916, which is the smallest margin between the two prices for a long time.

No. 7 Rio coffee again dropped, but there was no revision in No. 4 Santos. A lower price for nutmegs and a higher one for white Singapore pepper completed the foodstuffs changes. In the grains markets all the changes were upward, the advances having taken place in malt, oats, rye, and prime timothy hay.

A new low record number of changes was shown in the metals list this week, the only one shown being an advance in the price of tin. There were no marked features in the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils, except, possibly, the further rise in all the soda products quoted on save light 58 per cent. soda ash.

Quotations on leather remained generally unchanged, but there was additional weakness shown in the hides. Branded cow, No. 1 country steer, No. 1 heavy cow, No. 1 buff, and No. 1 kip stock all were quoted lower. Advances were lacking. Advances in turpentine and resin featured the week in the naval stores, while the miscellaneous changes included a rise in tallow and a drop in Brazilian crude rubber. English vermilion paint also fell off in price.

The week's activities in the textile markets, at least so far as price revisions were concerned, centred around burlaps and cottons. Still higher prices for the former resulted from an active demand and the continuance of very bullish reports from the primary markets. The jump in cotton, coupled with active buying of cloths in the gray, brought sharp increases to many constructions. Colored cottons, notably staple ginghams, also shared in the rise.

REAL ESTATE FIELD.

The cash sale of an old church holding in the Greenwich Village section was an interesting feature of yesterday's business. St. Veronica's Roman Catholic Church has received permission from Supreme Court Justice Goff to sell for $33,000 the three-story building at 112 to 114 Leroy Street, on a plot 50 by 100.

The purchaser is the Charles Schweinler Press, which occupies the eight-story printing house, 200 by 125, on the east side of Hudson Street, between Leroy and Clarkson Streets, under lease from the Trinity Church Corporation. The Leroy Street property is separated from this plant by a fifty foot plot owned by Mary E. Caragher. Joseph P. Shea represented the church as attorney.

$[illegible],000 Harlem Lease.

An important Harlem transaction involved the sub-lease of the property at 226 to 228 West 125th Street, extending through to 225 to 227 West 124th Street, by Henry Morgenthau to Carl Heusser, chef at Pabst's.

The new lessee has concluded negotiations for leasing the property for a term of ten years and five months from Dec. 1 next, for which he will pay an annual rental of $24,000. He plans to make extensive alterations to the place at a cost of $35,000 and will reopen it about Dec. 20 as a restaurant. This property, together with 222-224 West 125th Street, is owned by the Cromwell estate, which some years ago made a long lease of the parcels to Mr. Morgenthau.

Barclay Street Loft Sold.

The Cruikshank Company sold for the Lincoln Trust Company 94 Barclay Street, a four-story building, on a lot 19 to 79. The parcel is located in the wholesale district and is on the south side of the street, 65 feet west of Washington Street. According to the records title stands in the name of Isabel T. Price of Rutherford, N. J.

Tenement Sales.

The Nason Mortgage Corporation purchased from Annie Eiseman 339 and 341 East Twelfth Street, a six-story tenement on a plot 50 by 100.

Bronx Sales.

Samuel Cowen sold the five-story brick apartment known as 1,065 Boston Road, on a lot 37 by 125 feet, to I. Kuntze.

Carmela Silvestro sold to the Pershing Realty Company 1,826 Marmion Avenue, a three-story dwelling on a lot 18.6 by 60.

The 173d Street Realty Company, Aaron Miller, President, sold for cash 1,532 to 1,540 Seabury Place, adjoining the southeast corner of Boston Road, three five-story apartment houses, 125 by 100, held at $115,000.

Flatbush Apartment Sold.

The Court Roger apartment house, on Beverly Road near Ocean Avenue, Brooklyn, has been bought by Leonard D. Hosford from the Kings County Mortgage Company for investment. The purchaser plans extensive improvements.

The transaction, which involved about $80,000, was negotiated by M. Wiley & Son.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Kew Gardens Corporation sold to F. E. Phillips a plot 246 by 252 feet on the southwest corner of Union Turnpike and Grenfell Avenue, and a second plot, 170 by 319 feet, on the southeast corner of the two streets, at Kew Gardens. It is understood that $30,000 was paid for the property.

The Sage Foundation Homes Company sold to T. C. Martin the dwelling on the west side of Greenway Terrace 28 feet south of Archway Place, Forest Hills.

D. L. Sterling has purchased the dwelling and plot 60 by 100 feet on the south side of Quentin Street 160 feet east of Austin Street from the Kew Gardens Corporation.

Long Island.

The Lewis H. May Company, in conjunction with the H. Richter Company, sold for M. Bittner the house and garage on the west side of Dakota Street, Neponsit, L. I., to James Bradford for investment.

New Jersey.

The Frank Hughes-Taylor Company sold for cash for Charles B. Booth, son of General Ballington Booth, to Charles S. Barker the residence at 10 Clairidge Court, on a plot 65 by 150 feet. The property was valued at $8,500.

Interesting Chain Store Lease.

C. C. Nichols, Jr., representing Joseph P. Day, has closed at Providence, R. I., a twenty-five-year lease on the four-story building, 40 by 182, at the corner of Westminster and Moulton Streets, for the W. T. Grant Twenty-five-cent Stores Company, from the estate of Charles H. Smith, Jr., at a total aggregate rental of more than $750,000.

The Joseph P. Day organization has arranged for the present tenants to remain in the property for a time, the present tenants being the St. Clair Candy Company and the Blackstone Hotel. This adds a new link to the chain of stores of the W. T. Grant Company. An unusual element in the transaction was the fact that it was necessary to have a special decree entered by the court in this matter, and the signature of the Mayor of Providence was necessary to the document authorizing the signing of the lease.

Commercial Leases.

Charles F. Noyes Company has arranged an extension of the lease held by Wilbert Garrison covering the four upper floors of 80 and 82 Beekman Street for five years from May 1, 1919, at an aggregate rental of $40,000. The lease is of particular interest, as it represents a rental increase of about 15 per cent., based on conditions that will exist a year hence.

The Duross Company has made a five-year lease of the old McCreary warehouse, a 50 by 100-foot building at the northwest corner of Nineteenth Street and Avenue B. The tenant is a corporation formed during the present week with the title of Edward Murphy Warehouses, Inc.

Realty Notes.

A loan of $700,000, bearing interest at 5 per cent. and due May 1, 1922, has been made by the Prudential Insurance Company of America to August Heckscher on the twenty-story store and office building being erected by Robertson & Todd, who bought the site from Mr. Heckscher. The mortgage is subject to a building loan of $1,500,000 made by the Prudential Company. The property measures 125 by 125, and was formerly the site of the Knickerbocker Club and later the Tiffany Studios.

There were no plans filed yesterday for new buildings, or alterations involving $5,000 or more, in the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings.

Delmonico's famous old restaurant at 82 Beaver Street closes its doors today. The property was sold some months ago to the American Merchant Marine Company, for occupancy. The present building was erected in 1890, the original Delmonico restaurant having been built in 1835.

THERE HAS BEEN MORE REAL MONEY

Made and kept in N. Y. City

Through the increased value of Real Estate
Than through most any other source.

This is a REAL Fact.

Just look at these figures
From public auction sales of property

These are the facts.
Can any one doubt that lots
Bought at this forced sale, ordered by the Court
At such times as these
At such a future business center as Broadway, 230-231 St.

Will increase in value,
Make a splendid investment,

Extracts of a letter written at the Adjutant General's office at Washington on the probable cause of a considerable number of rejections of candidates for officers in the United States Army have been received by Dr. Crampton and transmitted to the physical training teachers in the schools. The most prominent reasons given for these rejections are those which show a lack of physical training throughout the schools of the country, and particularly in high schools. Emphasis is given to the exact features of physical training which have been strongly pushed in the New York City schools during the last five years.

HEALTH IMPROVES IN ARMY CAMPS

MEASLES SPREAD IN SOUTH

Sick Rate in National Guard Units 42.6 Per Thousand and 28.5 in National Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Notwithstanding the fact that there were ninety-six deaths in the various army camps throughout the country during the week ended Nov. 16, the general health of the army was better than during the week before, according to the report of the Surgeon General.

Pneumonia was epidemic in some of the Southern camps, and there are many cases of measles. The latter ailment appears to be most prevalent in Southern camps where are quartered soldiers coming from rural districts, who, the army surgeons say, did not have communicable diseases in their childhood because they lived remote from large communities.

Summarizing the general health conditions, the report accompanying the report says:

"National Guard: In the 27th, 28th, 29th, 32d, 33d, 34th, 37th, and 41st Divisions the admission rate per 1,000 and the constantly non-effective rate may be said to be satisfactory in view of existing conditions. The incidence of communicable disease also is low among these troops. These troops, all of whom come from northern States, aggregate 219,250 officers and men. But thirty new cases of pneumonia were reported from these divisions, ten being the highest number reported from one division. The measles rate also is low. In no one of them have more than forty-five new cases been reported. The number of new cases of venereal disease reported in these divisions is but 237.

"All figures on sickness in these reports are of new cases first reported during the week ended Nov. 16. The totals and proportions given, therefore, are not of all on the sick list during the week. The military reports class the total number of sick and injured as 'total non-effectives,' and the proportion of this total to the strength of a command as the 'non-effective rate.' The non-effective rate is usually higher than the weekly rate for new cases of sickness or injury reported, (the 'admission rate,') because individual cases of illness are, on the average, of more than one week's duration.

"The non-effective rate for the entire National Guard in the United States was for Nov. 16 42.6 per thousand; the admission rate for the week, 32.0; the non-effective rate for the national army was 28.5 per thousand, and the admission rate, 29.2.

Health conditions in some of the chief camps are as follows, the figures in parentheses being the cases of illness reported in the previous week:

Twenty-seventh Division, Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C. (New York National Guard): Cases of sickness, 342 (422); sick rate per thousand, 12.6 (14.5). Number of cases of: Pneumonia, 4 (1); other illness, 307 (377). Deaths: 1, pneumonia (pneumonia 1).

Twenty-ninth Division, Camp McClellan, Anniston, Ala. (New Jersey National Guard): Cases of sickness, 469 (421); sick rate per thousand, 19.2 (17.9). Number of cases of: Pneumonia, 4 (2); malaria, 2 (0); venereal disease, 18 (19); measles, 2 (4); other illness, 443 (396). Deaths: None (1, pneumonia).

76th Division, Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass.—Cases of sickness, 335, (309;) sick rate per thousand, 14.4, (11.9.) Number of cases of: Pneumonia, 1, (1;) venereal disease, 20, (29;) measles, 6, (7;) other illness, (note 2,) 308, (274.) Deaths, 0; (pneumonia, 2; injuries, 3; total, 5.)

77th Division, Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I.—Cases of sickness, 213, (257,) sick rate per thousand, 12.1, (11.6;) number of cases of: Pneumonia, 1, (2;) venereal disease, 11, (16;) other illness, 201, (239.) Deaths: Suicide, 1; (delirium tremens, 1.)

78th Division, Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.—Cases of sickness, 475, (491;) sick rate per thousand, 35, (28.9.) Number of cases of: Dysentery, 0, (1;) venereal disease, 28, (36;) typhoid, 10, (1;) other illness, 437, (453.) Deaths: Hemorrhage, 1; typhoid, 1; meningitis, 1; injury, 1; total, 4, (0.)

ACCUSE 3 OF AUTO THEFTS.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 23.—With the arrest of three young men in South Jefferson Street, Orange, this morning, the police here believe they have solved the theft of almost 100 automobiles from the Oranges and Newark in the last few months. When arrested the men were carrying tires and other equipment from a car which they are accused of having stolen in Newark and abandoned here when the car broke down. The prisoners are William F. Higgins, John Sheriden, and Thomas Lyons, all of Newark. Patrolman Robert Brennan, who made the arrest, was publicly commended tonight at roll call by Chief of Police Drabell for his work in the case.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Special to The New York Times.

GLEN COVE, L. I., Nov. 23.—Moescha Rosenberg's advertisement in the local paper had its desired effect. He threatened to print today a list of those who owed him money and would not pay. All week and right up to press time Rosenberg was kept busy receipting old bills, and now he says that there is not a resident of this village who owes him a cent.

Rosenberg is a jeweler and is closing up his store. Several thousand dollars was due him, and he wanted it before he left town. So he put in the advertisement in which he said:

"I shall publish the name and exact address and vocation of each of the aforementioned dead beats, giving in my usual style a psychological treatise of their character and make up. The paper goes to press at 10:30 A. M., and all who are anxious to have their characters defined in print should not settle their accounts before that time."

Immediately creditors began to appear and pay their bills. Men who had bought engagement rings on credit and others who had purchased presents that they did not care to have published all paid up promptly, and the jeweler was happy. So today Rosenberg published an advertisement on "Soiled Linen," in which he said:

"There are those who firmly believe that there is no wrong that could not be corrected. That it all depends on the laundry. Some linen must be badly soiled, but all can be cleansed. It depends on how hard one rubs. We are glad to state that not one dollar that was owing to us last week is unpaid today. We do not want to congratulate our friends who paid up, but, rather, ourselves, as good hard-rubbing launderers."

Warburton Left $300,000.

The will of Frederick J. Warburton, a New York business man, who died at Scarsdale on Nov. 2, disposes of an estate estimated at over $300,000. The major part is inherited by the widow during her lifetime, while various other relatives receive valuable legacies. The will was offered probate at White Plains yesterday.

Private Peat
What he went through

PRIVATE PEAT—two years on the Western front, through the horrors of Ypres, is back to tell us there are worse things than war. He was there when the Huns first used poison gas. He knows fighting in the trenches, the hardships, triumphs and humor of the common soldier, and knows how to tell about them.

PRIVATE PEAT saw his whole company, ammunition gone, surrounded by Germans and captured. Shot through the chest, lying two days in the open, he escaped and was carried back to his own lines. His right lung is gone—his right arm is powerless. Through two years of hell, he is back with a smile and a story of tense fighting and manly courage.

EASTERN ROADS TO BE RUN AS ONE; WAR EXPERIMENT

All Their Facilities Will Be Pooled for the Expeditious Movement of Freight.

ORDERED BY WAR BOARD

Operating Vice Presidents a Committee to Carry Out Revolutionary Program.

TO SHIFT MEN FROM WEST

Locomotives Also to be Brought East—Coal and Coal Cars to be Pooled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The entire railroad system of the eastern part of the United States will be revolutionized in operation for war purposes in accordance with action taken today by the Railroads' War Board after consultation with heads of Government organizations devoted to war activities. Direction was given by the Railroads' War Board "that all available facilities on all railroads east of Chicago be pooled to the extent necessary to furnish maximum freight movement."

This means that the Eastern railroads are to be operated as a unit as long as the present emergency exists, probably for the period of the war. No Eastern railroad will be operated as a separate entity, but will take its orders in the handling of freight from a central body composed of the operating Vice Presidents of the Eastern lines, who have been instructed by the Railroads' War Board to adopt all measures which in their judgment may be necessary to relieve the present situation and assure the maximum amount of transportation.

An official statement issued tonight by the Railroads' War Board says the measures adopted are "revolutionary." Part of the program agreed upon is already in effect. It is expected that the entire revolutionary change in railroad operation will be in full swing on Monday. Vigorous instructions have gone out to the various railroads affected to conform to the plan.

Question of Pool Legality.

There seems to be a question as to the legality of the pooling arrangement, but the Railroads' War Board obtained assurances from the Government officials with which it conferred today that they believed the pooling ordered was permissible in this time of war. At any rate, the Railroads' War Board, which is a voluntary non-government organization composed of railway executives, felt justified under the stress of circumstances to take its chances on going contrary to the interstate commerce statutes in the knowledge that it was acting from patriotic motives.

The arrangement made did not embrace all the measures which the railroads have contemplated adopting. The passenger problem must be met soon. It is the understanding that the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroads will reduce their through passenger service between Eastern points and Chicago, thus compelling those finding it necessary to take fast trains to patronize other paralleling lines. In addition, roads that handle the bulk of coal, coke, and steel products will stop carrying other materials, but the new arrangements will enable shippers to have these other materials carried over lines that are not so largely devoted to transporting coal, coke, and steel.

Another problem yet to be adjusted relates to the advisability of refusing to carry non-essentials and luxuries and the materials necessary for their production. Flowers and confectionery are regarded as in this class. It was proposed recently by the railroads that they should not haul coal for the use of florists. The railroads estimated that if this were done great quantities of coal needed for war industry would be saved. The florists protested so vigorously, however, that action was deferred. They represented that their industry would come to a standstill if they could not heat their hothouses, and that thousands of people would be thrown out of work.

The Measures to Be Taken.

Official announcement was made tonight that the measures which the railroads' War Board and the Committee of Operating Vice Presidents would put into effect at once were as follows:

"All available facilities on all railroads east of Chicago will be pooled to the extent necessary to furnish maximum freight movement.

"All open-top cars of all Eastern roads and similar cars of private ownership which are at home on Eastern lines will be pooled on an equitable plan, distribution under the pool to be made pro rata on the basis of the tonnage-carrying capacity of the equipment in the pool. The car pool should be administered under the direction of the Car Service Commission.

"The Commission on Car Service will divert from those lines where the congestion is most acute all freight that can be handled by any open route until the congestion is relieved.

"The pooling of coal will be further extended wherever practicable.

"The National Fuel Administration is asked to arrange for supplying the various coal markets from the nearest coal mines, in order to avoid waste of car efficiency.

"Any order that preference be given

American Steamer Sunk by U-Boat in Mediterranean

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The American steamer Schuylkill has been torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean. The Navy Department was advised today that forty men of her crew had been landed at a Mediterranean port. There was no naval armed guard aboard. Whether there was loss of life was not known here, but it was assumed that the forty men rescued comprised the vessel's complement. Secretary Daniels made this announcement:

"The Navy Department is in receipt of advices that forty of the crew of the American steamer Schuylkill, which had been torpedoed, have been landed at a Mediterranean port. No navy men were aboard."

Both German and Austrian submarines are operating in the Mediterranean, but so far as is known the nationality of the submarine which sank the Schuylkill was not determined.

10 KILLED BY BOMB IN POLICE STATION

BUILDING NEARLY WRECKED

Most of the Victims Were Policemen—One Woman Among Those Killed.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 24.—Ten persons were killed and several injured tonight when a bomb, designed to destroy the Italian Evangelical Church, in the heart of the Third Ward, an Italian settlement, exploded in Central Police Station, where it had been carried for examination. Seven detectives, two policemen, and one woman were killed.

The bomb, evidently with a time fuse attached, was found in the basement of the church. Police Headquarters were called and Detective McKinney was sent to get the missile. On his way he met an Italian named Mazuinni, who was taking the bomb to headquarters. McKinney accompanied him back to the station.

While Mazuinni was taken into the office of Lieutenant Flood for questioning, Desk Sergeant Henry Deckart took the bomb into the patrolmen's room.

Meanwhile detectives were answering roll call on the second floor, and just before dismissal they were informed that the bomb had been found. On going downstairs they grouped about the missile. It was then that the bomb exploded, killing seven of the number instantly.

The lower floor of the building was shattered and every window throughout the structure was broken by the shock. The dead are:

Detective DAVID O'BRIEN.
Detective FRANK COSWIN.
Detective PAUL WEILER.
Detective STEPHEN H. STECKER.
Detective JOHN SEEHAWER.
Detective FRED KAISER.
Detective ALBERT TEMPLIN.
Operator SPINDLER.
HENRY DECKERT, Desk Sergeant.
Mrs. CATHERINE WALKER.

Among the seriously injured are:

Detective FRED HARTMAN.
Detective BERGEN.

Mrs. Walker came into the station house to make a complaint just before the explosion occurred.

According to one of the detectives, the bomb was a cylinder-shaped affair, about one foot in length and eight inches in diameter. Inserted in the top was a small bottle of liquid, supposedly nitroglycerine.

The explosion, which was heard throughout the main section of the city, brought thousands of persons to the scene. Firemen from a station near by aided in the work of rescue. Many of the bodies as they were taken from the building were removed to the county jail, which is just across the street from the Police Station. From there they were taken to the Morgue.

The dead and injured were scattered all over the squad room.

Details of firemen were dispatched through the building. On the second story, just over the squad room, where the police operators work, the body of Edward Spidler was found. He was killed at his post by a metal missile that came through from the floor below.

Seated at either side of him were Arthur Van Pieterson and Otto Gerlach. Neither was injured beyond the shock of the explosion.

Further investigation of the station proved that all other occupants of the building escaped unscathed.

Lieutenant Flood, in his office, just across the hall, was thrown from his chair and stunned, but he was at work in the squad room death house before other rescuers arrived.

Mazuinni was absolved of all blame by the police. The woman killed was Catherine Walker. She had gone to the police station to report a robbery, and was standing in the hall waiting to get into the lieutenant's office when the bomb exploded.

When a searching party, equipped with Fire Department lights, entered the squad room the scene was a shock even to the policemen and firemen, who are used to tragic emergencies.

The body of Detective Dave O'Brien lay in the centre of the room. He was lying face downward, partially covered with debris. Detective Stecker's body was found near the entrance to the squad room. He appeared to have received the full force of the charge. His body was mangled. Inside of his clothing was found a piece of steel about two inches square which passed through his body. His face, however, was not even scarred.

The body of the woman was found in a position indicating that she was passing out of the door leading to the squad room.

The damage to the station will not exceed $1,000. It is the belief of the police that the bomb was placed in the Evangelical Church by anarchists friendly to the Italians recently arrested for breaking up a patriotic meeting being held by a missionary from the church. A meeting was to have been held in the church tonight, and the bomb was so timed that it would have exploded during the meeting.

MILITARY GUARDS PUT IN CONTROL OF RIVER FRONTS

WILL SHOOT TRESPASSERS

Unidentified Persons, Whether Citizens or Aliens, Must Not Enter Barred Zones.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST FIRE

All Systems of Patrol and Prevention, Must Be Reported, and, Where Insufficient, Improved.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—New York piers devoted to the shipment of war supplies will be placed under military guard at midnight tomorrow. This order, designating regular soldiers to act in the enforcement of the President's proclamation against enemy aliens, was promulgated tonight by the Department of Justice, acting with the War Department. Within a reasonable time this military guard will be extended to cover all the piers, munitions factories, and warehouses in New York, Brooklyn, and Hoboken, and the entire sea coast.

Regular soldiers, dressed in the full blue dress uniform of the regular army, and armed with bayonets and loaded rifles, will act as the patrol along the New York water front. They will be dressed in blue to distinguish them from the ordinary soldier in khaki, and to serve notice upon the public that their duty is imperative and their orders must be obeyed.

They will have instructions to shoot all persons, aliens or citizens, entering the barred zone, 100 yards from piers, docks and warehouses, unless identified by special private guards to be supplied by pier owners. Alien enemies, under the President's proclamation, may not enter the prohibited zones in any circumstances, and must move out if they already have business or residence places within the 100-yard limit. By this strict system of patrol the Government hopes to eliminate the possibility of enemy plotters causing fires and explosions on piers and in waterfront warehouses.

Instructions issued to pier owners and those having business at the ports call attention to the strict observance by the public of the military control. Pier owners under the new instructions must furnish a list of their employes and their nationality, and passes will be issued to those approved by the Department of Justice granting them the right to pass the military guard.

In furtherance of the plans of the Government to prevent a recurrence of fires at piers and in warehouses, the Department of Justice will demand a stricter fire control and fire prevention system on the piers and in the warehouses. The orders issued tonight call for a report by the pier owners of these facilities, and where they are found to be insufficient the War Department will compel improvements to be made.

Instructions to the pier owners, and general instructions as to the patrolling of the waterfronts were sent today to United States Marshals in New York, Brooklyn, and Hoboken. These officials will confer tomorrow at 11 o'clock with the General commanding the Department of the East at Governors Island. The soldiers who will patrol the prohibited district will be under the command of the Department of the East, although military law will not prevail in the military zone. Where arrests are made by the soldiers they will be turned over to the police.

The Department of Justice advises that the barred zone be marked by some sort of a line, and that signs notifying alien enemies not to pass be placed at frequent intervals. In cases of street cars or railroads passing through the barred district, Germans will not be permitted to be aboard, even for continuous passage. Any found within the zone for any reason whatever will be arrested and probably interned for the period of the war. Permits previously granted to Germans to enter waterfront zones are revoked. The restrictions, however, do not apply to public ferries.

I.

On Nov. 16, 1917, the President issued a proclamation providing additional regulations concerning alien enemies, of which Regulation 13 reads as follows:

13. An alien enemy shall not approach or be found within one hundred yards of any canal, nor within one hundred yards of any wharf, pier, or dock used directly by or by means of lighters by any vessel or vessels of over five hundred (500) tons gross engaged in foreign or domestic trade other than fishing; nor within one hundred yards of any warehouse, shed, elevator, railroad terminal, or other terminal, storage or transfer facility adjacent to or operated in connection with any such wharf, pier, or dock; and wherever the distance between any two of such wharves, piers, or docks, measured along the piers line connecting them, is less than eight hundred and eighty yards, an alien enemy shall not approach or be found within one hundred yards of such shore line.

II.

The object of the proclamation is to provide adequate protection of shipping and of docks, piers, wharves, warehouses, elevators, and similar waterfront facilities actually engaged in the operation of shipping, particu-

SANK SUBMARINE; CAPTURED CREW

Two American Destroyers with Depth Charge Made U-Boat Come to Surface.

SEAMEN ON DECK; HANDS UP

Germans Opened Seacocks of Disabled Craft—Two of Them Were Killed.

BASE OF THE AMERICAN FLOTILLA IN BRITISH WATERS, Nov. 24, (Associated Press.)—The American destroyers which were responsible for the latest sinking of a German submarine have returned to their base with flags flying. Their victory over the U-boat was one of the cleanest, neatest, and quickest pieces of anti-submarine work yet recorded by the American Squadron.

The submarine was disabled by a depth charge, rose to the surface three minutes after the charge was fired, hung hesitatingly at the surface for a moment, and then sank to its final place of lodgement at the bottom of the sea.

The pressure of water at the 200 feet or so depth at which she sank soon completed the work of destruction on the strained plates of the submarine's hull. For a long time bubbles and oil continued to rise in great gulps from the grave where she lay, and then the Americans made assurance complete in a manner of which it is unnecessary to go into details.

Prepared to Fire Torpedo.

It was daylight, with good visibility, when the periscope was sighted by the lookout of a destroyer which, with a sister craft, was engaged in its customary duties. The submarine commander was just preparing to fire a torpedo, either at one of the destroyers or at a merchantman near-by.

"Periscope two points off the starboard bow!" sang out a lookout in a voice which could be heard from end to end of the craft. Instantly an alarm to general quarters was sounded and the helm thrown hard over. Signal flags were swung out notifying the sister ship of the exact location of the enemy. At the same time the heliograph began its staccato flashing of orders for a combined attack.

A scant eighteen inches of periscope had shown above the surface of the sea 400 yards distant for a few instants and then vanished. In less time than it takes to tell, the destroyer, under the impetus of suddenly opened throttles, had fairly leaped into the track where the periscope had disappeared.

Terrific Depth Charge.

At the proper moment the commander of the bridge released a depth charge from its fixed place. The powerful explosive, 300 pounds in weight, in its steel case, sank with a little splash into the destroyer's wake, and at the regulated depth responded to the bidding of its valves and burst in a terrific explosion.

A vast extent of water was upheaved and rose in a column to a great height. That the charge had found its mark was shown by a mass of oil and bubbles which marked the spot as the water found its level.

Meanwhile, a second destroyer passed through the boiling, oily waters and dropped a second depth charge, and then followed the tactics of the first destroyer in circling the spot. The two destroyers did not have long to wait. In less than three minutes there was a rush of water and the U-boat, whale-like, came to the surface not more than 500 yards away from the first destroyer.

The Americans were taking no chances on a German trick. The gun crews stood with their guns, machine guns, and torpedo tubes trained on the stricken enemy, ready to let loose a shower of steel in case the submarine showed fight. But the U-boat was badly stricken; the explosive charge had done its work thoroughly.

U-Boat Rose Disabled.

Although the upper part of the boat appeared to have been untouched, it was evident from her actions that the submarine was unmanageable. She was badly listed, owing to the damage to her ballast tanks, and it was apparent that her steering gear, and probably also her engines, had jammed.

The three minutes which elapsed between the time the depth charges were fired and the time she emerged, as if catapulted, provide food for interesting speculation. It is probable she was driven to the bottom by the force of the explosion, but retained enough buoyancy to rise to the surface. But by the time she reached the open air the strain had done its work and she hung on the surface of the water only for a moment and then began to settle again, at first hesitatingly, soon with evidence of complete collapse.

During that brief period several American sailors jumped into the sea, in an effort to get the prize buoyed up with hawsers so she could be towed to port. One line was fastened to the submarine successfully, but before it

PETROGRAD, Nov. 23, (Delayed.)—The text of certain confidential communications between the Russian Foreign Office and foreign Governments was published today by Bolshevik and Social-Revolutionist newspapers at the instigation of Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevik Foreign Minister. Trotzky says that the documents are those of the "Czaristic bourgeois and coalition Governments," and from them "the Russian nation and all nations in the world must learn the truth of the plans secretly made by financiers and traders through their parliamentary and diplomatic agents."

German and Austrian politicians, Trotzky declares, may try to make capital out of these documents, but he warns them that when the German proletariat, by means of a revolution, secures access to their Chancelleries they will find there documents which will show up in no better light than those now published.

One of the documents published is a letter, dated Sept. 26 last, from M. Terestchenko, then Russian Foreign Minister, to the Russian Ambassador at Washington. The letter instructed the Ambassador to express to Secretary Lansing high appreciation of the fact that the American Ambassador at Petrograd, David R. Francis, refrained from joining in the representations by the British, French and Italian Ambassadors that some measures must be taken to increase the fighting capacity of the Russian armies. The letter added that this action had a depressing effect, inasmuch as the Allies knew the energy which the Russian Government was exerting toward carrying on the war.

Branting Letter Printed.

One of the letters published was from the Russian Ambassador at Stockholm. In it Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist leader, was represented as having said in a confidential conversation regarding the proposed international Socialist conference, that if M. Kerensky, then Premier, did not reject the idea of a conference, but entered objections on the grounds that it was inopportune, the Dutch-Scandinavian committee would have to conform.

The first State document published deals with the desire of Russia to acquire the Dardanelles, Constantinople, the west shore of the Bosporus, and certain defined areas in Asia Minor. It sets forth the demand of France and England that Russia agreed to the freedom of Constntinople for cargoes not from or to Russian ports, the retention of the hold of the Mussulman on places in Arabia under a separate Mussulman Government, and the inclusion of certain parts of Persia in the sphere of British influence.

This document indicates that Russia agreed on the whole, but proposed an amendment demanding a clearer definition in regard to the Government of Mussulman territory and the freedom of pilgrimage. It defines the Russian sphere of influence, and indicates her concern about the northern boundary of Afghanistan, and also sets forth Italy's agreement provided her claims in the East are recognized.

Boundaries of Germany.

The second document is a telegram from M. Izvolsky, Russian Ambassador to France, dated March 11, 1917, and stating that France recognizes Russia's freedom to define her western boundaries. This was followed by a telegram from Sergius Sazonoff, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, assuring M. Izvolsky that the agreement with France and England in regard to the Constantinople straits need not be reexamined, and stating the willingness of Russia to give France and England the freedom of defining the western boundaries of Germany, in exchange for the freedom allowing Russia to define the eastern boundary of Germany, but insisting on the exclusion of the Polish question as a matter of international discussion, and instructing M. Izvolsky to counteract an attempt to place the future of Poland under control of the powers.

M. Sazonoff's telegram, continuing, says that Russia must prevent Sweden from becoming unfriendly, and by all means must earn the friendship of Norway, and that all political efforts to influence Rumania already had been

We Have the Foe in a Deadly Grip, Says Lloyd George, Exhorting Employers and Workmen to Co-operate

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Addressing a deputation of employers and workmen engaged in shipbuilding who called upon him today with suggestions for the best means of obtaining the greatest possible output of new ships, Premier Lloyd George urged better co-operation.

"We are fighting for our lives," said the Premier. "We have terrible struggle on hand before us, but if we are secure on the seas, well, to use the phrase, we have got them; they cannot escape us.

"We have got them in a deadly grip, and, knowing the character of the people of this country as I do, they do not let go, once they have started. That is their historical character, and the Germau knows it. He is aware that our grip is a deadly one, once we begin, and he is trying to unloosen it.

"He is attempting to get us at what he considers is our most vulnerable point, namely, our communications on the sea. He will not succeed. But it depends very largely on you, and you can only get the best results by good-will and co-operation and by throwing the whole of your energy and strength into the task."

DUKHONIN FOUGHT ARMISTICE PLAN

Openly Questioned Authority of Lenine and the Council of Commissaries.

HIS DISMISSAL CONDEMNED

Non-Bolsheviki Press Declares Actions of Lenine and His Associates Are High Treason.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 23 (via London, Nov. 24.)—Words fail to indicate the new depths of the tragedy now opening out before Russia. Yesterday Lenine and Krylenko spoke with General Dukhonin by direct wire. In categorical form the Bolsheviki leaders demanded of the Commander in Chief immediate execution of their order to conclude an armistice and reprimanded him for delay.

"Before replying," Dukhonin said, "I should like information on the following points: Has the Council of the People's Commissaries had an answer from the powers to its appeal to belligerent nations regarding a peace decree? What is to be done with the Rumanian army which forms part of our front? Is it intended to open negotiations regarding an armistice, and with whom—only with Germans or with Turks—or are negotiations to be opened for a general truce?"

The Bolsheviki gave no explanations and categorically insisted on the opening of negotiations for an armistice without delay.

General Dukhonin Protests.

"I can only understand," Dukhonin replied, "that immediate negotiations with the powers are impossible for us; still less are they possible for me in your name. Only the central Government, supported by the army and the country, can have sufficient weight with our enemy to make such negotiations authoritative and to secure results. I also consider that it is in the interests of Russia that a general peace should be concluded as soon as possible. But I repeat that the peace necessary for Russia can only be concluded by the central Government."

The reply was: "In the name of the Government of the Russian Republic and of the Council of the People's Commissaries, we dismiss you from your post for disobeying the Government's orders and for conduct that brings unheard-of calamities to the working classes of all countries, and especially to the armies. Ensign Krylenko is appointed Commander in Chief."

The non-Bolshevik press unanimously condemns this step as open treason. The Den says:

"If the action of Lenine, Trotzky and Krylenko is not high treason, is not betrayal of Russia, is not service to German imperialism, we should like to ask what else can be done to secure the right to bear the name of traitor to Russia and of German agent. * * * Proletarians of all countries, we believe, will soon be reunited, and they will unite in despising and cursing the country that has betrayed all peoples who are tortured by the horrors of war."

Even the Novaya Zhiza describes the actions of Lenine and his friends as "behavior of lunatics which will bring on Russia a calamity of disorderly demobilization."

The allied Ambassadors and Ministers yesterday held a conference. They applied to their Governments for instructions on the point that an attempt to conclude a separate peace was a breach of the Treaty of London.

NO PEACE OFFER TO AUSTRIA.

Accommodating Terms from Russia Acceptable, Premier Says.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 24.—Answering an interpellation in the Austrian House of Deputies, Premier von Seydler, according to a Vienna dispatch, declared that on information from the Foreign Minister up to this time no Russian peace offer had been made on the eastern front.

The Premier added that the offer would be examined in a benevolent spirit, and that accommodating terms would be accepted. Unusual conditions in Russia, he said, did not allow clear judgment as to whether the peace party there would be able to accomplish its object.

FURIOUS ASSAULTS OF TEUTONS FAIL

RECAPTURE MONTE TOMBA

Monte Pertica Also Recovered—Mountain Fighting Continues, with Heavy Losses.

ROME, Nov. 24.—Powerful thrusts which were carried out yesterday by the Austro-Germans, after heavy artillery preparation, on the Italian mountain front from the Asiago Plateau to the Brenta River all failed, the Italian War Office announced today.

The text of the statement reads:

On the mountain front from the Asiago Plateau to the Brenta powerful thrusts, which the enemy stubbornly carried out after heavy artillery preparation, all failed.

On the plains enemy groups attempting to cross the Piave River in boats were thrown into the water by cannon shots.

Italian Attacks Fail, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Nov. 24, (via London.)—Italian attacks against the Austro-German positions west of the Brenta River and between the Brenta and Piave Rivers yesterday failed, the German War Office announced this afternoon.

The text of the statement follows:

West of the Brenta and between the Brenta and the Piave Italian attacks failed.

The supplementary report issued tonight says:

From Italy and the eastern war theatre no events of importance were reported.

Defenders Contest Every Foot.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 24, (Associated Press.)—Heavy fighting continued throughout last night on both sides of the Brenta River, with the result indecisive. Between the Brenta and Piave Rivers the Italians are contesting every foot of ground.

The enemy is attempting to come down the Brenta Valley on both banks of the river, in an effort to reach Bassano and the open plain. On the east bank the Fourth Army drove back two attacks in force. On the west bank the First Army took the initiative in a dashing attack to regain the lost position at the upper end of the Brenta Valley. The enemy's resistance was of a determined nature.

West of the Brenta the territory is now fairly held by the defenders, and the main enemy pressure is concentrated between the Brenta and the Piave, where the Italians are making a splendid resistance. The fighting has been desperate, and the losses are heavy.

Italians Retake Monte Tomba.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 23 (Delayed) (Associated Press).—The battle of the mountains is raging with unexampled violence. The Italians again hold the Monte Tomba and Monte Pertica positions, which they lost last night. The losses have been very great, but the enemy's far exceed those of the Italians.

On the outcome of the mountain battle depends the result of the enemy's greatest effort to break through the Italian lines to the Venetian plain. The recapture of the Italian positions on Monte Tomba was accomplished by a succession of brilliant charges which dyed the snows red and left the ground plied with enemy dead. Monte Pertica was lost and won four times, the enemy finally being thrown back.

The battle, which had been gradually gathering force in the last few days broke in full fury early yesterday and raged throughout the day, the night and today. The first blow was struck at Monte Pertica, where dense masses of enemy infantry were hurled against the Italian line. The fighting was extremely violent. Pertica was lost, then retaken, then lost again and then retaken again in such a whirlwind of enthusiasm as seldom has been seen before.

Two Teuton Divisions Engaged.

But the enemy's greatest blow was aimed at the strategic key of Monte Tomba and Monte Monfenera. Here the full force of two divisions, one German, the other Austrian, was hurled in a furious attack on the Italian right wing

CAMBRAI FIGHTING HEAVY

TERRIFIC BATTLE IN WOOD

LOSE HEIGHTS A MOMENT

But Afterward Retake Them—Germans Still Cling to Adjoining Bourlon Town.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—All day long today heavy fighting has been proceeding in and about Bourlon Wood, three and a half miles west of Cambrai, and later today the British troops were holding the high ground there after beating off several intense German counterattacks.

Both the wood and the town of Bourlon, lying to the northwest, contain elevations which are well-nigh vital to the defense of Cambrai. Some of the high points in the wood were carried by Byng's soldiers yesterday against heavy resistance. The Germans still hold the town, and are also clinging tenaciously to Fontaine Notre Dame, a little to the eastward.

The official report tonight of the results of today's operations says:

Fierce fighting has taken place during the day in the neighborhood of Bourlon Wood, where the enemy made several determined attempts, with fresh troops to regain possession of the high ground.

This morning a strong hostile attack compelled our troops to give ground slightly in this area. Later in the day our troops counterattacked and re-established our former line.

On the extreme right of the Southern battle front we have improved our positions.

On the Ypres battle front the hostile artillery has again been active in the Passchendaele sector.

The day report of the War Office says:

Operations were successfully carried out by us yesterday west of Cambrai. After severe fighting, in which the Germans offered stubborn resistance, our troops stormed the important and dominating high ground about Bourlon Wood. To the east of Bourlon Wood some progress was made in the neighborhood of Fontaine Notre Dame.

West of the wood our troops made further progress along the Hindenburg line astride the Canal du Nord, in the vicinity of Moeuvres.

Further west, between Moeuvres and Queant, the London Scottish Regiment captured an important spur, giving observation over the Hindenburg line to the west and north.

In the vicinity of Bullecourt our troops gained further ground during the night, capturing a hostile strong point with a number of prisoners.

The number of prisoners captured in yesterday's attack has not yet been ascertained.

Since the beginning of the operations on Nov. 20 it is known that more than 100 guns have been taken by us, including several heavy guns of calibres up to 8 inches.

Germans Make Desperate Efforts.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 24, (Associated Press.)—The fighting yesterday at Bourlon Wood and around Fontaine was of a most desperate nature. The forest comprises 600 acres, and, while the ground is dry, it is covered with a heavy undergrowth, making an advance up the slopes difficult. The British troops yesterday morning were holding a line on the low ground about the southern fringe of the wood, and from these positions it was necessary to charge up the slopes in the face of a tremendous concentration of machine guns.

The infantry, co-operating with the tanks, pushed forward in the morning and hard fighting ensued immediately. At noon the Germans began putting a heavy artillery and machine-gun barrage along the roads to the south of the wood, rendering communication with the advancing troops more difficult.

Hand-to-hand fighting with bayonets began almost as soon as the British entered the forest, but by 1 o'clock in the afternoon they had battled forward half way through the wood. Two hours later the infantry were occupying a line through the centre of the wood and to the northwest of Fontaine.

The hand-to-hand combat continued with great fierceness throughout the afternoon, the assaulting troops gradually forcing the Germans back foot by foot toward the northern edge of the forest. The enemy still retained his hold on the village, which was strongly fortified with rapid firers.

Late in the afternoon the Germans delivered a determined counterattack from the north in an attempt to oust the British, but the latter held firm and drove the Germans back.

In the meantime a fierce conflict was proceeding near Fontaine also. The Germans were defending this place with rifles and machine guns, which they fired from the roofs and windows of the houses.

About 3:30 in the afternoon tanks were reported to have forced an entrance and the place was said to be in flames. The Germans were able to maintain themselves in the village, however, and were still there at the latest reports.

Two counterattacks in the neighborhood of Cantaing were met and smashed yesterday afternoon. The British made a slight advance in this region during the day.

The British yesterday advanced their line still further to the west of Moeuvres, and there were meager reports indicating that this place was very closely invested.

Many more German guns have been found among the material captured, the number being estimated at about 100.

Prisoners were still coming back this morning. The correspondent passed two squadrons of mud-smeared Germans near the British front, who were being brought back to the cages.

Berlin Reports Successes.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—British attacks on the Cambrai front in France yesterday were repulsed in front of Bourlon, Fontaine, and La Folie Wood, it was announced today by the War Office. The statement adds that thirty British tanks lie shot to pieces before Fontaine. The bulletin reads:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: There has been increased artillery activity in Flanders. Waves of fire of great violence alternated with less vigorous destructive fire between the railways leading from Boesinghe to Staden and from Ypres to Roulers.

Southwest of Cambrai the English again sought a decision. A sharp firing duel heralded a battle on the front from Queant to Banteux. A strong attack on Inchy collapsed in front of that village. Moeuvres was stubbornly defended by desperate fighting against many assaults.

The thrusts directed against Bourlon, Fontaine, and La Folie were of especial force. A wave of tanks in close formation was followed by deeply echeloned infantry. Their force broke down against the heroism of our troops and as the result of the destructive effect of our artillery.

The enemy, who was slowly gaining ground on Bourlon at the price of heavy sacrifices, was met by an attacking counterthrust of our tried troops. They again ejected him from the village and from Bourlon Wood. The same troops who, on the previous day, proved their magnificent attacking spirit in storming the village, fought in defense of it with equal firmness and bravery.

Strong firing also continued in the course of the night in some fighting sectors. The effect of our artillery prevented night attacks against Rumilly and southwest of Masnières.

The supplementary statement, issued this evening, says:

British attacks against the villages of Inchy, Moeuvres, and Banteux failed.

In Flanders there was a strong artillery duel from Houltuist Wood to Becelaere.

NEVER DREAMED OF ATTACK.

British on the Defensive, Wrote a German Officer.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Friday, Nov. 23, (Associated Press.)—Further evidence of the German unpreparedness for an offensive in the Cambrai sector was obtained today in the capture of an order drawn up by a German battalion commander the day before the attack. It was his summary of events for a week, and he drew this conclusion:

"The attitude of the enemy clearly is one of defensive."

This commander was stationed in the forward area, and it is apparent that he did not know what was going on. It is also evident that the higher command had no information, or it would have informed him.

The Germans have called upon every possible source to get troops to withstand the British attack. By raking many places in their line they apparently were able to the first forty-eight hours of fighting to bring literally two new divisions, and some five odd battalions. Today another division was brought up from the Aisne front, and the 119th Division from Flanders.

Owing to the British artillery work there is little doubt that the Germans will be forced to abandon Cambrai as a railhead for bringing up troops.

HEAVY FIRING NEAR VERDUN.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The announcement from the War Office tonight reads.

On the right bank of the Meuse the artillery action became very intense during the afternoon in the region of Beaumont and Bezonvaux.

The day report says:

During the night the enemy undertook several raids, especially in the region of Coucy and in the Argonne. He gained no success and suffered losses.

In the Champagne we took prisoners in a raid east of Auberive.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

Dunkirk was bombarded by airplanes last night. There were no victims and the damage was insignificant.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The War Office bulletin today includes this statement about activities against the French:

Army Group of the German Crown Prince.—At many points on this front there was increased French activity.

DOWNED 1,030 AIRPLANES.

French Count 517 Certainly Destroyed and 513 Probably.

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 24, (Associated Press.)—The records of French aviators, including the members of the Lafayette Escadrille, for ten months ended Oct. 31, show that they destroyed 120 German airplanes over the French lines, and 397 over the German lines, whose destruction has been fully confirmed.

There were 513 others over the German lines which probably were destroyed, but confirmation of the fact was not obtainable. This makes a grand total of 1,030.

Twenty-two German captive balloons also were destroyed.

HELD CAPTIVE BY GERMANS?

New Hampshire Girl Writes of "Indignities" Suffered.

AYER, Mass., Nov. 24.—Indignities inflicted upon a 19-year-old American girl in Germany are described in a letter given out by the authorities at Camp Devens tonight. The letter was written to her brother, a private in the National Army, who turned the communication over to his superior officers with a request that something be done to obtain his sister's release.

The man is of German descent and came from New Hampshire. Before the outbreak of the war his mother went to Germany to visit her parents and has remained there. Six months ago, he says, his sister received an official appearing document from Germany saying that her mother was ill and that she should go to see her. The girl's letter said:

"When I arrived here, I found that the whole report of her illness was a hoax. I was taken by the military officials and am now confined at a farm, where there are hundreds of other girls and women. This is only one of lots of such places. * * * I am so unhappy. Even the best classes of young girls and women are confined here, and you can well imagine how they feel.

"Officers and men who won glory in battle spend a month or more furlough here, and we are subjected to all sorts of indignities. I am so unhappy that several times I have almost made up my mind to kill myself."

The message was written on a piece of a paper bag. When the private was told that nothing could be done to help his sister, he applied for a transfer to the next unit, sailing for the battlefront.

GERMANS NAPPING AT BULLECOURT

Deceived by Frequent Smoke Clouds, They Fell Easy Victims to Irish Dash.

TUNNEL TRENCH A WONDER

A Thousand Men Were Massed to Defend That Short Portion of Hindenburg Line.

By PHILIP GIBBS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Friday, Nov. 23.—Three tanks and cavalry co-operated in the attack on Graincourt on Wednesday, and tanks were a most powerful aid and cruised round and through the village, where they put out nests of machine guns. The cavalry then went on into Anneux, but the first patrol had to retire because of fierce machine gun fire that swept down the streets, and it had to be attacked and taken again.

Below Graincourt Church West Riding troops found some great catacombs elaborately fitted up as a battalion headquarters and supplied with electric light by the attentions of two German electricians, who remained some time in the British employ after their capture.

In Anneux we captured two 8-inch howitzers and in that neighborhood a battery of 5.9s.

The garrison of these two villages belonged mostly to the 107th Division, lately from Russia, which were sent up in support of the Twentieth Landwehr, who were elderly men and not great fighters, but the West Riding troops captured prisoners from six German divisions on their march forward.

Behind a Green Canvas Screen.

On Wednesday they pushed up to northwest of Bourlon Wood and saw nothing of the enemy in spite of a machine-gun fire that poured down the glade. They saw nothing of him until they were surprised to see faces coming up from the ground not far away from them. They were the faces of German soldiers looking over concrete trenches, artfully camouflaged with green canvas along the edge of the wood.

A German airplane, one of the rare birds of this battle from the enemy's side, came over, flew low and shot at the Yorkshire men with machine gun fire and rifle fire. Ahead of them the position was too bad to hold with their strength at the time, and they withdrew a little until yesterday, when they attacked again behind a line of tanks, routing out a number of machine guns in the southern end of the wood. This wood was held by the 214th German Division, who suffered heavily.

Altogether the West Riding men took over a thousand prisoners and killed many of the enemy, so that they put out of action a number far in excess of their own losses.

I have already told how Highlanders south of the Yorkshire men captured Flesquières Ridge and fought very hard for Flesquieres Village, which held out all the first day. On Wednesday the Jocks pushed on to the Village of Cantaing, where they found about 140 civilians, who received them with wild enthusiasm, so that the Highlanders, all muddy and wet, were kissed by old peasant women and young girls and by children held up to them. These people were weeping and laughing at the same time and for a little while seemed beside themselves with joy.

Yesterday they came trapesing down the roads, as I saw those of Masnières, with their perambulators and push-carts, with old grandmothers and little babies all bedraggled and mud-splashed, soaked to the skin in the heavy rain, but happy and with shining eyes because of that great, strange gift of liberty which has come to them again.

Battle for "Great Tunnel."

While the main attack was taking place opposite the defense lines of Cambrai a very remarkable battle was being fought by Irish battalions of the south and west along the Hindenburg line to the west of Bullecourt and by English troops along a curved trench beyond Bullecourt itself.

The great tunnel trench of this sector of the Hindenburg line had been attacked before in the Summer of this year without success, and the enemy was very strong then in his 2,000 yards of tunnel, which, as was known, was elaborately mined and charged so that it could be blown up if ever the British broke into it.

For many weeks past the British field guns had been cutting wire and distressing the enemy by putting up smoke barrages and sending over gas clouds. He was kept in constant fear of an attack, but never knew when it would happen. He held it in great numbers, and a thousand men were massed in the tunnel and the thousand yards of support trench which he had begun to dig behind—unusual strength for this length of front.

On the morning of the battle smoke candles were lit all along the line and to left and right of the Irish other demonstrations were made. Then the Irish went away, all very keen and confident and glad to fight in this country and with a chance of surprise, rather than in Flanders, where they had had such a hard time.

Some expert tunneling officers and miners were among the first to go into the Hindenburg tunnel trench in order to cut the leads and prevent the blowing up of mines. It was great peril and frightful anxiety, on which the lives of many men were at stake, but luck was with the Irish that morning. A happy discovery, made at a most fortunate moment, showed all the workings of the mines.

In the support trench some of the enemy fought hard, and even in the short distance which the Irish had to go, (a few hundred yards at most,) they were caught by machine-gun fire and did not escape altogether lightly. But the enemy's losses were very heavy.

The attack by English troops on the Bovis trench, north of Bullecourt, was also successful and inflicted severe losses on the enemy. The bulletin says that "on this part of the front we were unable to advance beyond the third line of trenches." The Irish were never meant to go further at the moment than they did, but this taking of the tunnel trench was a sensational exploit and of great military value. To the enemy it is a heavy blow.

The 240th German Division were the troops who suffered so much from the Irish attack, and they were strong fellows, although pale after their long life in the darkness of their tunnel, where they were caught like rats.

BAKHMETEFF STAYS; DISOWNS BOLSHEVIKI

Russian Envoy's Status Tacitly Approved by Lansing—Three of His Staff Quit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Boris Bakhmeteff, the Russian Ambassador, today, in a conference with Secretary of State Lansing, officially repudiated the Bolsheviki régime in Petrograd. He presented to Mr. Lansing an official statement embracing the repudiation based upon the ground that the Bolsheviki are not loyal to the true interests of Russia.

Ambassador Bakhmeteff wanted to know from Mr. Lansing what the attitude of the Administration would be toward the Bolsheviki. Mr. Lansing gave him to understand that the Government would not deal with the Bolsheviki, but would have its transactions with Russia through the Ambassador alone.

The Ambassador informed Mr. Lansing that for his own part he would continue to discharge the functions of his office without regard for the Bolsheviki, unless the Temporary Government appointed some one else to represent it at Washington.

While there is no official statement forthcoming, it is known that the attitude of the State Department toward the Bolsheviki is simply that it takes cognizance of Russia's accredited representative in Washington. The Administration does not recognize the Bolsheviki, but does recognize the Ambassador.

Several of the Russian Embassy staff, it was stated at the embassy today, had resigned, and the First Secretary, Jean Soukine, has asked admittance into the United States Army. Mr. Soukine came to this city with the special Russian mission, which afterward composed the greater part of the permanent embassy personnel, the head of the mission being made Ambassador. Mr Soukine said today that he did not desire to remain inactive in the war, and that as the opportunity for serving his country in the war had been removed, he wished to offer his services to America.

Mr. Soukine's request has the indorsement of Ambassador Bakhmeteff, who will ask Secretary of War Baker to favor it. Mr. Soukine was Lieutenant of a Russian regiment. He has been in the diplomatic service seven years, and during his stay in Washington has been the chief support of Ambassador Bakhmeteff. He vowed several months ago that, should the Bolsheviki attain power in Russia, he would resign from the Russian diplomatic service.

McAdoo's Son-in-Law Quits.

Ferdinand de Mohrenschidt, the Second Secretary of the Embassy, who married Miss Nona McAdoo, Secretary McAdoo's daughter, last May, also has offered his services to the American Government for the war against Germany. C. Onou, counselor, also has resigned.

The letter of the Ambassador to Mr. Lansing follows:

"My Dear Mr. Secretary:

"In connection with the events which are taking place at present in Russia I have considered it imperative to define clearly the attitude which the embassy has adopted with regard to further activities.

"From the very outset of the revolt in Petrograd the embassy has considered a 'Bolsheviki Government' as anti-national and not representative of the true will of the Russian people. The embassy has, therefore, refused to accept the authority and has not entered into any contact with the group at present in power in Petrograd. In the future I will continue in not recognizing a 'Bolsheviki' or any similar Government which would break loyalty to Russia's allies and lead the country to a non-participation in the war.

"However disorganizing and dangerous for my country and the common allied cause might be the passing rule of the 'Bolsheviki,' I have not declined for a moment the firm attitude of faith and conviction that even open steps undertaken by the Bolsheviki for the withdrawal of Russia from the war cannot prejudice the true spirit of the Russian people and of the real decisions which the people will adopt when freed from the temporary rule of violence which is endeavoring actually to bring forth irreparable action.

"A deep and active opposition of all sound and constructive elements of Russia is bound to arise, revealing in positive action the true spirit of the loyal and national Russia.

"However, it is evident that until conditions change, the Russian Embassy cannot exercise in full measure the most essential of its duties and activities, which are based on active war cooperation with the United States Government and the Allies. I have authorized, therefore, members of the embassy to follow their natural feeling in their desire to find other grounds for their activities.

Envoy's Duty to Remain.

"As to myself, I consider it my duty to remain at my post, having to hold firmly the dignity of national and loyal Russia, and to maintain the responsibility of all engagements and commitments of the legal Government of Russia which have been intrusted to me. I will continue to carry such duties unless another legal representative, recognized as such by the United States Government, would take charge of the representation of Russia after a formal acceptance of the whole of its functions, duties and liabilities.

"In the meantime, defending the symbol of a national representation of Russia, I will carry on the current affairs pertaining to the manifold matters in which the Russian Government has contracted tight bonds in the process of war co-operation with the Government of the United States and different institutions of this country. I will endeavor, as well, to render all possible protection to the interests of the citizens of Russia in this country and will give support to all activities of individuals and institutions in Russia whose endeavors are directed to frustrate the rule of anti-national elements and contribute to the revelation of the true spirit of the country.

"A staff of assistants necessary for the fulfillment of this task will remain at the Embassy and other Russian institutions in the United States, performing the heavy patriotic duty and contributing through their devotion to the endeavors which are actually made in Russia by different departments and institutions, which, not recognizing the 'Bolsheviki Government,' apply all efforts to oppose its destructive activities by maintaining to the utmost the war mechanism and preventing the dangerous disrupture of all elements of the State.

"Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

"BORIS BAKHMETEFF."

There was no authoritative statement on the situation forthcoming from the State Department after the receipt of Ambassador Bakhmeteff's note, but from previous intimations, dropped by officials since the overthrow of Kerensky, it became known that the American Government would ignore the pretensions of the Maximalists.

No Authority for Removal.

The régime in Petrograd, now assuming to be the National Government, did not appoint Mr. Bakhmeteff to the Washington post. Until recognized by the United States the Bolsheviki would not have the authority to remove him, it was explained tonight, unless he himself subordinated himself to them.

It was considered a certainty here tonight that not only the United States but all the allied powers would refuse to recognize the Bolsheviki Government. The belief is also held that the Russian diplomatic representatives in allied countries will follow the example set by the Russian Ambassador here. It is known that views have been exchanged between the Russian embassies and legations in various countries, and it has been indicated that an agreement was reached concerning the course they would individually follow.

The declaration by the Ambassador to Mr. Lansing that he had refused to recognize the Maximalist rule was accepted as indicating that the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, Leon Trotzky, had attempted to give him instructions. His action and Secretary Lansing's tacit approval place America foremost among the nations which may refuse to have any intercourse with the Bolsheviki Government.

Confidence in the ability of the sane and intelligent elements in Russia to reconstruct a government that will raise Russia again to her position among the Allies has not been abandoned here. Closest observers of the situation stated today that there had been an unmistakable tendency toward the extreme of radicalism ever since the establishment of the democratic Government. The Duma led the revolution, and it soon was displaced by the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, the Government of Premier Lvoff giving place to the more radical one of Premier Kerensky. The latter finally succumbed to the influence of the International Socialists, and now the situation borders upon anarchy.

It is thought certain that measures have been considered by the Entente Powers for assisting the moderate and conservative elements in Russia to regain the ascendency. The two measures most spoken of here are economic and military. The first would result in the preventing of any supplies from reaching Russia, except such as should be intended for and delivered into the hands of the enemies of the Bolsheviki.

Military Action in Doubt.

There is no need, it is said, to incite revolution against the Maximalists, as civil war already exists, and will continue until orderly government has been restored, and the Maximalists are driven from power. The Allies, including Japan, would be able to prevent any commodities from reaching Russia, except through Scandinavia and the Central Empires. Whether outside military action against Russia shall result, it is thought, will depend entirely upon the conduct of the country during the remainder of the Bolsnevik rule.

Diplomats here are not yet ready to believe that the Bolsheviki will be able to effect a separate peace with Russia's enemies, but there is no longer any doubt that this is one of the objects of the Bolsheviki. If the Russian armies retire from the front and consent to demobilization, the country thus violating the treaty of London, which binds it together with all the Allies not to conclude a separate peace. Russia will thus forfeit its rights and considerations, and probably, according to some authorities, draw upon herself consequences of a serious character.

It has not yet been decided, it is understood, whether the allied countries shall withdraw their diplomatic representatives from Petrograd, this probably depending on the course of events in the next few days.

The impression was gained tonight that the State Department would reply favorably to Ambassador Bakhmeteff's communication, and, while not committing the United States to assist him in his efforts to aid the elements hostile to the Maximalists, would not place any obstacles in the way of such aid.

The State Department was advised by telegraph from Sweden today that the Bolsheviki appear now to be in entire control of the Russian telegraph systems, as they have changed the person in control of the offices in Sweden. The official giving this information asserted that this news was "rather unsatisfactory," reflecting the official attitude of the Government toward the Bolsheviki regime.

Other advices received by the department from Sweden were cryptic, stating that employes or officials of the Finnish Senate had struck against the Socialistic Senate. Officials did not know what the message meant, unless it related to the recent declaration of the Socialists that they would organize a Socialistic Parliament. The dispatch added that it was proposed to have a triumvirate in Finland, and that the Socialists look upon this as a coup d'état.

Telegraphs Russian Envoy.

The Russkoye Slovo, a Russian daily newspaper published in this city, has sent the following telegram to the Russian Ambassador at Washington in connection with his note delivered to Secretary Lansing:

"Boris Bakhmetieff, Russian Ambassador at Washington:

"In the moment of grave dangers and difficulties which beset our native land, the eyes of the Russians in America have been turned toward you, Citizen Ambassador, as the representative in this Republic of the sovereign Russian people.

"The Russians in the United States have been awaiting your authoritative and guiding words that would clarify the events in Russia.

"In your note, addressed the Government of the United States, we hear this long-awaited word, which determines your attitude toward the group of violators of the national will of the Russian people. The Russkoye Slovo reads with admiration your fearless and deeply patriotic stand, which will dispel in this Republic the disgrace of the Russian people.

"We are certain that every Russian in America is with you, the Ambassador and representative of the Russian people, and that together with you they are fully confident that the days of nightmare will soon pass away, become forgotten, and Russia will again assume her glorious place among the nations of the earth.

"Long live free, democratic Russia!

BAR MAXIMALIST ENVOYS.

Germans Want Constitutional Government to Seek Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A Petrograd dispatch from the semi-official news agency says the Mayor of Petrograd has announced that the Germans have declined to receive the Parliamentary representatives sent by order of the Maximalist Commissaries, declaring that peace negotiations could only be conducted with the constitutional Government of Russia.

One of the preliminary conditions for entering upon pourparlers imposed by the Germans is the withdrawal of Russian troops for a distance of 100 kilometers (62 miles) while the Germans retain their present positions.

FIRED INTO BRUSILOFF HOME.

Shell Exploded, Wounding General, After Soldiers Broke In.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 23.—The wound sustained by General Brusiloff, former Russian Commander in Chief, at Moscow recently was the result of a shell exploding in the corridor of his house. Two fragments entered the General's leg below the knee, breaking the bone. It is now believed that amputation can be averted.

Before the General was wounded soldiers had forced an entrance to his house and demanded that they be allowed to search the dwelling, declaring that some one was firing from it. The men left, apparently convinced by General Brusiloff of their error.

Shortly afterward a shell struck the house and wounded the General. As General Brusiloff was being taken to the hospital crowds of soldiers, students, and women surrounded his litter, kissed his hand and evinced their sympathy in other ways.

SECESSION BY THE CAUCASUS.

Separation from Russia Declared and Parliament Formed.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 23.—The Caucasus has declared its separation from Russia and formed a Parliament of forty Deputies, members of the Socialist parties, including one Bolsheviki, according to report brought by M. Tseretelli, former Minister in the Kerensky Cabinet, on his return to Petrograd.

The body of troops recently reported at Luga, southwest of Petrograd, proved to be a detachment on its way to the front, which had no intention of proceeding to Petrograd.

BEST WEEK OF THE WAR, SAYS NORTHCLIFFE

Rejoices Over Successes Scored by Gen. Byng, Col. House, and Premier Lloyd George.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Viscount Northcliffe, who was head of the British Mission to the United States for the coordination of war work, tonight gave The Associated Press the following statement on the war situation:

"This has been distinctly the best week of the war. I refer not only to General Byng's success, but to that of Colonel House and Premier Lloyd George, who have been 'buttoning things up,' to use an expression of the Colonel's.

"The days of the waste of life and treasure caused by the Allies' mutual ignorance of one another's plans are nearly over. American soldiers, sailors, and business men, and their British colleagues have been working overtime.

"It would not be wise to talk of details, but, as I never have been backward in criticising inefficiency, I should be lacking in justice if I did not speak of the high efficiency of this week's conference. There was no 'glorious British constitution and Fourth of July' hot air about the proceedings. It was realized that time is the most valuable asset of war. There was very little banqueting, and there were no parades, yet I venture to say that the greatest move toward victory yet made in any theatre of the war was effected in London this week.

"The prospects for the Paris conference are fine. The war is at last becoming what it always should have been—a close business partnership of the Allies."

AIR POST TO BROTHER OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE

Baron Rothermere Accepts the Office Which His Older Brother Declined.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Baron Rothermere, chief proprietor of The Daily Record and Mail of Glasgow and The Leeds Mercury, has accepted the post of Air Minister in the British Cabinet, according to The Pall Mall Gazette.

Lord Rothermere succeeds Lord Cowdray, who resigned a few days ago when Lord Northcliffe, in a letter to the Prime Minister declining the portfolio of Air Ministry, first made known the fact that it had been offered it him.

Lord Rothermere is a younger brother of Lord Northcliffe. He was born in 1868 and christened Harold Sidney Harmsworth. He was created a peer in 1914 with the title Baron Rothermere of Hemsted. He endowed the King Edward VII. Chair of English Literature at Cambridge University, and is one of the most prominent promoters of the Union Jack Club.

could be reinforced, she gave a final lurch and sank like a plummet, breaking the line.

Submarine's Crew Captured.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Two American destroyers recently destroyed a German submarine in the war zone, according to a statement given out by the Navy Department today. In addition to the news conveyed in Secretary's Daniels's official announcement, it was learned that the Germans themselves sank their craft, after a depth bomb had disabled it, by opening the seacocks.

The U-boat crew stood on deck with their hands raised in surrender while the vessel was going down. All the Germans were taken prisoner, but one of them was drowned when being transferred to a destroyer and another died. The latter was buried with military honors.

According to a report in naval circles approximately forty men, including five officers, were taken off the submarine. If this were true, it was pointed out, the vessel undoubtedly was one of the largest of the cruiser type known authentically to be operated by the Germans.

Secretary Daniels's formal statement made no mention of prisoners or the reason for the boat sinking. When the details had leaked out at the department later, the Secretary would neither confirm nor deny them, saying he had issued the statement in agreement with the British Admiralty, and could not add to it.

Announcement by Daniels.

The statement was as follows:

Dispatches received from Admiral Sims state that a German U-boat has been accounted for by American destroyers operating in European waters. While on patrol duty a destroyer sighted a periscope 400 yards off. Immediately ringing full speed ahead, the commanding officer headed his craft to pass a few yards ahead of the submarine. As the destroyer passed over the U-boat's course a depth charge was dropped. This evidently caused damage to the U-boat, which shortly afterward broached [came to the surface] about 500 yards away.

Fire was immediately opened on the submarine by two of our destroyers, which circled about their target.

The submarine did not return the fire and was evidently disabled. One of the destroyers got a line to her, intending to tow her, but the boat soon sank.

Although the British policy is to publish nothing in such cases, an agreement was reached between the Navy Department and the British Admiralty to give out certain facts which Secretary Daniels announced. Officers of both the War and Navy Departments, however, were too much elated over the news to keep it quiet. First, the report spread that some prisoners had been taken, and before the day was over the story of just what happened was out. It is now known that the submarine rose because her steering gear was put out of commission by the explosion.

What disposition will be made of the prisoners is not known, as Secretary Daniels declined to discussed that point. It is believed that they will be interned in England, where this Government will maintain a prison camp.

This is the first official announcement of the sinking of a German submarine by American forces. While there have been other sinkings, the Navy Department has not made them public. The purpose in withholding the news is to create anxiety in the minds of the enemy and to encourage the spirit of mutiny among the German crews.

24 LOST ON FRENCH VESSEL.

The Maine Was Sunk by a U-Boat Eight Miles from Dieppe.

PARIS, Nov. 24.— News was received today confirming reports that the freight steamer Maine had been sunk on Wednesday eight miles from Dieppe. All of the twenty-five officers and men on board were lost with the exception of one sailor. The entire crew comprised seamen from Dieppe.

CAILLAUX OPENLY ACCUSED.

M. Herve Prints Charges Against the Former Premier.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Under the bold caption, "I Accuse M. Caillaux," Gustave Hervé in La Victoire charges the former Premier with being the centre of the whole campaign for a dishonorable, ruinous peace.

M. Hervé charges Caillaux with having consorted during his stay in Italy with all the notorious "defeatists" and neutralists, his assertions to the contrary notwithstanding; with having not merely a social acquaintance with Bolo Pacha, but with having been his devoted friend and indefatigable protector; with having been the evil genius of Almereyda, the editor of the Bonnet Rouge, who died in prison while under charges, guiding and encouraging him in his "defeatist" attitude and drawing him on to his doom. M. Hervé concludes:

"You said, Sir, that when you found the man who brought against you something besides insinuations and twaddling gossip, who dared accuse you outright, you would prosecute him at the assizes as a slanderer; I am your man, Sir; prosecute me. I will produce my proofs and witnesses before a jury."

As a result of the publication M. Caillaux today began proceedings against M. Hervé.

Minnesota Denies Charter to Factions Who Opposed Liberty Loan.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 24.—Application for a charter for a proposed bank at Hutchinson will be denied on the ground that the project was backed by "pro-German propaganda" and organized when certain local factions became displeased with existing banks because they promoted the Liberty loan."

This denial, announced today by F. K. Pearson, superintendent of State banks, was in compliance with a resolution of the Public Safety Commission.

The loyalty of backers of thirty other proposed banks in the State is being investigated.

ALWAYS SHIFTING GENERALS

L'Homme Libre Attributes the Impairing of Armies' Morale to This Cause.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 23, (Delayed.)—An article entitled "Cause and Effects of Italian Disasters" leads Premier Clemenceau's paper, L'Homme Libre, today. It is signed "XXX." The writer says:

"Without touching the question of treason—always an easy, but often short-sighted, explanation of disaster—let us consider the military aspect of the Italian situation. To begin with, the principal error of the Italian high command—alone sufficient to bring about the catastrophe—was the faulty disposition of its armies. The Second Army, after crossing the Isonzo, was drawn up facing northward on the high mountains of Mzli, Monte Nero, and Vrich, without having reached the crests, which were still in possession of the enemy. The Third Army, on the other hand, had conquered the crests and held Cucco, Monte Santo, and Vodice. It faced eastward and had advanced across the Bainsizza Plateau toward Laibach. But between these two armies the Austrians still held a whole sector which formed from Tolmino to Santa Lucia a kind of outpost separating the Italian forces.

"Military critics had already drawn attention to the danger of this situation and pointed out that the strategic arrangements of both Italian armies might be thrown into confusion by the enemy if the latter, holding the intermediate high ground, should decide to attack on both sides with sufficient forces. That is precisely what happened when the Germans were able to transfer part of their troops from Russia to the Italian Alps.

Errors Due to Blind Optimism.

"The second error: Behind these armies, drawn up in so perilous a position, there were at least reserves ready in case of a surprise. In May, 1916, in the course of the Austrian offensive in the Trentino, General Cadorna had profited by a moment of respite to constitute the Fifth Army a reserve. It was the intervention of this force at the critical moment that forced the enemy to retreat. For reasons that we are unable to understand, this Fifth Army was dissolved one fine day. Not that man-power was wanting; it was and still is plentiful in Italy. The reserves of man-power were numerous enough to furnish other armies as well. But the Italian Generalissimo has always seemed unwilling to keep them near the front. So, when need came, they could not intervene, and thus the rout of the Second Army, followed by the beating up and precipitate retreat of the Third, carried everything away.

"This error is connected with several others, all of which are to be explained by blind confidence in the solidity of the conquests made. Otherwise, what excuse is there for the mistake of massing all the main supply depôts at so short a distance from the front, between Isonzo and the Tagliamento? To take the case of wheat alone: More than 300,000 tons thus fell into the hands of the famished enemy.

"How, too, are we to excuse the complete lack of intrenchments, in view of a possible retreat, and the fact that not a single road of retreat was prepared, or a single bridge—beyond five old ones—thrown across the Tagliamento? The congestion produced almost from the outset by the enormous mass of men and material on the river banks, all trying to cross at the same moment, cost the Italian Army almost as dearly as the sudden loss of all its supply sources which had to be left to the enemy.

"Those who have visited the Isonzo front must have been surprised that, despite all errors, positions as strong as those of the Second Army before Plezzo and Tolmino gave way so easily. The fact is that even the best fortified positions are worth just what the men holding them are worth, and the men's value is in exact proportion to that of their leaders.

Generals Retired by Wholesale.

"Now, the state of mind of the Italian leaders was obvious to all who penetrated into their inner circles. Of all the armies in the war the Italians alone could boast that they had always kept the same commander since the beginning of the struggle. But this appearance of permanence at the top vanished as soon as one came to the ranks of his subordinates. As far as they were concerned, incoherence, change, and uncertainty were the invariable rule for each commander of a unit. In Italy retired Generals were to be counted by the hundreds. Down there they called them 'silurati,' (the torpedoed ones,) to indicate the suddenness with which they used to be smitten. Too often the reasons for their disgrace did not seem extremely serious, but the phraseology of their dismissal was always as cutting as a knife blade: 'You will immediately hand over the command to So-and-So, your successor;' and the successor was already on the spot to take it.

"This method may be excellent if it is not overdone and is applied wisely. That was not always the case, for a regrettable kind of oligarchy had gradually grown up around the Generalissimo. First-class leaders were often its victims. It would be difficult to find in Italy, outside this narrow Cortes, any one who would criticise Generals like Ragni, Guerrini, Lucrari, and Mambretti—and how many others—all mercilessly 'torpedoed,' but still popular in the army. General Capello, who was the first to enter Gorizia, had his command taken away a few days after his victory, and was reduced to a mere division commander and sent back to the rear as a subordinate to a colleague who had until then been subordinate to him.

"Capello came back into favor last Summer and led his troops to victory on the Bainsizza Plateau. But his success again proved fatal. Hardly had he given orders to his army, the Second, to consolidate the positions won when he was once more thrust aside in company with others. His successor, General Montuori, had barely taken over the command for a few days when the German attack broke upon him. Others as brave and capable as he, have realized in this war the truth of Napoleon's saying: 'You can't win if you haven't got your men in hand.' But there had not been time to make this contact between the men of the Second Army and their new leaders, and so, under the terrible shock of Oct. 29, that Second Army broke."

PLUMER TO COMMAND BRITISH FORCE IN ITALY

Credited with Strategy Which Won at Messines—Marshall to Succeed Maude.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—General Sir Herbert Plumer, commander of the Second Army Corps, which has been in the thick of the fighting in the Ypres battle, has been appointed commander of the British forces in Italy, it was officially announced today.

Lieut. Gen. Sir W. R. Marshall has been named to command the British forces in Mesopotamia, succeeding Major Gen. Frederick Stanley Maude, who died recently.

It is said to have been due to Sir Herbert Plumer's strategy that 1,000,000 pounds of high explosives were detonated in mines under Messines Ridge last June, which annihilated hitherto impregnable German positions and made possible the subsequent advances of the British along the Ypres-Menin and Ypres-Roulers roads without danger of being overwhelmed with the enemy's fire from the ridge.

His career, however, has not particularly identified him with engineering work, but the English press has constantly referred to him as Haig's side partner under whom and his predecessor he commanded the Second Army of the British expeditionary force in France. In the first year of the war he commanded the Fifth Army Corps, and for his services to both French and Belgians he was decorated respectively with the insignia of Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor by President Poincaré and with those of Grand Officer of the Star of Leopold by King Albert. He had already been knighted in 1906.

His military career began in 1876 when, at the age of 20, he entered the York and Lancaster Regiment. He was a Captain seven years later, and thenceforth his promotion was rapid, until he reached the full rank of General last year.

In the Sudan in 1884, South Africa in 1896, and again in the Boer War, 1901-02, he was several times mentioned in dispatches and decorated.

Lieut. Gen. Sir William Marshall, who succeeds the late Major Gen. Maude as commander of the Anglo-Indian army in Mesopotamia, has been in the war since the beginning, for the most part with his present command, first under Sir John Nixon and then under Sir Percy Lake and Maude. He served with distinction in India on the northwest frontier in 1897-98. In the Boer war he was twice wounded and received the Queen's medal with three clasps and the King's with two.

AUSTRIANS ACTIVE IN ALBANIA

They Attack Italian Lines, but Fail to Gain Any Ground.

ROME, Nov. 24.—The Austrians have renewed their attacks on the Italian lines in Southern Albania, but have met with a repulse at the defenders' hands, according to a War Office announcement made today. Some fighting in the Monastir district resulted in unchanged conditions at the conclusion of the operations. The official statement reads:

In Albania on Thursday night the enemy attacked our lines between the Voyusa and Osum Riverss. He was repulsed. A few local enemy advantages gained between Monastir and Frezlesca were nullified by our counterattacks."

MARCONI IS OPTIMISTIC.

"Confident That the March of the Enemy Will Be Definitely Stopped."

ROME, Nov. 23.—"The reorganization of the entire Italian Army is proceeding apace," said Senator William Marconi in an interview granted today to The Associated Press. "It make us confident that the onward march of the enemy will be definitely stopped."

Senator Marconi has just returned from a tour of the front from the mouth of the Piave to Monte Grappa, during which he inspected the wireless apparatus of the army.

"I saw the Duke of Aosta, General Diaz, General Badoglio, and other leading commanders," he continued. "All were filled with hope that the worst was over; that the revival of the morale of the soldiers, which was constantly more noticeable, might give unexpected results. I found everywhere that the spirit of the troops was very high. The men are desirous of taking revenge for the reverses suffered and are furious at the thought that any Italians were cheated into believing Austrian and German lies when the enemy announced the intention to lay down arms if the Italians did the same.

"The navy, co-operating with the army along the coast and in the lower section of the Piave, is gaining splendid successes, to which the British monitors are contributing. The Italian artillery is doing marvels, getting the last ounce possible out of the guns all along the Piave.

"I was told that the enemy had suffered very severe losses near Asiago, and also in the mountains between the Brenta and Piave Rivers. The general opinion in high quarters is that if the Italians can hold their line for four or five days longer the immediate danger will be over.

"What we desire ardently is the closest possible union and co-operation with America. I have been able already to appreciate the co-operation of the United States in this great war, but it would bring it home to the Italians more effectively if they knew that America also was at war with our nearest enemy, Austria."

LAUNCH FIRST OF FLEET.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—With the sliding of an 8,800-ton steel ship down the ways of a Pacific coast shipyard today the Shipping Board recorded the launching of the first of the merchant fleet it is building. Other accessions to the fleet will be launched in a steady program from now on, including three 26,400-ton steel ships and three 10,500-ton wooden ships during December.

The Shipping Board is clearing a right of way for its building program by requisitioning 1,500 railroad cars to move fir ship timbers from the West to eastern yards where the scarcity of that material is holding back activity in the building of the wooden craft.

A PACIFIC PORT, Nov. 24.—An 8,800-ton steel freighter, the first vessel built in its entirety for the United Sates Shipping Board, slid from the ways of a shipyard here today. The boat was named by the wife of the Governor of the State and bore the name of the city in which it was built. The vessel was launched exactly 78 days from the time its keel was laid.

in an effort to turn the wing and cut off the army from its line of communication along the Piave. Now came one of the bloodiest struggles of the war, which went on all last night and today with a steady succession of attack and counterattack. Brigades and regiments, their numbers diminished in the struggle, were re-formed and returned to the fight. In one section where there were thirty officers, twenty-seven were killed or wounded, but the remaining three fought the battle of the thirty.

Mountain batteries had been posted in mountain emplacements, and as the fight ebbed and flowed over these positions the Italians not only brought back the guns, but even the wheels and the limbers, their pride not permitting a vestige to fall into the hands of the enemy.

The final charge of the day came at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The enemy had struck his greatest blow earlier in the day, and the fierce attack lasted three-quarters of an hour. The whole field was swept by artillery fire, and the ground was strewn with dead. It was amid this welter of bodies and débris that the Italian lines were reformed, and from it they moved forward steadily and irresistibly until the disputed ground was retaken except at one point, where the struggle still goes on.

The First Army also is sustaining a heavy fight west of Brehta River, where the enemy rush has been repulsed by the splendid resistance of the Italians.

The references in these dispatches to the fearful havoc among regiments, brigades, and divisions should be interpreted with the knowledge that the Italian unit of organization is of such size that the reduction of an Italian regiment to 300 or 400 men means that upward of 2,000 have fallen. From an authoritative source this information is given in regard to the Italian units:

A battalion is 1,000 men in four companies. A regiment is 3,000 men of three battalions. A brigade is 6,000 men, or two regiments. A division is two or three brigades. An army corps is two or three divisions.

It is not denied here that there is a limit to human endurance in these circumstances, and that the Italian troops which are fighting with such heroic bravery may have to fall back to more secure positions; but the possibility of this is diminishing with every hour that the resistance continues. Reinforcements might yet save the day, but it should be understood that the Italians are fighting their battles singlehanded, and that the allied reinforcements are not yet represented anywhere on the fighting lines.

Three Main Battle Grounds.

The mountain battle, which is now nearing its highest stage, is one of three battles which are going on simultaneously with various degrees of intensity. These are, first, the battle of the Piave River, which is the extreme right of the Italian line; second, the battle of the Asiago Plateau, which is the extreme left, and third, the battle of Grappa Mountain, which is the centre.

It is through the centre that the enemy is throwing his full force. The Piave line has become so solid that some are led to believe that the enemy is not pushing things here any further, possibly planning to bring up his heavy guns beyond the Tagliamento to renew his efforts in the Spring. No less an authority than Napoleon regarded the Piave as good for only temporary purposes, and not as a line of resistance for permanent operations. If the same view were held valid now, both the eastern and northern Italian positions would ultimately have to be shifted greatly as the present operations develop.

The Second Italian Army, which was hurled back in the débâcle when the great offensive began just a month ago, has begun to redeem itself. Some of its units have been brought into the thick of the fighting at Grappa and have done splendid service.

AUSTRO-GERMAN RUSE FAILS.

Italians Give Short Shrift to Foes Caught Wearing Their Uniforms.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24. Austro-Germans who attempted to gain ground in the Italian mountain area by advancing in Italian uniforms were "summarily dealt with," in the words of a dispatch from Rome received here today. The cablegram, which lays stress upon the vigor of the Italian resistance in the sector in question, says:

"On the morning of the 22d the Austro-Germans attempted again to penetrate the narrow gorge of the Brenta, which opens near the village of Termine and continues in the direction of San Marino, where our positions prepared to prevent the advance of the invaders are located. At 7 o'clock, after a brief but extremely intense bombardment, several enemy battalions were thrust against our defensive system of San Marino between the extreme slopes of Col Caprile and Monte Spit.

"The troops were preceded by shock units, who obtained at first some success by reaching obstacles near our defenses. Detachments of our Alpini of Valtellina immediately delivered a furious counterattack and after a hand-to-hand engagement compelled the enemy to retire in disorder beyond Termine. Our soldiers captured many prisoners and several officers. Hundreds of Austrians were left on the field.

"It was discovered that some of the enemy soldiers wore Italian uniforms, which accounts for their initial gains. Those wearing Italian uniforms who fell into our hands were summarily dealt with.

"On the same morning superior enemy forces repeatedly attacked from various directions the northern slopes of Monte Grappa. In spite of the tremendous artillery fire which supported each attack of the enemy our soldiers offered a splendid resistance and at the proper moment counterattacked and dispersed the invaders, inflicting upon them very severe losses. However, in the direction of Monte Fontana Secca, after three sanguinary assaults the Austrians succeeded in reaching some elements of our defensive lines, but this fact does not change substantially the resistance of our positions.

"After the serious defeat sustained near Monte Grappa the invaders tried again in the evening to deliver an attack against Monfenera, but his efforts were broken up at the very start by the accurate fire of our artillery.

"The enemy is directing a constant rain of shells of all calibres against all the positions held by the Fourth Army Corps, without weakening the resistance of our soldiers.

"The First Army is effectively defending the Asiago plateau. The enemy is delivering attack after attack against these positions, regardless of appalling losses, but without obtaining the slightest strategical advantage.

WARN ROME OF AIR RAIDS.

Officials Post Directions for Action in Case of Attacks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 23, (Delayed.)—Excited and gesticulating groups were to be seen everywhere this morning. Pushing and elbowing in their eagerness to read the manifestoes posted up in every street, warning the population of the measures to be taken in case of enemy air raids. At the beginning of the war all the globes of the street lamps were painted dark blue, in order to dim the glare that usually hung over the city; but, as time went on and no air raids occurred, the dark blue glass, when broken, was replaced by white, and thus little by little all the streets returned to their former cheerfulness.

But with the Syndic's warning this morning the Romans are brought to a realization of the fact that the distance between Rome and the Piave—300 miles—does not guarantee them against attacks by air.

The Library of Mr. Huntington is easily the greatest private library in the world, and includes the collections formed by Mr. E. D. Church, Mr. F. R. Halsey, and Mr. Beverly Chew, the Ellesmere Collection, the Britwell Collection of Americana, the Devonshire Library, and important and generous purchases from the Robert Hoe, Huth and other great sales. Mr. Huntington has inevitably acquired duplicates of even the rarest items. When only three copies of "Tamerlane" were known, one copy was in the British Museum and two copies in Mr. Huntington's possession. It is very often difficult for Mr. Huntington to decide which copy of a book he shall keep, and in many instances in the opinion of many experts the best copy is sold.

Mr. Huntington's duplicates are sold absolutely without reserve to the highest bidder at public auction. It is an opportunity for the collector to secure volumes which may never again be offered at public or private sale. Catalogues will be mailed on application to The Anderson Galleries.

MISSION FOR WAR, HOUSE EMPHASIZES

Aims Not to be Discussed at Either Allied Conference or Council, He Says.

BOTH BODIES PERMANENT

Americans Entertained at Luncheon by French President—House Wants More Talks with Clemenceau.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Colonel E. M. House, head of the American mission to the inter-allied conference, speaking today of the conversation he had yesterday with Premier Clemenceau, said it was most satisfactory and comprehensive. Colonel House added that he hoped to continue his conversation with the French Premier at various times.

On being reminded that no announcement had been made here concerning American participation in the Supreme War Council, Colonel House said that President Wilson had directed him to represent the United States Government, with General Bliss as military adviser, and that Admiral Benson and other members of the American mission would take part in separate consultations with the corresponding representatives of the various Governments.

The Inter-Allied Conference, which is to meet Thursday, will be composed of the envoys of all the nations, large and small, that are in alliance against the Central Powers. This conference, which will last only a day or two, will be followed by the Supreme War Council, in which only France, Great Britain, Italy, and the United States will be represented. This latter body is a permanent one under the present arrangement, Colonel House said, and it will deal only with questions relating to military operations on the Western front, which now include the Italian front.

Premier Clemenceau will preside at the Inter-Allied Conference. Premier Costa and ex-minister Soares will attend for Portugal. Greece will be represented by Premier Venizelos, and Serbia by Premier Pachitch.

War aims, Colonel House said definitely, would not be discussed at either the interallied conference of the war council. He added that the American mission was here solely for the purpose of furthering the prosecution of the war and the co-ordination of resources.

A second permanent body, Colonel House declared, would be the inter-allied conference dealing with finance, shipping, munitions, and other economic and industrial aspects of the war. Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, is to be America's representative at this conference, the headquarters of which may be in London.

President Wilson's permanent representatives on the supreme war council, Colonel House said, had not yet been definitely determined upon except for the present meetings.

Admiral W. S. Benson, chief of naval operations, called yesterday on Commander Cone, head of the naval aviation service in France, and later Vice Admiral Wemyss of the British Admiralty called on Admiral Benson for a conference. Mr. Crosby conferred with Colonel Joseph E. Willard, the American Ambassador to Spain, regarding Spanish questions, and Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of the United States Food Administration and Vance McCormick, chairman of the War Trade Board, conferred with French, Italian and British representatives on questions relating to the blockade, particularly as it affects Switzerland.

President Poincaré entertained at luncheon today at the Elysée Palace Colonel House and the other members of the mission, William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador, and the embassy staff. Marshal Joffre, General Pétain, and ex-Premier Viviani were among the guests. Only informal conversations occurred.

The first public appearance in France of a member of the American mission was made last night at the annual banquet of the Anglo-American Press Association, which was attended by Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury. The banquet derived additional importance from the fact that Foreign Minister Pichon and Marine Minister Leygues made their first public appearances since taking office.

M. Pichon said he congratulated himself on being present at a reunion which coincided with the great British victory and the arrival of the American mission.

"The war will perhaps last a long time yet," he added, "but we shall win it, and we shall owe the victory in large part to Great Britain and America."

Mr. Crosby, speaking alternately in French and English, aroused the enthusiasm of the Frenchmen present by saying:

"Everything we have that you need shall be placed at your disposal. You must not forget, however, that 3,000 miles of ocean separates us. That is the only thing which prevents us from assuming our share of the burden as rapidly as we would like."

Colonel House has another appointment with Premier Clemenceau tomorrow.

Thomas Nelson Perkins of the Priority Board today conferred with James W. Colt, who recently arrived from Petrograd, and Sir John Egan Eagle-some in regard to metals, and then talked with the British and French representatives on the same subject. Mr. Perkins also called on Foreign Minister Pichon, and later had a conference with Louis Loucheur, French Minister of Munitions, and General Payeur, at the Ministry of Munitions.

Mr. Crosby was engaged with Lucien Klotz, French Minister of Finance, and Captain Andre Tardieu, High Commissioner to the United States, during the day on financial questions.

THREE MEETINGS OF VITAL IMPORT

Washington's Influence in Bringing About Unity of Control Is Likely to Be Large.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 24. — After Colonel House's talk with the newspapermen here those present carried away the impression that the plans for the conferences were still indefinite and would take shape only after what might be described as a town meeting of the Allies.

From two sources have come a strong initiative for reformed methods, namely, Lloyd George's action at Rapallo in setting up a Supreme War Council and President Wilson's advocacy of the principle of unity of control.

Lloyd George's action precipitated excitement and controversy in England. The Prime Minister emerged politically triumphant and free to proceed in perfecting the plans in which the Rapallo agreement was only the beginning.

My deduction from all I have heard is that the President's demand for unity expresses the broad principle in which the Allies are agreed and that the Supreme War Council scheme is but an initial and imperfect effort to put the doctrine of unity into practice. It is a matter of infinite difficulty in view of the diversity of interests and feeling among all the Allies, and yet absolutely necessary to arrive at a workable co-ordination.

According to the present plan there will be three conferences here. First there is the inter-allied conference, which at the outset and before the Italian disaster was expected to be of paramount importance. Apparently this meeting is now only a curtain raiser for the other two. It will be participated in by all the Allies, including the Balkan States. It will last one day, or perhaps two. There will probably be a general discussion covering political, military, and economic grounds.

Then will follow a meeting of the Supreme War Council, a body technically without authority, but, being composed of Prime Ministers as well as military advisers, will probably outline the broad war policy which will be followed by the military General Staffs and army heads.

The United States will be represented at this particular meeting by Colonel House and General Bliss, England by Premier Lloyd George and General Wilson, France by Premier Clemenceau and General Foch, and Italy by Premier Orlando and General Cadorna. The other Allies will not be represented.

The composition of the Supreme War Council rather than the formal power with which it is clothed indicates its influence on the conduct of the war, and it is not improbable that this body will be able to bring about the unity of control advocated by the President without inflaming political passions or arousing local jealousies such as turned London topsy turvy last week.

America is committed only to the first meeting of the Supreme War Council, and, while it is probable, it is not yet certain that General Bliss will remain as the American military member after Colonel House leaves. He also may return and be succeeded by another appointee for the position left vacant.

The need of unity of control is obvious, but when one starts to arrange it so many obstacles are encountered that the utmost caution is necessary, unless a situation should suddenly arise requiring prompt and drastic action, disregarding all minor considerations. The decisions in Paris next week will be influenced largely by events on the war fronts, especially in Italy.

The third body, which is to be organized in Paris next week, is the Allied War Council, a permanent body, the American member of which is Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. This body probably will be located in London. All the Allies will be represented in the membership.

One purpose of this council is to allocate the American supplies of food, fuel, and money among the European Allies. The Allies' needs will be carefully investigated as to forwarding the war as a whole instead of dispensing aid on the basis of the individual needs of the various countries. Through this council it is hoped to bring the departments of the various Governments into touch, and by thus "meshing" the gears consolidate the allied Governments into one big machine.

The question of the permanent representation of America on the Supreme War Council is still open. General Bliss will hold membership after Colonel House returns to America, but whether the United States will have a civilian member will be decided by the President, as the question involves practically a delegation of Presidential power.

In the foregoing I am not quoting Colonel House, but trying to give the general idea of the scheme as far as matured, and my information comes from a variety of sources. All the plans are in the making and subject to change when the meetings convene. Washington's influence will be great in the final action toward making theoretical unity of control concrete.

There is great interest here in America's celebration of the British victory at Cambrai and tributes to General Byng. I had the privilege of visiting General Byng at his headquarters last July, and was not surprised when I heard the news of the new and silent methods. He is himself a silent man, delving over maps and concentrated on the business of waging war. After meeting him I visited the Canadian Corps Headquarters, and everybody I met assured me that Byng would pull off something big before many months.

Sir Julian's stroke is greeted here as the emergence of the genius of the British Army for the first time in this war.

VIENNA FACES FOOD CRISIS.

Shortage Threatened Owing to the Transport Difficulties.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Vienna is threatened with a shortage of grain, bread, and other foods, owing to transport difficulties, according to reports made at a conference of local food organizations and reported by the Neue Freie Presse and forwarded from Copenhagen by the Exchange Telegraph Company. The population, the newspaper said, was startled by the statement that Vienna only had sufficient bread for the next ten days.

It was said that sufficient potatoes were available, however, to allow each person one and one-half kilograms weekly.

TO TURN OUT FEWER PLEASURE AUTOS

Reduction for the Year Will Be From 40 to 60 Per Cent.—Firms to Build War Trucks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24. — A drastic reduction in the output of pleasure automobiles during 1918 is indicated in reports received during the last few weeks by the Automotive Committee of the Council of National Defense. Large automobile manufacturers in various parts of the country have volunteered the information to the committee that they propose cutting down their output during the year anywhere from 40 to 60 per cent. One of these concerns manufactures four popular-priced cars, which are known throughout the country. Another concern is the Ford Motor Company, which announced several days ago that its output would be curtailed.

Increased cost of raw materials, difficulty of obtaining adequate transportation for these and for the finished product, and a desire to increase the truckmaking facilities of their plants are the several reasons given by the manufacturers. Practically without exception, the firms which will reduce the production of pleasure cars intend bidding for a part of the contracts for the 100,000 military trucks included in the War Department's program.

BRITISH TAKE SITE OF ANCIENT MIZPAH

Turks Shell the Mosque Containing the Tomb of the Prophet Samuel.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The site of ancient Mizpah, 5,000 yards west of the Jerusalem-Nabulus road, has been stormed by the British, the War Office announces. Mounted troops which advanced northward were forced back by the Turks. The bulletin reads:

On Wednesday we stormed the Nebi Samwil Ridge, the site of the ancient Mizpah, which is 5,000 yards west of the Jerusalem-Nabulus road. Repeated counterattacks by the Turks have been beaten off. The enemy has bombarded the mosque containing the tomb of the Propet Samuel, which we carefully avoided.

Our mounted troops, which had approached Beit Unia on Wednesday, were forced back by a strong counter-attack, and are now holding Beit Ur-el-Foka, (twelve miles northwest of Jerusalem,) on the upper Beth Horon.

After a heavy rain, the weather is now bright and cold.

General Allenby reports that the successful action of Monday, when the enemy was driven from the defile west of Kuryet-el-Enab, was due to the gallantry of the Somersets, the Wiltshires, and the Gurkhas.

En-Nebi Samwil is generally recognized as the site of the ancient Mizpah, although two other places claim the distinction, probably because many Biblical references to Mizpah, although different in character, refer to the same place. There are references to the land of Mizpah (Josh. xi., 3), to the valley of Mizpah (Josh. xi., 8), to a lowland of Judea (Josh. xv., 38), and to a place in Moab (I. Sam. xxii., 3).

The use of the word as an inscription for memorial rings is based on the setting up of the "heap" of stones by Jacob and his brethren: "The Lord watch betwoen me and thee." (Gen. xxxi., 49.)

En-Nebi Samwil is believed to be the site of the Mizpah, in the territory of Benjamin, where Israel gathered before punishing the tribe of Benjamin (Judges xix.-xx.), also where the prophet Samuel was born, lived and assembled Israel to resist the Philistines and subsequently to present Saul as King (I. Sam. x., 17). But critics do not agree that the places were identical.

RESUME RELIEF WORK.

Jewish Workers to Distribute Money in Poland Through Dutch.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 24.—Max Senior and Boris Dogen, both of Cincinnati, representing the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee of New York, which spent over $7,000,000 for relief of distressed co-religionists of Poland, Lithuania, Rumania, and Palestine, have resumed the work of the committee, suspended since the entry of the United States into the war, with a remittance of $75,000 to Warsaw. The Netherlands Consul at that city has undertaken the distribution of the money to local relief committees.

The operations of the committee will be intrusted in the future to a permanent commission formed by Privy Councillor Oppenheim, with the co-operation of the diplomatic agents of the Netherlands in the war-stricken territories.

GERMANS AID TURKS IN NEW ATROCITIES

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 24.—Refugees from Palestine report that the Turks, in co-operation with the Germans, are committing fearful atrocities upon Jewish colonies in Palestine.

Last month all the leading men of the Jewish colony at Jaffa were accused of espionage, and on false evidence or on confessions extorted by torture were convicted by a German court-martial and hanged with many members of their families, refugees declare.

To extort confessions, it is added, many men and women, including some American citizens, have been stripped and beaten in public, some so severely as to cause death.

Stock Exchange Ambulances at Front.

Henry E. Montgomery, Chairman of the New York Stock Exchange committee formed in the early part of the year to raise funds with which to provide ambulances for the American Ambulance Field Service abroad, reported yesterday that the committee had raised $48,354.40. Deducting $47 for expenses, the total remittance amounted to $48,307.40. According to Mr. Montgomery, the section was sent to Albania in January of this year, where it has been ever since, but recently it was ordered to the French front.

BRITISH SHIPPING AS A WAR WEAPON

PROFITS CAST TO THE WIND

Movement of Men, Munitions, and Food the One Idea—Country Proud of Her Heroic Seamen.

By ROBERT DONALD,
Editor of The London Daily Chronicle.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Before the Lloyd George Government came into office about a year ago, only half the British shipping had been requisitioned for war purposes, and the overseas trade was going on as a diminishing business concern. Cuts had been made in the luxury trades, imports being radically reduced, but the bold policy of universal requisition and State control, which Lloyd George had favored from the beginning of the war, had not been adopted, with the result that British shipping companies amassed enormous fortunes, after paying the State over 60 per cent. of their war profits.

With the advent of the present Government to power the strong arm of the State took over practically the whole of the British mercantile shipping. This policy received its greatest stimulus when the United States of America entered the war. The Lloyd George Cabinet was determined to subordinate all commercial and national interests to the overwhelming demands of the war. Thus, after three years, the policy which Lloyd George with unerring instinct had favored from the beginning was finally achieved.

When the war is over Great Britain will have to start anew to restnre its vast carrying trade throughout the world, which brought the home country an annual revenue estimated at over £150,000,000. Vested interests of the highways of the ocean which have taken over a hundred years to establish have vanished in a few months.

The prime object of the shipping control is to save tonnage for national and war interests, and now only about a 10 per cent. margin in small ships remains uncontrolled. In the struggle between motor cars and wheat, motor cars have to go. That is the principle upon which the ships are operated. Since 90 per cent. of the shipping has been secured, most drastic measures have been applied, far in excess of those which the French have thought fit to apply to their own ships, though nominally they are under Government control.

Profits No Longer Considered.

Such are the restrictions adopted that commercial interest and personal profit have ceased to play any part in the movementof ships. In cases where companies continue to manage their vessels, no trade considerations enter into the use or service of the ships. It is possible sometimes to allow a small margin for general goods, such as cotton or supplementary articles of food, such as hams and bacon, but the profit arising from such freight goes to the Government as a set-off to the hire. Private management has no longer any commercial interest in cargo.

The most startling transfers have been effected in the name of national emergency. Old established trading connections have been sacrificed to the superior interests of the nation. Ships have been withdrawn from the China coast to the advantage of Japan, and vessels have been taken from Scandinavian waters to the profit of neutral shipping. In the case of a great company like the Pacific and Oriental, with a total fleet of fifty vessels, all are under requisition more than half are managed directly by the Goveromont or by other companies. The remaining ships are carrying goods to the account of the Government. These remarks apply also to the Clan and Holt lines.

Get the Government Rate.

Dividend-earning ships now get the standard blue book or Government minimum rate, and nothing else. This rate, however, provides a reasonable profit, but nothing like the earpings of the free shipping of the world, nor does the rate compare with the profits made by English shipping earlier in the war.

Still, international trade and production must be kept alive in the interests of national finance. While there is no allocation for cotton, ships to India naturally take Manchester goods, (the production of which has been reduced 40 per cent. and is largely for domestic and army consumption,) and bring back manganese ore or cereals. But when space is given to goods of this sort it is always subject to the claims either of the military or of the civil population of the nation.

Sometimes critics of pro-German tendencies have jumped to conclusions from the most innocent statements in Ministerial speeches. Lloyd George's remarks, for instance, that America was contributing wooden ships to save the food situation provoked the suggestion that Britain was forcing wooden ships upon America. Why? Because, it was stated, England knew they would be no good after the war, and she herself was building steel ships.

Great Britain is building all the ships she can, to devote them to war services and nothing else. Upon Great Britain has fallen the duty of helping the Allies. The amount of shipping placed at the service of France, Italy, and other allied countries is 3,000,000 tons dead weight. This tonnage represents nearly two months' consumption of wheat by England. A great deal of it is devoted to carrying coal as well as wheat. In some cases the ships are not actually handed over, but the tonnage is given to the Allies under British management. The traffic between England and France in men, munitions, and food involves the use of a prodigious quantity of tonnage, and the campaigns in the East mean almost as great demands and very much greater risks.

Excluding food, Great Britain imported before the war between 35,000,000 and 40,000,000 tons of goods a year. The corresponding imports this year will be less than 10,000,000 tons. The prospects for next year are even less satisfactory, as there must be a further diminution as the war goes on. Thus, at the present showing English imports (apart from war material and food) have been reduced to one-quarter of normal.

It should be borne in mind that the great need of the Allies at the present moment is ships and still more ships. If need be, trade must further suffer, as the biggest armament will prove of no avail if they cannot be transported.

While the State for war interests has placed a mortgage on the British mercantile marine and withdrawn it from its spheres of commercial competition, the British people were never prouder of their merchant service than they are today, that is because of the heroism of the men who have faced all of the new dangers and atrocities of the high seas and never shirked their duty. During three and a half years of war no single ship has been delayed by reason of a crew's refusal to face danger. Skippers of old tramp steamers, gunless and unconvoyed, ambling along at eight knots an hour, have gone through the submarine-infested Medlterranean, ready to meet all risks. Others, whose guns have been outranged by enemy submarines, have fought until their ships were shot to shreds, and then—heroes. The gallantry of the sailors of the British mercantile fleet is one of the great unwritten stories of the war.

ITEMIZE U-BOAT TOLL OF RELIEF STEAMERS

Commission Officials Publish Protest Made on Behalf of Belgian Sufferers.

12 VESSELS TORPEDOED

And Three Others Shelled After German Assurances of Safety Had Been Given.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The charge that German U-boats sank and shelled Belgian relief ships after assurances the Berlin Government had given of immunity was made today by the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

The commission, replying to a denial by Germany of responsibility for the sinking of the ships, published the text of a formal protest lodged with the Central Powers, in which it was stated that submarine commanders had sunk twelve ships and shelled three others.

The protest, which covered the period immediately following the declaration of an unrestricted submarine campaign by Germany, read as follows:

"On the 2d of February, 1917, we received from the Director of the commission in Brussels telegraphic advice that the Imperial German Government insisted that the commission shonid send its ships to Rotterdam by a route northward of the newly declared war zone, and that ships at that time in the war zone should proceed out of it by the most direct route, and could safely do so up to the evening of the 4th of February.

"At that time we had fourteen ships at sea carrying 76,000 tons of foodstuffs, either en route to or already inside the declared zone, and all but a few of them out of communication. Also at that moment we had stored in the United Kingdom 47,000 tons of foodstuffs awaiting shipment to Rotterdam. The notice given to us was entirely too short to make arrangements in all cases, either for the alteration of the route or the transportation of our stocks in the United Kingdom, and as a consequence eleven of the ships arrived in the United Kingdom ports in due course. In any event, we were advised by the Dutch and English Admiralties that the war zone declared by the German Government overlapped with the mine zone in the North Sea, and there was no safe lane open on the route stated by the German authorities.

"We were compelled to direct our New York office not only to hold up all shipments abroad, but also we were compelled to hold all arrivals and stocks in the United Kingdom until such time as a safe passage to Rotterdam could be agreed upon. The British authorities made no difficulty over the recession of the previous requirement to search in the United Kingdom ports, and ultimately the German war zone was minimized so as to establish a lane into Rotterdam through the North Sea, which they declared safe. The German authorities agreed to again respect our markings and to furnish safe conduct passes by this route from America. These arrangements were settled on the 28th of February, and our traffic was resumed from the Atlantic seaboard after a cessation of one month and the accumulation of large demurrage costs.

Repeated Appeals Disregarded.

"In the meantime we had made repeated appeals to the German authorities for safe conducts for the steamers then in the United Kingdom ports to proceed to Rotterdam, but as we could obtain no satisfaction in this matter we were compelled to discharge the cargoes in order to release the ships and prevent the perishable supplies from spoiling. Ultimately on April 1 the German authorities conditionally promised to give passage to four steamers then remaining in United Kingdom ports undischarged, but these steamers were not to proceed until May 1. As it was hopeless to preserve the foodstuffs over such a period these steamers were discharged as well.

"The net result is that today we have upward of 96,000 tons of foodstuffs in the United Kingdom. We were only able to deliver 24,000 tons in Rotterdam during the month of February and 9,000 tons during the month of March, as against 120,000 required per month. Owing to the alarm arising out of the unrestricted submarine warfare and from the sinking of our ships mentioned later on, even when on the 'safe' lane, we have not been able to secure sufficient charters to fully re-establish our service. During the month of April, assuming that we have no further losses of steamers, we shall deliver less than 55,000 tons of foodstuffs into Rotterdam. During these three months the Belgian and French populations will have been deprived of over 270,000 tons of foodstuffs critically necessary to prevent the most intense suffering among the people. Nor is the outlook for the future at all improving.

"Of equal importance, however, with the direct loss and suffering entailed by the shortage of deliveries, as mentioned above, has been the entire failure of the German submarines to adhere to the previous or new undertaking entered into by the Imperial Government as to the safety of our ships.

List of Ships Deliberately Sunk.

"On Feb. 3 we learned that the Belgian steamship Euphrates, of 4,250 tons, outward bound in ballast, provided with the commission's markings and a safe-conduct pass from the German Minister in The Hague, had been torpedoed without warning and most of the crew drowned. This act occurred before the expiration of the period notified as safe to Feb. 4.

"On Feb. 6 the Danish steamer Lars Kruse, carrying 2,300 tons of maize inward to Rotterdam, provided with the commission's markings, was sunk and one member of the crew lost. The rest were saved. The German authorities assert that this ship struck a mine, but much evidence points the other way.

"On March 8 the Norwegian steamer Storstad, en route to the newly agreed safe lane, carrying 10,000 tons of maize, with the commission's markings and safe conduct pass from the German authorities in the Argentine, was stopped by a submarine and subsequently torpedoed by it without examination of the ship's papers. One of the crew died of exposure and another was lost.

"On March 16 the Belgian steamers Hacha and Tunisie, outward bound on the safe lane from Rotterdam in ballast for New York, carrying all the commission's markings, together with safe conduct from the German Minister at The Hague, were shelled by a German submarine, and six members of the Hacha crew were killed. The others managed to escape, but the Hacha was so injured that she had to put into a Norwegian port for repairs.

"On March 17 the Belgian steamer Ministre de Smet de Naeyer was shelled by a submarine in the North Sea, but managed to escape. She was outward bound in ballast, and was provided with the commission's markings, and had, as usual, a safe conduct pass from the German Minister at The Hague.

"On March 31 the Norwegian steamer Felstein, inward bound within the (safe) lane, carrying 4,450 tons of wheat, was torpedoed and sunk without warning in bread daylight off the Dutch coast near Terschelling. She carried all the commission's markings and safe conduct pass issued by the Swiss Minister at Washington on behalf of the German Government.

"On the 4th of April the Belgian ship Trevier, carrying 4,396 tons of wheat, was torpedoed in broad daylight without warning ten miles off the Dutch coast, within the safe lane. She carried full markings and safe conduct pass from the Swiss Minister, Washington, issued with the authority of the German Government, and six members of the crew were seriously wounded by shell fire after they had taken to the boats.

"On April 2 the Norwegian steamer Anna Fostenes, inward bound, loaded with 3,100 tons of wheat, was torpedoed near Rotterdam, well within the (safe) lane. She carried full commission's markings and safe conduct pass issued by the Swiss Minister at Washington on the authority of the German Government.

"On April 8 we received word that the Norwegian steamer Camilla, inward bound, with 2,600 tons of wheat, on the safe lane, had been torpedoed without warning. She carried, as usual, the commission's markings and a safe conduct pass issued by the Swiss Minister at Washington on the authority of the German Government.

"Since resuming traffic on Feb. 28, three steamers have arrived safely and five have been sunk.

"It is impossible to express the indignation which we rightly feel over these acts, and we are at a loss to know whether this continued sinking of steamers in violation of their undertakings is a settled policy of the Imperial Government or whether it is due to reckless irresponsibility of submarine commanders. In any event, the immediate peril and loss of life of innocent seamen continuing resolutely in the service of helpless people is transcended only by the tragedy of suffering imposed on those millions of men, women, and children we are trying to preserve.

RIDICULES CAMPAIGN HERE.

Frankfurter Zeitung Scorns Our "Four-Minute Men."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 24.—The Frankfurter Zeitung, commenting on the 15,000 official propagandists who are to speak at moving picture theatres and other public places in the United States, speaks of them as four-minute men, and says that the time of the speeches will be limited to four minutes because America has done so little up to the present that four minutes will be ample time.

SPANIARDS FIGHT DUEL.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The Marquis de Villabragima, son of Count Romanones, and the Marquis de Polavieja have fought a duel with swords, according to a Madrid dispatch. De Polajava was wounded in the breast.

He is the editor of La Nacion, which has been attacking ex-Premier Romanones, and he is a son of Capt. Gen. Marquis Polavieja, who in 1896 ordered the execution of Dr. Jose Risal, a Filipino patriot, in the Philippines.

HELD AS ARSON SUSPECTS.

Men Arrested in Pittsburgh May Be Concerned in Baltimore Fire.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 24.—Charles Levine and Isadore Sabeloff, arrested last night when the police raided a cheap lodging house, were turned over to the Federal authorities today by a Police Magistrate on the belief that they know something concerning the fire which recently destroyed a number of railroad piers in Baltimore.

At the hearing before the Magistrate it developed that a diary and two letters referring to recent explosions and the Baltimore fire were found on the prisoners. The letters were directed to the men at Cleveland and signed "Ed." To one of the letters was a postscript which read: "I guess you fellows will be coming home soon now that the big fire has taken place."

TIKHON RUSSIAN PATRIARCH

Former Head of the Church in America Raised to Supreme Dignity.

According to a cable dispatch received yesterday from Moscow, dated Nov. 23, Archbishop Tikhon, the metropolitan of that city, has been elected Patriarch of all Russia. This is the first time the office has been filled since it was abolished by Peter the Great, more than 200 years ago.

The news was received by Bishop Alexander of Canada, who is the head of the Russian Orthodox Church in North America, from Archbishop Evdokim of Alaska.

The new presiding prelate of the Russian Church was Bishop and Archbishop in the United States for seven and a half years, and returned to Russia in the Spring of 1906, when he was appointed Archbishop of Warsaw, and Exarch of Lithuania and Vilna. Three months ago, after the revolution had freed the church, he was elected by the clergy and laity to be Metropolitan of Moscow.

From the time of Peter the Great up till the time of the present revolution the Russian Metropolitans and Bishops were appointed by the Holy Synod and confirmed by the Czar. Since 1905 the clergy in Russia have been hoping for a Church Council to put things on a different footing and effect a reformation in the government of the church generally. The council was assembled last Summer and promptly gave the clergy and laity in each diocese in Russia the power to elect their own prelates.

Archbishop Platon, who succeeded Archbishop Tikhon in the United States and went back to Russia in the Spring of 1914, was two months ago elected Metropolitan of Kieff.

Off to Attend the Means Trial.

Members of the District Attorney's staff and others started yesterday for Concord, N. C., to appear as witnesses at the trial there tomorrow of Gaston B. Means, charged with the murder of Mrs. Mary A. King, whose once large estate and financial affairs had for some time been under the management of the defendant. The New York party included Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling and Captain William Jones, pistol expert of the Police Department, both of whom were active in gathering evidence in the case here, and assisted the authorities at Concord before and after the arrest of Means; Dr. Otto H. Schultz, and Detectives Cunniff, Jones, and Fogarty.

MOVE MILITANTS FROM WORKHOUSE

Confinement There Illegal, Judge Waddill Holds — Sends 25 Back to Washington Jail.

THREE RELEASED ON PAROLE

To Weak Their Deaths Were Feared—Dr. Brannan's Graphic Account of Workhouse "Brutality."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Twenty-five militant suffragists, confined in the Federal Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., for picketing the White House, were transferred from that institution today by order of Federal Judge Waddill, sitting at Alexandria, Va. He decided that they had been held there illegally, and ordered their return to the District jail, to which they had been committed.

Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Henry Butterworth, and Miss Cora Week, all of New York, were released on parole, because they were so near collapse from what they had undergone at Occoquan that it was feared further confinement would result in their deaths.

The prisoners were transferred from Occoquan by automobile to the District prison, where Miss Alice Paul and several other militants as prisoners have been undergoing forcible feeding.

Dudley Field Malone and Matthew O'Brien acted as counsel for the prisoners. Mr. Malone presented the law points, and Mr. O'Brien pictured the alleged indignities suffered by the prisoners at Occoquan.

Dr. John Winters Brannan, President of the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals of New York, was present at the trial. He had heard his wife's story of treatment at Occoquan, which he repeated to the court. His statement follows:

Accuses Whittaker of Brutality.

"I find Mrs. Brannan in a state of almost complete collapse from the shocking treatment to which she has been subjected in Occoquan Workhouse. The shock of what she has suffered and the sufferings of others that she has witnessed have undermined her health to the point where I cannot permit her to continue her jail sentence. I shall take her back with me to New York, but, as she herself says, she lives near by and can return if she is again needed.

"Today is the first opportunity I have had to hear my wife's full story, though I have been in Washington three times this week attempting to find out the actual conditions of her imprisonment. She was not allowed to communicate with me from the workhouse, and when I saw her last Sunday Supt. Whittaker insisted upon being present at the interview, and would not allow me to ask her any questions concerning the institution. I find that she herself was twice warned by the Superintendent with threats that she must not tell me anything of the conditions in the workhouse.

"When I went through the workhouse last Sunday the wards and lavatories seemed to me to be clean. I find now that the white paint which impressed me has been put on in response to the protests of earlier suffrage prisoners, and that it is only a blind to deeper sinister conditions. One thing I did notice was the look of terror which came into the faces of all the women prisoners when Mr. Whittaker stepped near them.

"From my wife's account it is evident that the suffrage prisoners were deliberately terrorized when they entered Occoquan and were treated with great brutality by the men guards, who handled them and knocked them about with the fury of thugs, under the immediate direction of Mr. Whittaker himself, who called out that the men 'would be glad to get their hands on them and handle them rough.'

"There was no excuse for this treatment whatever, since the ladies did not, as reported, refuse to give their names to the Superintendant, but merely refused to give them to the matron, in order to force Mr. Whittaker to appear before them and listen to their demands to be treated as political offenders. When he arrived he gave them no opportunity to give their names, but burst into the room and called his guards in after him with orders to 'seize' Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, who was acting as spokesman. She was dragged from the room with curses and with Mr. Whittaker shaking his fist in her face and threatening her with a gag and a straitjacket.

Outrageously Handled.

"The others, my wife tells me, were all brutally and outrageously handled, and are still carrying the bruises. They were thrown into a panic of terror and finally separated from each other and literally hurled into their cells, where they were kept in darkness all night. Mrs. Brannan called from her cell across the corridor to a young girl and asked if she was all right. Mr. Whittaker at once appeared and said he would bring the gag and straitjacket if she spoke again.

"In some cells there were three women with nothing to lie on but one narrow bed and two straw mats. They were offered no food until the following noon, and Miss Cora Week of New York was denied the so-called 'privilege' of a glass of water. Mrs. Henry Butterworth of New York was carried off alone into the men's section of the jail, and deliberately told there would be no other woman with her, and there she was left all night without any other woman prisoner or matron near her and the sound of men's voices on all sides.

"As for the hunger strike, that has not been started because the women desire to make martyrs of themselves, but in an attempt to secure food which they could eat, and decent living conditions.

"These facts represent an intolerable condition that cannot be permitted to go on. Whether we agree with these ladies or not in the methods they employ to win a share in our Government, we are compelled to recognize their sincerity and sacrifice, and the fact that they feel that they have broken no law, since the Constitution guarantees their right to petition and the Clayton act makes picketing in the district legal. If they are guilty of an offense it is trivial in comparison with the outrageous insults and the brutal treatment to which they have been subjected."

Permission has been granted by President Wilson for an inspection of the workhouse by Dr. Howard A. Kelly and Dr. Lillian Welsh of Baltimore. Dr. Kelly is a brother of Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, one of the prisoners.

Hunger Strikers in Court.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 24.—At the beginning of the suffragist hearing here today Miss Lucy Burns, Vice Chairman of the Woman's Party; Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, and Miss Hattie Kruger of Buffalo, weak from hunger-striking were assisted into the court-room to testify concerning their charges of brutal treatment. Judge Waddill held, however, that an inquiry into these charges was unnecessary in view of his decision that the prisoners were illegally held. Counsel for the militants gave notice that they would present a formal petition later for redress.

The court indicated approval of the judgment of the District Police Court in convicting the women on the charge of blocking traffic when they picketed the White House.

Acquitted in Axe Murders Case.

RED OAK, Iowa, Nov. 24.—The Rev. Ryan G. J. Kelly was acquitted of the charge of committing the Villisca ax murders of 1912 by the jury in his second trial in the District Court here tonight after four hours and twenty-five minutes' consideration.

Killed with the Canadians.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—These Americans are reported in today's casualty list as killed in action: R. L. McCoy, New Orleans, La.; G. O. Jackson, Olivia, Minn.; H. T. Wilson, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Elmer Nelson, Rockford, Ill.

to any class of cars or freight results in a slowing down of the operation of the transportation machine. A constant flow of all traffic concurrently produces the best transportation results. The War Board therefore emphasizes the desirability of reducing the great volume of preference orders, which, by placing a substantial majority of the freight moved on the same plane, defeats its own object."

Men and Engines From the West.

One of the direct results of today's action will be a shifting of railroad workers from the West to the East. This will be made necessary by the urgent need of Eastern roads, with their heavily increased business due to the war, for more men.

In the official statement by the Railroads' War Board the following explanation of this phase of the situation is given:

"It is a generally recognized fact that the situation on the Eastern lines is more critical than in any other part of the country, because upon them is being concentrated the bulk of the fuel and raw materials being used in the manufacture of munitions and also the vast quantities of supplies and foodstuffs which are being transported to Europe. Therefore, locomotives, employes, and machine tools will be transferred from other railroads to the Eastern lines and the repair shops of other lines, such as those of the Western roads in Chicago, will be utilized for making repairs on the equipment of the Eastern lines."

Today's action of the Railroads' War Board followed quickly on the publication of a Washington dispatch in THE NEW YORK TIMES telling of the serious straits into which the Eastern railroads have been placed by war conditions and outlining the proposals which they had made to the Government, with a request for immediate action. Today's conference was one of several between representatives of the railroad interests and heads of Government war activities, and the Government representatives were quick to see the absolute necessity of affording some sort of relief that would give the greatest amount of efficiency in railroad transportation of war supplies intended for the fighting forces in Europe.

Those present in behalf of the Government were H. A. Garfield, Fuel Administrator; E. N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board; Robert S. Lovett, Priority Director; Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator, and Commissioner E. H. Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Railroads' War Board was represented by Fairfax Harrison, its Chairman; Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, Hale Holden of the Burlington, Julius Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific, Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania, and Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, who is Chairman of the Government War Industries Board.

Fuel Recommendations.

Today's action was based mainly on a letter addressed to the Government Fuel Administrator by the Railroads' War Board, which contained the following recommendations:

"That a survey be made by the Fuel Administration of present contracts and method of purchase and shipment of coal, so as to shorten the rail haul from mine to consumer and to eliminate as far as possible all cross-hauls of coal.

"Pooling of coal within reasonable limits will, without doubt, produce additional large savings in cars and increase efficiency, and the railroads are prepared to co-operate in any measures pursued by the Fuel Administration to that end.

"That immediate measures be adopted to transfer movement of foodstuffs and other export material to Southern and Gulf ports to as large a degree as compatible with public interest in order to relieve the Eastern congested territory of an equivalent amount of train service.

"That an immediate survey be made of all Government requirements now involving the movement of raw materials in and manufactured product out of centres of industry, so that accumulations on cars and line and in terminals will not occur, as now, while product is awaiting use here or ocean transportation for foreign use.

"The concentration in certain parts of Eastern territory of vast Government and industrial activities has overtaxed the capacity of rail lines in that territory, considering the heavy movement of coal and other heavy commodities which formerly moved on coastwise vessels but has now been thrown upon the railroads, the heavy military and civilian passenger travel, &c.

"An important part of the plan adopted for the operation of the Eastern lines is that of placing at their disposal the facilities of railroads in other territories in such extent as may be necessary.

"Some specific illustrations of the way in which the trackage of the various lines is to be pooled are to be given in the report of the Vice Presidents. For example, the Western Maryland will allow its line to be used as an eastbound track in connection with the Baltimore & Ohio from Connellsville, Penn., to Jerome, Md., 125 miles, thus making three tracks between those points.

"The Erie Railroad is to be used to its full capacity in transporting lake ore and coal between Cleveland and Youngstown, and power and equipment will be provided from other lines for its use as required. It is expected that under the new arrangement large amounts of freight traffic will be diverted from the railroads which are now most congested to those which still have some unused capacity.

"The Committee of Operating Officers which will be in charge of the operation of the railway pool will meet in Washington on Monday to formulate further rules and to make such recommendations as it may consider necessary."

The official statement issued tonight said:

"The measures adopted are calculated to enable the Eastern railways to transport the maximum amount of freight traffic which it would be physically possible under any organization or by any methods for them to move with their present facilities."

RAILROADS ASK PUBLIC TO MAKE FEWER TRIPS

Executives Believe Fares Should Be Vastly Increased—To Cut Off More Trains.

Leading railroad executives, with the assistance of the Government, will soon start an active campaign to induce persons in this country to travel less. With the nation at war and the facilities of the railroad taxed to the utmost, passenger travel passed all previous records in October, and it is expected reports for November will show a still further increase. This is the case in no other belligerent country. Just as there is non-essential freight transportation, the curtailment of which is soon to be effected, just so there is what is considered by the Railroads' War Board non-essential passenger traffic.

This passenger increase is taking place despite the fact that in the past six months the railroads have curtailed trains to an extent equal to about 10 per cent. of the train mileage. That the further increase in the efficiency of the railroads demands the use of fewer locomotives for hauling passengers, of fewer train crews used on such cars, and of fewer miles of track crowded with passenger traffic, to say nothing of saving of coal, is the belief of the railroad managers now charged with the war operation of the roads. Many of the big roads are planning to curtail their long-distance passenger service.

It is the attitude of some members of the War Board that people must be made to realize that travel for pleasure is one of the luxuries which must be sacrificed for the sake of winning the war. They point to the situation in France and England and Germany, where no pleasure traveling is done. In England the passenger traffic has been reduced something more than 50 per cent., pleasure travel being practically done away with. The railroads of England took off most of the passenger trains, but before this was done all passenger fares were raised 50 per cent.

There are American railroad executives who believe that passenger fares should be substantially increased, except for commutation trains and, of course, troop trains. But this move is barred to an extent by the fact that all raises in fares in interstate traffic are subject to the regulation of State Commissioners, and experience has taught railroad men that it is a task which has seldom been accomplished to get forty-eight State Commissions to act in concert on anything. It has been said that Congress has no power to pass a law allowing roads to increase rates on traffic within State limits. This would be one of the situations that would not arise under the system of Federal incorporation of railroads desired by a majority of railroad executives.

It is the purpose of the War Board to curtail travel in a manner that will not interrupt essential travel. The proposed plans call for the elimination of competing trains and their consolidation and for the curtailment of trains de luxe, run especially for pleasure travelers.

In an appeal to the railroads to increase their efficiency issued yesterday by Fairfax Harrison, President of the Southern Railway and Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, he advised that passenger schedules be lengthened during the Winter, to promote punctuality, and avoid the demoralization of traffic that results when trains fail to make their schedules. Mr. Harrison also advised railroads to arrange for the common use of terminals and facilities to tide over threatening emergencies. Another piece of advice was "wherever transportation can be conserved, to avoid the use of unreasonably circuitous routes, carefully avoiding, however, overloading direct routes."

"It is evident," said a statement by the American Railway Association yesterday, "that however heartily the public has already responded to our requests for co-operation, additional and most strenuous endeavor must be made, both by us and by them, to overcome the stress of Winter weather, overworked plants, and depletion of forces through calls to the flag and resignations to accept employment in shipyards and munition factories.

"The railroads generally are very shorthanded, some of our constituents reporting a net shortage of 12½ per cent. in the number and a much greater loss in the efficiency of its employes because of the necessity of filling vacancies with new and inexperienced men. We recognize that every one is doing his best, in trying conditions, to help this country win the war, but if insuperable difficulties should arise to prevent us from giving the public as good service as we desire, we ask every railroad executive to make it clear why we failed, and to request the public to continue to exercise the patience and tolerance that they have heretofore shown."

NO PULLMAN SERVICE LAW.

Jersey Utilities Board Takes No action on Withdrawal of Cars.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—In respect to the withdrawal of a Pullman car from certain trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York and points on the New Jersey coast, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners today issued this statement:

"There is no New Jersey statute which requires a railroad to operate Pullman cars. The board has no authority to require the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in making up its trains in New York to include a Pullman car for the benefit of passengers whose journey begins in New York City, or to operate a Pullman car into the City of New York."

LOSING ROAD WILL QUIT.

Short Colorado Line Serving Tungsten District Prepares to Dismantle.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 24.—Notice that it intends to abandon operations as a railroad and dismantle and sell its equipment, commencing Dec. 27, was filed with the State Public Utilities Commission today by the Denver, Boulder & Western Railroad, which operates the only rail line to the tungsten district of Boulder county, one of the most important producing districts of this war material.

The railroad is 46 miles long. Its reason for wishing to cease operations was given as inability to meet expenses.

QUICK REWARDS FOR NAVY.

Bill Prepared to Cut Out Senate Approval of Promotions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Secretary Daniels has directed the Judge Advocate General of the Navy to draft a bill for introduction in Congress to provide authority for the promotion of naval officers without the requirement that their nominations be approved by the Senate. The idea behind this proposed legislation is that it will enable the President to promote naval officers immediately for gallantry in action. The grades to which officers are thus promoted will expire at the end of the war.

Under the selective draft law the President may promote officers to grades in the national army up to and including that of Colonel without submitting their names to the Senate. By this means a cabled recommendation by General Pershing that a certain officer be promoted immediately in appreciation of an act of gallantry could be carried out. It is believed that the effect of such quick reward would increase the morale of the army. Promotions so made would expire with the ending of hostilities or the muster out of the national army.

It is likely that the Government will take up the matter of providing some decoration that may be conferred without red tape upon army and navy officers who distinguish themselves in action. One great difficulty in the past has been that rewards to gallant officers were never conferred while the acts of gallantry were fresh in the minds of troops, sailors, or the public. In many cases years passed before acts of heroism were recognized.

AUSTRIAN ARRESTED AND WEAPONS FOUND

Captain Kleinschmidt Held for Examination After Detectives Visit His Room.

NOT PRO-GERMAN, HE SAYS

Detectives Ford and Cavanagh of Captain Tunney's bomb squad went to a rooming house at 207 West Forty-fourth street yesterday afternoon and arrested a man describing himself as Captain Frank E. Kleinschmidt, 46 years old. They also seized a trunk in which they reported they found a revolver, a dirk and a scrapbook containing newspaper clippings, one of which shows a picture of Captain Kleinschmidt with a group of Austrian officers about to make an ascent in a dirigible balloon over the war front.

The weapons and scrapbook were presented as evidence before Magistrate McQuade in the Men's Night Court. Kleinschmidt was charged with violation of Section 1897 of the penal law in having a revolver in his possession. Abraham Allenberg of 120 Broadway appeared as attorney for Kleinschmidt and asked an adjournment. The prisoner was released under $500 bail for examination tomorrow.

Kleinschmidt did not make a statement on the witness stand. To newspaper reporters Allenberg said:

"I have known Captain Kleinschmidt for six years. I have attended dinners and lectures where he spoke, both at the Catholic Club here and at the Geographical Club in Washington. I heard from him some time ago that he was going to Newport to take up aviation."

The scrapbook presented to Magistrate McQuade by the detectives contained an article from a Western newspaper on the war in which it was stated that the Lusitania carried 70,000 cases of ammunition. Other clippings were from German papers. The picture showing Kleinschmidt with the Austrian officers was a reproduction of a photograph and was printed in a Denver newspaper on Dec. 11, 1916, according to the inscription. Kleinschmidt appears in a uniform in the picture. After his release on bail Kleinschmidt said to reporters:

"My address is Hotel Astor. Now don't make any mistake. Don't have me pro-German. I am not."

Captain Kleinschmidt is known as an explorer. Returning to the United States in February of last year, he made many speeches and defended the course of the Teutons. Replying to charges of looting lodged against German troops he declared that he had known of but one German soldier who plundered a house. He said the German commanders were careful to see to it that their men did not loot.

BRITONS LIKE OUR MUSIC.

American Composers Enjoying Great Vogue in London.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Thanks to the United States' entry into the war, American music is enjoying a wide vogue in London this Fall. Since the concert and recital season opened here there has been scarcely a single important program without one or two American numbers, and the leader of the Queen's Hall Symphony Orchestra has just achieved a remarkable success with an entire program of American music.

The musical critics view the American invasion with some friendliness, but not too much enthusiasm. One says: "The American composers seem too anxious to assert their mastery of modern technique, to convince us that they know as much about it as anybody else." Another adds: "The tendency among American composers seems to be toward turning out a piece no less elaborate than that of the modern European, rather than to develop on their own lines."

The Manchester Guardian's critic says: "America has all the qualifications for becoming a great musical nation. She has given more liberally than anybody else; she has offered the most generous hospitality to music; she has bigger halls, and more substantially rewarded orchestras than any other nation. The return for these efforts is bound to come in time, and what has already been achieved may well be a source of pride to Americans."

UNEARTH 'AUTO GRAVEYARD'

Detectives Find Plant Where Thieves Wreck Cars.

An "automobile graveyard" operated by thieves where cars were taken apart and the 'remains" disposed of in separate parts and lots so that identification of stolen vehicles would be made most difficult, was found yesterday in a barn on the Harlem River, near 151st Street, and one of two men arrested by Detectives Fitzpatrick and Moran of the District Attorney's office, told how automobiles are made to disappear and the metal from the cars sold at 10 per cent. of the original value.

The car wreckers were dismantling what was left of the $2,100 automobile of Charles A. Hopsensack, sales manager of the Brady-Murray Motors Corporation, which was stolen on Nov. 4, when he had left the car for a few minutes in front of his home at Broadway and 142d Street.

James Blew, who said he lived at 723 West 177th Street, and Philip Strobel, who gave an address at Astoria, Queens, were the prisoners taken from the barn to the District Atorney's office. One of the men is a chauffeur and the other an automobile mechanic. Evidence implicating them will be placed before a Grand Jury tomorrow. Blew made this statement, according to Assistant District Attorney James M. Donohue:

"We had no difficulty in disposing of the various parts of the automobiles we stole. If we had attempted to dispose of the complete cars we would probably have been caught on the first try. As it was, we had been operating for months, during which time we have stolen many cars, wrecked them, and sold the parts without trouble."

MILITARY CONTROL OF THE WATERFRONT

larly the shipping of munitions and supplies, to the American expeditionary forces and to the Allies. This protection of property cannot be maintained without the fullest co-operation on the part of those owning or operating these facilities and the responsibility for affording such protection rests upon them equally with the Government officials. Assuming that this co-operating will be cordially entered into, the Department of Justice has therefore promulgated the following instructions, which must be strictly complied with:

1. In order that notice may be promptly given by the Government officials to the operators of all waterfront facilities, every corporation or person operating such facilities must immediately designate some person on whom the Government officials may serve such notices. These persons are to be designated at once, and their names and addresses forwarded to the United States Marshal of the district in which the waterfront facility is located.

2. Every operator of a waterfront facility included in the scope of the proclamation shall immediately appoint and maintain identification inspectors, at his own expense, to be stationed one for every entrance to the dock, wharf, warehouse or other waterfront facility. Such inspectors shall be maintained during all of the hours, day or night, during which the dock or waterfront facility is being operated. It is the duty of these inspectors to identify to the Government patrol all persons entitled to access to the waterfront facility, and this system of identification is to be applied both to officers and employees of the wharf or warehouse, and also to truck drivers, pedestrians, and all other persons having legitimate business at such waterfront facility. It is the duty of such inspectors to see to it that all persons who enter upon the docks, after being identified, shall depart therefrom at the conclusion of their business, so that no person shall lurk on the premises after the completion of his business.

3. The operator of such waterfront facility shall at once prepare, ready for the inspection of Government officials, and keep on the premises a complete and accurate record of all of its officers and employes, containing for each person the following data:

(a) Name and address. (b) Nationality—and if naturalized citizen, place, and time of naturalization. (c) Date when employed. (d) Last previous place of employment. In order that business may not be unduly interfered with, as speedily as possible after the completion of such record, a pass card system will be put into operation by the Government, under which each employee shall be provided with a suitable card of identification. The employer must use suitable precaution for the issue and surrender of such pass cards in order to prevent their getting into unauthorized hands.

4. Every operator of such waterfront facility shall at once give formal notice, in writing, to the United States Marshal, stating the names and addresses of the watchmen in its employ, a brief statement of their prescribed duties, and the hours of their employment. This requirement applies both to names of watchmen and names of the identification inspectors above referred to.

5. Every operator of a waterfront facility shall on or before Dec. 1, file with the United States Marshal, in writing, a statement describing its system of fire patrol and fire prevention.

6. These regulations are prescribed for the purpose of aiding and enforcing the President's proclamation. The requirements of that proclamation must be strictly complied with. Under no circumstances will alien enemies be permitted to enter the waterfront prohibited areas defined by said proclamation, and the operators of the waterfront facilities referred to will be held responsible for keeping alien enemies off their premises.

I.

Definition of Alien Enemies.

Under Section 4,067 of the Revised Statutes, an alien enemy is defined as follows: All natives, citizens, denizens, or subjects of the hostile Government being males of the age of 14 years and upward and not actually naturalized in the United States. At present the only hostile Government is the Imperial German Government.

(a) German-born children of naturalized Germans are not alien enemies, provided naturalization of parents completed before the children have reached maturity. Otherwise they are alien enemies unless naturalized themselves.

(b) American-born children of German citizens residing in the United States are not alien enemies unless after maturity they became naturalized in Germany.

(c) Naturalization of alien enemies cannot be completed during the period of the war.

(d) German-born children of American citizens temporarily residing in Germany are not alien enemies. If, however, parents' residence is permanent in Germany, the offspring must have established by suitable action citizenship in the United States.

(e) A native, citizen, denizen, or subject of the German Empire remains an alien enemy, even though he has taken out first papers in the United States or has been naturalized in any country other than the United States.

II.

Definition of Zones.

The restrictions relating to the waterfront are defined in Subdivision 13 of the President's proclamation, as follows:

13. An alien enemy shall not approach or be found within one hundred yards of any canal, nor within one hundred yards of any wharf, pier, or dock used directly by or by means of lighters by any vessel or vessels of over five hundred (500) tone gross engaged in foreign or domestic trade other than fishing; nor within one hundred yards of any warehouse, shed, elevator, railroad terminal, or other terminal, storage or transfer facility adjacent to or operated in connection with any such wharf, pier, or dock; and wherever the distance between any two of such wharves, piers, or docks, measured along the shore line connecting them, is less than eight hundred and eighty yards, an alien enemy shall not approach or be found within one hundred yards of such shore line.

III.

Laying Out Zones.

The first thing to do is to lay out the boundary lines of the zones under the above Regulation 13 of the Presidential proclamation. Obtain from the United States Attorney of the district the list of piers, docks, wharves, and other facilities which come within the scope of the Presidential regulations, and then lay out the boundaries of the zones, preferably by drawing some kind of a visible line or mark on the ground. At the points where streets or other means of access cross the zone boundary line, place placards announcing that alien enemies are forbidden to go beyond that point in the direction of the arrow.

In case of railroads and street car lines and streets or other ways passing within or through the described zone limits, no alien enemy will be permitted aboard the cars of such roads, even on continuous passage, or on or along said streets or ways within the prohibited area, without incurring, when detected, penalty therefor, except when on his way to board a ferry, and then only on such cars or streets leading directly to such ferry.

IV.

Restricting Access.

All alien enemies must be prevented from entering the prohibited waterfront areas. All permits previously granted allowing alien enemies access to these waterfront zones have been revoked by the new proclamation, and under no circumstances whatever will any alien enemies be permitted to pass the waterfront zone line. The penalty for intruding upon restricted zones is internment for part or the whole period of the war.

V.

Nature of the Patrol.

The number of men stationed on guard should be such as will effectively carry out the said object. The patrol sentinel should station himself at such point along the boundary line or within the prohibited area as will enable him best to control the access to the said piers, wharves, docks, and other waterfront facilities. It is important, however, that the patrolling be effective and yet be carried on in such a manner as will interfere as little as possible with the free movement of traffic to and from the wharves, piers, docks, &c., and with the free operation of the wharves and other shipping facilities, for the speedy operation of the shipment of men and materials to Europe is of the utmost importance, and the administration of the alien enemy proclamation should be carried on so as to interfere as little as possible with the movement of shipping. The objects to be attained are, first, the effective administration of the alien enemy regulation and, second, the speedy and free movement of shipping.

You will observe that under the President's proclamation alien enemies still have the right to travel on the regular ferries. Care should, therefore, be exercised not to interfere with a reasonable access to ferry landings by alien enemies.

The operators of the docks, wharves and the other facilities named in the Presidential regulations, have been officially notified by the United States Marshal that each of them shall appoint inspectors whose functions it will be to stand at the entrances which are being used and assist the guard in identifying the persons who have the right of access. The guard should, therefore, immediately confer with the inspectors and should admit only those persons to the pier, wharf, etc., within his zone who are identified by the inspectors as entitled to access. This system of identification will relate both to the employes and workmen of the wharves, docks, and the other waterfront facilities, and to the drivers, truckmen, and those engaged in bringing shipments to the wharves, docks, and other waterfront facilities.

This system of identification by the Inspectors is to be put into immediate effect and to be kept in operation during the whole period of the war. It is not expected, however, to accomplish a complete protection of shipping, and the Department of Justice is engaged in planning a system of passes to supplement the system of identification by Inspectors. The operators of the wharves, piers, &c., within the course of a short time, will be officially instructed to prepare a complete list of all employes and workmen entitled to access to their wharves and other facilities and to sift out those who are alien enemies and to issue pass-cards to those who are not alien enemies. When this system is ready for operation the War Department will be notified, and from that time on no workman or employe or passenger, either of the wharf, pier, etc., themselves, or the ships, will be entitled to go within the barred zone without a pass-card.

According to the present plan, the pass-card system will not apply to drivers or truckmen engaged in taking freight and materials to the wharves and other waterfront facilities.

VI.

Arrests.

If an enemy alien is discovered within the barred zone the guard should immediately take him into custody and detain him, and thereupon should immediately notify the United States Marshal of the district. When the United States Marshal or a Deputy Marshal appears to claim him the soldier or other person detaining him should surrender the custody to the Marshal or Deputy Marshal.

VII.

Consultation With Officials of the Department of Justice.

Whenever the guard or other member of the army has any doubts or questions concerning the proper location of the barred zone area, the definition of alien enemy, the scope of the Presidential regulation, or of his powers as a member of the patrol, his immediate commanding officer should as quickly as possible consult the United States Attorney of the district.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE IN DOUBT.

Soldiers May Guard Portions Near the Naval Anchorages.

A part of the Metropolitan district is already under regular army patrol. This comprises practically all of the waterfront of Hoboken, from which area more than 300 alien enemies have been removed to the internment prison on Ellis Island since last Monday. It is now impossible for any unauthorized person to get within half a mile of the Hoboken piers.

Whether or not Riverside Drive will be guarded by troops was a question which the local authorities would not answer last night. That certain parts, if not all the drive, will be declared a barred zone is certain, and it is the general opinion that those parts of the drive opposite the various naval anchorages will be guarded by soldiers.

Georg Koesta, a German, who gave his home as 89 Dover Street, was arrested yesterday by agents of the Department of Justice and interned at Ellis Island. Koesta's arrest was sought some days ago, but he disappeared from the pier where he was employed before the arrival of the Federal agents. His wife called at the pier yesterday to draw his pay and she was trailed to the Dover Street address, where Koesta was found. Another alien, whose name was not disclosed, was questioned at the Federal Building by Assistant United States Attorney H. A. Content and ordered interned for the rest of the war.

HELD AS A DESERTER.

Absent Private from Camp Upton Seized When with Woman.

William Tuffin, a private in the national army, was arrested yesterday on a charge of being a deserter. He was taken to the Flushing Station House, where he gave his address as 213 Third Avenue, College Point. According to the police he was sent to Yaphank on Sept. 19, and for the last two weeks has been missing from the camp. A general alarm was sent out for him on Friday. Early yesterday Patrolman Grossberger saw Tuffin alighting from a trolley car at Broadway and Lawrence Street in company with a young woman.

Tuffin was arraigned before Magistrate Miller in the Flushing Court and held to await the arrival of officers from Camp Upton. Tuffin was arrested before on a charge of abandonment made by his wife.

Collector Edwards Defines More Provisions of the War Revenue Law.

ADVISORY BOARD NAMED

Members Will Pass on Interpretation of Capital Invested, Which Is Not Covered by the Act.

In view of the interest aroused by the Federal war excess profits tax among individuals, copartnerships, and corporations, Collector William H. Edwards of the Second or Wall Street District yesterday gave out a statement, in which he outlined some of the definitions which come under the provisions of Title 2 of the excess profits tax of the act of Oct. 3, 1917. The Collector also made public examples showing how the tax should be computed. The statement, in short, was intended to be a compendium of information for all liable to payments under the terms of the law.

Collector Edwards said it was assumed that the income tax return and the excess profits return would be made in conjunction with each other, and that those who will be required to file excess profits returns under the provisions of the law should first calculate the amount of the tax due in this connection, for the reason that in assessing income tax the net income embraced in the return should be credited with the amount of any excess profits tax imposed for the same calendar year upon the taxpayer. For example, an individual engaged in business with a net income of $10,000, and having only a nominal capital, would be entitled to an exemption of $6,000 and subject to a tax of 8 per cent. on $4,000, or $320. In determining income tax, the excess profits tax should then be used as a credit against net income.

The method of calculating by a corporation in determining the war profits tax due was set forth by Collector Edwards as follows:

It will be necessary first to ascertain by deducting from net income the sum of an amount equal to the same percentage of the invested capital for the taxable year which the average amount of the annual net income of the trade or business during the pre-war period was of the invested capital for the pre-war period (but not less than 7 per cent. or more than 9 per cent. of the invested capital for the taxable year) and $3,000. In other words, if a corporation had an invested capital during the pre-war period amounting to $100,000 and an average net income for such period amounting to $7,000, it would be entitled to a deduction of 7 per cent. of its invested capital for the taxable year and $3,000.

As the amount of the deduction has now been determined, the following is an example showing the war excess profits tax due from the same corporation whose net income for the year 1917 is $200,000 with a capital invested of $100,000:

Net income	$200,000
Deduction	10,000
Net income after deduction allowed	$190,000
Capital invested	$100,000
7%	$7,000
	3,000
Allowable deduction	$10,000

Twenty per cent. of net income (in excess of deduction) and not in excess of 15 per cent. of the invested capital for the taxable year.

Twenty-five per cent. of the net income in excess of 15 per cent., but not in excess of 20 per cent. of the invested capital.

Thirty-five per cent. of the net income in excess of 20 per cent., but not in excess of 25 per cent. of invested capital.

Forty-five per cent. of the net income in excess of 25 per cent., but not in excess of 33 per cent. of the invested capital.

Sixty per cent. net income in excess of 33 per cent. of invested capital.

15% of $100,000..	$15,000
Deduction	10,000
20%	$5,000	$1,000
20% of $100,000..	$20,000
15% of 100,000..	15,000
25%	$5,000	1,250
25% of $100,000..	$25,000
20% of 100,000..	20,000
35%	$5,000	1,750
33% of $100,000..	$33,000
25% of 100,000..	25,000
45%	$8,000	$,600
Net income	$200,000
33% of $100,000..	33,000
60%	$167,000	100,200
Tax due		$107,800

The amounts are to be taxed at the rates of 25 per cent., 35 per cent., and 45 per cent. may be determined by taking 5 per cent and 8 per cent. respectively of the capital invested for the taxable year.

The Collector's statement called attention to the fact that the law applied to all trades or business of whatever description, including professions and occupations, whether carried on continually or not, with the exception of officers and employes under the United States as to compensation or fees received by them. Also, foreign corporations, foreign partnerships, and non-resident alien individuals, the net income of whose trade or business during the taxable year from sources within the United States is less than $3,000. Also domestic corporations exempt from provisions of the Federal income tax law.

Advisory Board Named.

The Collector said that no doubt the determination of that paragraph of the law relating to invested capital was a question uppermost in taxpayers' minds, and in order that every case might be clearly interpreted an Advisory Board had been appointed, which would operate from Washington, to pass upon the proper interpretation of capital invested as not covered by the law.

In the case of a corporation or partnership, invested capital, the statement said, should include:

Actual cash value of tangible property paid in other than cash, for stock or shares in such corporation or partnership, at the time of such payment, (but in case such tangible property was paid in prior to Jan. 1, 1914, the actual cash value of such property as of Jan. 1, 1914, but in no case to exceed the par value of stock issued therefor), and Paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits, used or employed in the business exclusive of undivided profits earned during the taxable year.

The actual cash value of patents and copyrights paid in for stock or shares of a corporation or partnership at the time of such payment, not to exceed the par value of such stock or shares, shall be included as invested capital.

Good-will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises or other intangible property, shall be included as invested capital of a corporation or partnership, if bona fide payment therefor was made in cash or tangible property. The value included shall not exceed the actual cash or actual cash value of the tangible property paid therefor at the time of payment.

Good-will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises or other intangible property, bona fide purchased prior to March 3, 1917, for and with interests or shares in a partnership, or in the capital stock of the corporation, (issued prior to March 3, 1917,) in an amount not to exceed on March 3, 1917, 20 per centum of the total shares of the stock of the corporation, shall be included in invested capital. Such value, however, shall not exceed the actual cash value at the time of purchase, and in the case of the issue of stock, shall not exceed the par value of such stock.

In the case of individuals, residents or citizens of the United States, invested capital shall include actual cash paid into the trade or business, actual cash value of tangible property paid into the trade or business, other than cash, at the time of such payment, (but in case such tangible property was paid in prior to Jan. 1, 1914, the actual cash value of such property as of Jan. 1, 1914,) and the actual cash value of patents, copyrights, good-will, trade marks, trade brands, franchises, or other intangible property paid into the trade or business at the time of such payment, if payment was made therefor specifically as such in cash or tangible property, not to exceed the actual cash or actual cash value of the tangible property bona fide paid therefor at the time of such payment.

Invested capital for any year means the invested capital for the year, averaged monthly.

Where there is no capital invested or merely a nominal invested capital there shall be levied a tax of 8 per cent., in lieu of tax imposed by Section 201 (excess profits tax) on income derived from such trade or business in excess of $3,000, in the case of a domestic corporation, or in excess of $6,000 in the case of a citizen or resident of the United States or a domestic partnership.

The net income as determined of a corporation, co-partnership, or individual for the pre-war period shall be arrived at upon the basis provided for under the laws governing rates of taxation during the period mentioned.

Collector Edwards pointed out that the excess profits tax law, title 2, act of March 3, 1917, had been repealed by the passage of the new war revenue law, act of Oct. 3, 1917. He said any amount which had been paid on account of the tax imposed under the act of March 3, should be credited toward the payment of the tax imposed by the war revenue law act of Oct. 3.

Amended Law Provisions.

Under the income tax law as amended by the War Revenue act, interest paid within the year on indebtedness incurred for the purchase of Liberty bonds as may be deducted in computing net incomes subject to income surtaxes and excess profits taxes. In case of corporations this is, of course, subject to the limitations imposed by the income tax law on the amount of indebtedness, interest on which may be deducted.

Investments and obligations of the United States, including Liberty bonds of both issues made by a corporation or partnership from capital, surplus, or undivided profits would, it was stated, be included in invested capital for the purpose of computing the deduction and rate of taxation under the excess profits tax law; but undivided profits earned during the taxable year cannot be included in invested capital.

Collector Edwards intimated that within a short time, an exhaustive set of regulations would be released by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue setting forth in detail rulings to be followed in determining taxes due under the sections of the war revenue measure passed by Congress in October, as they relate to war income tax and excess profits tax.

Inspector Schmittberger Left $6,000

The will of Max F. Schmittberger, Chief Inspector of the New York Police Department, was filed for probate yesterday, and shows that his entire estate consisted of $6,000 in personal property, of which $2,000 goes to Woodlawn Cemetery for the upkeep of the family burial plot. Anna M. Schmittberger, daughter, gets two-fifths of the residue and the remainder is divided between his sons, with the exception of his son, Franklin, who gets only $1.

Negro Woman Dies at 108.

Ann Christoff, 108 years old, colored, the oldest inmate of Lincoln Hospital, died there yesterday. The aged woman smoked her last pipe of tobacco the day before she died. She often told stories of her early days in slavery and said she had been sold as a slave twelve times. As a cook she travelled with the Confederate Army in company with her sister, Sarah, whose death occurred a month ago in the South. Her sister died at the age of 111 years.

CARRANZISTAS WIN BATTLE.

Many Inhabitants of Cuautla Killed by Bombardment.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24.—The campaign recently started by General Pablo Gonzales to restore order in the State of Morelos has resulted in successes, according to reports reaching Mexico City today. In a recent engagement at Cuautla, which lasted all day and was accompanied by a heavy bombardment, many adherents of Zapata, the outlaw leader, were killed.

Heavy casualties among the inhabitants of the town resulted. After the battle the Government forces entered Cuautla.

Modify Border Passport Rule.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Owing to protests from the American-Mexican border against the ruling of the State Department that passports must be had by all crossing the international line, the State Department announced today that those who crossed the border daily on business and visited places in Mexico near the border might use identification cards issued by American Immigrant Inspectors of the Department of Justice.

TWO DAYS ON STAND FOR MRS. DE SAULLES

MANY DEFENSE WITNESSES

Mrs. Bianca de Saulles spent the day yesterday resting and playing with her boy to prepare herself for the painful sessions on the witness stand in the court room of Justice Manning at Mineola, which she must endure on Monday and Tuesday.

To all appearances, the week in court, in which she has been the centre of a curious crowd while the most intimate details of her history have been revealed, produced no effect on her composure. The perfect control of the facial muscles, taught her at home and in the convent in which she was educated in England, an essential requisite of an aristocratic bearing, remained with her after she had left the court room. Those who have seen her in the Mineola jail and have discussed the case with her in a professional way have never seen a change in this characteristic. They were in doubt yesterday whether she is wholly indifferent to the verdict of the jury, bot were sure that not the slightest quiver that could be identified, either as pleasure or terror, whichever the verdict should inspire, will appear on her face when the jury comes to its conclusion.

Mrs. De Saulles had a large party in her room in the quarters of Sheriff Seaman at the Mineola jail yesterday. Her mother, Mme. Errazuriz-Vergara, and her brother and sister came over from The Crossways, where Mrs. De Saulles had previously lived at Roslyn, bringing lunch for the party in a basket. Young Jack De Saulles arrived at noon with Detective Harry V. Dougherty to spend the entire afternoon with his mother. He brought her a large red rose and a small wooden boat, which was sailed in the bathtub, and other toys, while his aunt, uncle, and grandmother joined the mother in trying to please him.

Contest for the Boy Likely.

The question of who will have his custody will not be settled by the verdict at this trial. If acquitted the mother will have in her favor the presumption of law that she is the legal guardian, but it is almost certain that the De Saulles family will pursue their charges that her act has unfitted her for the care of the child and that a bitter legal contest will follow.

It has not been settled who is the legal guardian of the child at the present time. Mrs. de Saulles's lawyers have held in court proceedings regarding the custody of the child that, as the only surviving guardian, she automatically becomes the guardian, but lawyers for Charles A. H. de Saulles, brother of the dead man, have held that the charge of murder against her has acted to remove her from the guardianship over the boy. Efforts of Charles de Saulles to have himself appointed guardian have failed so far, and with the question of guardianship entirely unsettled, the child has been, by consent of the mother, in the custody of Mrs. August Heckscher, an aunt.

If Mrs. de Saulles is acquitted she will apply to the Heckschers for the child. Habeas corpus proceedings are ready and will be introduced at once if the boy is not surrendered. The hearing on this petition would settle the boy's future. It was pointed out yesterday that, under the most favorable circumstances, the mother was likely to be in a trying position in such an event, because after what has happened she would naturally desire to return with her parents to Chili, and American courts have usually been very jealous to settle the guardianship of minor American children in such a way that there is no danger of their being brought up in another country and losing their American citizenship.

The mother's chances of having the boy, if she is acquitted of killing the father to get the boy, will also depend largely on whether the verdict is a clean-cut one or not. Several verdicts may be rendered. The jury may find her "guilty," "not guilty," "not guilty, because insane," "guilty" of a lesser degree of murder.

Her lawyers, in spite of the fact that their main defense is temporary insanity, hope to obtain a verdict of "not guilty," which would free her without question and place her in the most advantageous position to claim her child. After a verdict of "not guilty because insane," the Justice might commit her to confinement on the presumption that her insanity continues, or might let her go, in his discretion. If she were committed, habeas corpus proceedings would be commenced to have her declared sane. This would be a tedious and painful process in any event and might impair her rights to the boy. The verdict of guilty of a lesser crime is considered almost entirely out of the question. The counsel for the defense are just as sure that a verdict of guilty is out of the question.

A straight verdict of "not guilty" is considered by the District Attorney to be unthinkable, considering the defense of insanity, but it is undisputed that the jury may bring in such a verdict if they see fit.

Depend on Maid's Story.

The defense has one witness by whom they hope to establish the shadow of a claim of self-defense justifying such a verdict. This is Suzanne Monteau, the maid, who accompanied Mrs. De Saulles to Tre Box and stood right behind her when the shooting occurred. She said that, from the attitude of De Saulles, she thought sure that he was just about to attack Mrs. De Saulles, when she fired. She said at the Coroner's inquest: "Oh, he looked terrible. His eyes were terrible. I thought he was going to jump at her. Then she shot."

Mr. Uterhart used the witness Marshall Ward very roughly and sought to shake the story of Mrs. Caroline Degener, because their eyewitness accounts of the tragedy differ sharply from those which will be told by the maid and Mrs. De Saulles. Ward and Mrs. Degener insisted that De Saulles had turned away, and had his back to Mrs. De Saulles when she fired, while the maid and Mrs. De Saulles have said that he was not only facing her, but was threatening her.

Henry A. Uterhart and ex-Judge Lewis J. Smith of the defense agreed yesterday that the story of Mrs. De Saulles would require about a full day on the direct examination. District Attorney Charles R. Weeks said yesterday that he would not spare the young woman in his questions after she took the stand in her own defense, so that the cross-examination would probably occupy a large part of Tuesday. In the direct examination of Mrs. De Saulles about a dozen letters between her and her former husband and between her and the nurse of her child, Mrs. John O'Neill, who was with her at South Bethlehem, Penn., when De Saulles left her with his parents, will be read.

After Mrs. De Saulles, the next witness will be her mother, Mrs. Vergara-Errazuriz, who will tell of her meeting with De Saulles, of her early life, and of the fall against an andiron which, when she was a child, caused the original fracture of her skull.

She will be followed by Mrs. John O'Neill, the nurse, who will testify that when Mrs. De Saulles was left much alone by her husband during the first year of their marriage, the young woman confided in her that she was heartbroken over it.

Other witnesses will be D. Stewart Iglehart, who was asked to accompany Mrs. De Saulles on her trip which ended in the killing—a fact which the defense will advance as proof that the killing was not premeditated. The maid, Suzanne Monteau, will follow. After a few minor witnesses the physicians will be called to tell of the unhealed fracture of her skull, of the atrophy of the thyroid gland said to have affected her brain and nerve centres, and of her general physical condition. Others will be called to prove her suffering from sunstroke.

These witnesses will be followed by Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, the alienist who figured in the Hans Schmidt and the Arthur Warren Waite case. Mr. Uterhart and Judge Smith are working on a hypothetical question 10,000 words long to put to him.

State to Call Alienists.

District Attorney Weeks said yesterday that the insanity defense would be completely shattered by eminent alienists called by the State, and that X-ray experts would be called to study the photographs which the defense has promised to introduce to show that the young woman suffered from a double fracture of the skull, which had not united. The alienists to be called by the State will be Dr. George H. Kirby, Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim of the Hudson River State Hospital, and Dr. Isham Harris.

Mr. Weeks said that in re rebuttal he would recall all of the State's witnesses who saw the shooting and saw the young woman immediately after it, with the exception of Sheriff Phineas Seaman. Mr. Weeks did not conceal his disappointment over the fact that the Sheriff had been unable to recall whether it was the defendant or some one else who had said "Will they electrocute me right away?" and that had testified that she gave queer hysterical giggles after her arrest. Mr. Weeks said that the Sheriff, the day after the shooting, had told him it was Mrs. De Saulles who asked the question about the electric chair, and that, instead of indulging in silly giggles, she had been uniformly calm and composed.

Even if Mrs. De Saulles is acquitted at this trial, her life will not be entirely out of danger, according to her lawyers, for the reason that her physicians have decided to proceed at once with a dangerous operation to remedy the unhealed fracture of the skull. This would consist of removing a section of the bone which is said to be broken and pressing against her brain and the subatitution of another section of bone. If this is not done, her physicians assert that there is danger that the condition of the skull would eventually destroy her reason completely and might cause her death.

The disease of the thyroid gland, which is considered responsible for her pallor and feebleness, is being remedied, it was said, by treatment by the recently discovered processes of restoring disordered glands.

As Thanksgiving occurs this week and court will not be held on Thursday, it is quite possible, according to the lawyers on both sides, that the case may not go to the jury until next week. Every effort will be made to have the fate of the young woman in the hands of the twelve middle-aged family men who are trying the case, by Friday. The trial will be resumed at 10 o'clock on Monday morning, with Mrs. De Saulles as the first witness.

RED CROSS TIME EXTENDED.

G. C. Tamblyn Says Brooklyn Persons Tried to Hurt Campaign.

The Red Cross drive for 200,000 members in Brooklyn, which was to have ended last night, is to be continued until next Friday. George O. Tamblyn, director of the Red Cross Membership Extension, said yesterday that one reason for extending the time was that an organized effort had been made by some persons in Brooklyn to prevent the success of the campaign.

"This has shown itself in most unexpected ways," said Mr. Tamblyn. "Through the excellent co-operation of the police and Secret Service men we are handling this in a most satisfactory manner. Brooklyn needs 200,000 members in the Red Cross, but it also should know who are American and who are un-American in this critical hour. I am confident that the people of Brooklyn will see to it that the 200,000 goal is actually reached in the extended time given."

RE-ELECT GOMPERS; LENNON DEFEATED

Labor Federation Makes Tobin Treasurer—Only Change in Roster of Officers.

TAINT OF PACIFISM DENIED

Tobin Himself Declares There Is None of It in Him—Ovation to Tobin as Well as to Gompers.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor for thirty-five years, was re-elected today, practically without opposition, and with him were returned to office every officer of the federation, except John B. Lennon, Treasurer, who was defeated by Daniel J. Tobin, President of the International Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union.

An effort to read into the defeat of Mr. Lennon a weakening of the position of President Gompers as a leader and a partial victory for the small group of pacifists which has opposed him was scouted by prominent federation men. It was declared that when it was decided by Mr. Tobin's friends to run him for the office Mr. Gompers announced an unequivocal policy of hands off.

It was further stated that the unions which lined up against Mr. Gompers on the indorsement of his war policies early in the convention today divided, the majority of them voting for Mr. Lennon. The vote for Treasurer stood: Tobin, 13,476; Lennon, 9,112. Mr. Tobin drawing his strength principally from the teamsters, machinists, miners, carpenters, bridge and structural ironworkers, and brewery workers.

No Pacifism in Tobin.

To make his position clear, Mr. Tobin, in accepting office, declared there was no "pacifism and anti-ism" in him.

"Since war was declared," he said, "I have tried to carry out the wishes of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and of President Wilson of the United States. I want no misunderstanding as to my position. With thousands of men in our union, there has not been one strike. We have not crippled industry during the war. We have been fighting an enemy from whom we may expect no mercy if he is victorious. We are trade unionists, but we are Americans first, and should be willing to make any sacrifice in this cause. I am human and have aspired for this office. In doing so I have done no wrong."

Mr. Tobin's statement was greeted with cheers. There was another demonstration when President Gompers spoke, pledging his undivided loyalty and effort to the cause of men who toil.

"In the most crucial period in the history of the labor movement and of the world," no liberty loving man, he said, would ask or seek peace now until the purposes for which the United States entered the conflict had been accomplished.

"We have declared ourselves in the fight to the end for freedom and democracy. There is no doubt where union labor stands," he said.

List of Officers Re-elected.

There were a few scattering votes against Mr. Gompers, and one against Frank Morrison for Secretary. The other officers elected were:

First Vice President, James Duncan, granite cutters.
Second Vice President, James O'Connell, machinists.
Third Vice President, William Mahon, street railway employes.
Fourth Vice President, Joseph F. Valentine, molders.
Fifth Vice President, John R. Alpine, plumbers.
Seventh Vice President, Frank Duffy, carpenters.
Eighth Vice President, William Green, miners.

The convention adopted a resolution submitted by the photo-engravers, printing pressmen, bookbinders, and typographical unions protesting against the change in rates on second-class postage included in the war revenue law. The resolution calls upon Congress to amend the war revenue law to eliminate the section, and requests that it be dealt with as a question of service rather than a war revenue.

It was found impossible to complete the work of the convention today, and a night session was called, at which it was hoped to clear the calendar and adjourn sine die. Next year's convention will be held at St. Paul in June. Mr. Gompers, it was announced, will visit Toronto next week as the guest of Premier Hearst.

The convention tonight adopted unanimously a resolution demanding new trials for Warren K. Billings and Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of murder resulting from the San Francisco bomb explosion. The resolution adopted was a substitute for a resolution submitted early in the convention by the San Francisco labor leaders. Its important change was the striking out of a provision calling on all federal and local unions to contribute to the defense of Billings and Mooney.

Denies Shortage of Labor.

The Investigating Committee on Labor Conditions reported to the convention that there was no labor shortage in the country at this time. On the contrary, the report declared that housing problems in cities where new industries had sprung up had not been properly dealt with, and said that this fact was responsible for much of the apparent dearth of labor. Seventy-five per cent of the women garment workers in New York City are out of work, it was declared, and big potteries at Camden, N. J., have been closed down. In the building trades also there are many unemployed, the investigators reported.

At 9:30 o'clock the convention adjourned sine die.

(By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The American Federation of Labor this morning adopted unanimously, the following recommendation of its Committee on Education:

"It is timely to insist that, while actual disloyalty to our country cannot be tolerated in our public schools or anywhere else, the public must carefully assure itself that charges of disloyalty, or of any other nature that may be peculiarly effective at the time, are not cloaks under which official superiors may attempt to secure retaliation for a self-respecting lack of subserviency on the part of teachers under them."

In fairness to the suspended teachers, please give this publicity.

CHARLES B. STILLMAN,
President American Federation of Teachers.

URGE WATERFRONT PAVING.

Shipping Agents Complain of Traffic Facilities.

Shipping agents along State Street and other thoroughfares around the waterfront are complaining of the condition of the roadway, which is so full of holes that horses are continually falling down. State Street is the principal avenue for the heavy traffic to South Ferry. Conditions in front of the Cunard and the French Line offices are said to be particularly bad.

The truckmen say that the roadbed should be made of cobble stones instead of wood blocks, which last no time and do not give the horses any grip in the Winter.

SEWER EXPLOSIONS SHAKE WEST SIDE

Sixty-eight Manhole Covers Shot Into the Air In and Near West End Avenue.

ONLY ONE PERSON HURT

Huge Iron Disks Fly High, and Explosion Shatters Window Glass in Apartment Buildings.

West End Avenue in the vicinity of Eighty-sixth Street at 12:35 yesterday afternoon was quite free of pedestrians and vehicles, when suddenly the silence of the neighborhood was shattered by a tremendously loud report like the crack of a cannon. A manhole cover shot into the air and smashed to bits. A rush of whitish yellow flame poured from the manhole, and like a torch twenty feet high burned several minutes. When the flame died down volumes of smoke poured from the sewer. The explosion shattered plate glass windows in the neighborhood and fragments of glass, some ground to fine dust like snow flakes, fell to the street from apartment house windows as high as the twelfth story.

The explosion in the first manhole, caused by the accumulation of gasoline dripping into the sewers from garages in the neighborhood, was followed in quick succession by a series of other explosions until twenty-four manhole covers on West End Avenue from Eighty-sixth Street to Seventy-ninth Street and in the side streets had blown up, some of them as high as five stories. In addition to these sixty-four manhole covers in the neighborhood were displaced and workmen from the Department of Sewers were sent to the scene to replace them.

The astonishing fact about the freak explosions was that the police received no report of any persons injured. George Beogh, who lives in the basement of 256 West Eighty-fourth Street, was knocked down by the force of the explosion and sustained an injury to the left thigh. He was attended and remained at home. This was the only real injury that could be traced to the explosions. Captain Michael R. Kelly of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station estimated that several thousand panes of glass had been shattered, doing a damage of about $10,000.

West End Avenue and the side streets, so quiet and deserted a moment before the series of explosions, became in a twinkling scenes of wild panic and excitement. Tenants of apartment houses called the superintendents on the telephone, making frantic inquiries concerning the explosions. Others rushed to the elevators and ran to the street. The doors of the West Side Club, 270 West Eighty-fourth Street, were open, and a score of women nearby fled into the club screaming and hysterical, shouting that the Germans had blown up the entire waterfront. Charles Ellis, a colored employe of the club, saw a woman, attired in a bathrobe, attempt to climb out on the window sill of the apartment house at 500 West End Avenue, the south side of which faces the club. The woman was dragged back into the room by a man.

Captain Kelly, with the reserves under Sergeants Baury and Verstedt, hurried to the scene of the explosions and formed police lines around the apartment houses, where bits of glass fell tinkling to the sidewalk for some time. Other policemen were sent into the buildings to free from the sashes the bits of glass that adhered in order to insure pedestrians safe use of the sidewalks.

The force of the explosion was greatest at West End Avenue and Eighty-fourth Street. On the southwest corner, at 498 West End Avenue, is a twelve-story apartment house in which thirty windows were shattered. Superintendent Curren, who was in the basement, was thrown four feet against a radiator, but was unhurt. He ran to the street door and calmed the tenants by assuring them that the only danger lay in going to the street and pointing out that the building, like most of the others in the neighborhood, was a solid iron structure for the most part.

The manhole cover in front of this building was shattered into small pieces by the force of the explosion, and in descending one of the pieces fell through the glass marquee of the apartment house opposite, at 495. This is also a twelve-story structure.

On the third floor the funeral services of Bessie Schulte, daughter of the late tobacco manufacturer, were going on. The vibration broke into bits twenty-one panes of glass in the Schulte apartment and unnerved Mrs. Rose Schulte and her two daughters, Antoinette and Lucille.

All but three houses on West Eighty-fourth Street between Broadway and West End Avenue were affected by the explosion. Seventeen windows in the Alamada, at 255, were shattered; fourteen at 256; nine at 227, and a lesser number in most of the remaining houses. Three buildings on this street, however, were untouched. These were the West Side Club, at 270, and the houses at 258 and 280. Just west of the West Side Club is the home of Frank Mills, an artist, at 272. Every window in this three-story brick structure was smashed. The San Jose, 500 West End Avenue, was badly battered on the Eighty-fourth Street side. The windows of the Wellesley, West End Avenue and Eighty-first Street, were smashed up as far as the sixth floor.

Inspector William Kline, who began an investigation for the Department of Sewers immediately after the explosion, said that his explanation was that they occurred as the result of gasoline from automobiles and garages trickling into the gas laden air of the sewers.

TIGER TAKES HEART WITH MURPHY BACK

Tammany Bread Line Almost in Smiles While Boss Talks It Over with "Al" Smith.

HYLAN'S DOOR SWINGS WIDE

But No Wigwam Chief Casts a Shadow Upon the Threshold—Editor Stirs Mayor-Elect.

Tammany men who years ago got their names upon the city payroll drew a long breath of relief yesterday morning when they read in the newspapers that the "Boss" was back. They had learned with sorrow only a few hours before his return that there would be nothing to expect in the patronage line until Mr. Murphy again occupied his chair behind the familiar desk in Tammany Hall, where the downtown Democratic breadline forms.

Mr. Murphy did not go near Tammany Hall yesterday, nor did he visit his uptown headquarters at Delmonico's, according to all accounts. He spent the forenoon at home catching up with correspondence which had piled up in his absence and which was brought over to the Murphy residence from Tammany Hall by the chief's confidential stenographer. He greeted a few members of the Tammany inner circle and talked with them with a view of learning something regarding local developments since his departure for French Lick Springs.

In the afternoon Mr. Murphy drove away in his motor car, bound for Good Ground, where he was said to be in conference with Sheriff Al Smith, who has seen more of Mayor-elect Hylan during the chief's absence than has any other Tammany man. Sheriff Smith recently bought a Summer home not far from the more pretentious abode of the Tammany leader.

Mr. Murphy did not make any attempt to see Mayor-elect Hylan before he left town, although Judge Hylan was at his headquarters, 50 East Forty-second Street, all afternoon, with the doors of his private room wide open most of the time. Just before Judge Hylan left his headquarters, he was asked:

"Have you seen Tammany Leader Murphy today, or has he communicated with you?"

"No," was the monosyllable answer.

That was all Judge Hylan was willing to say to newspaper men regarding the matter. From a source close to the Mayor-elect it was learned, however, that the return of Mr. Murphy will make no difference as far as the distribution of patronage is concerned. Mr. Hylan is not to be hurried about it. He has already announced that he would not begin to consider seriously and certainly would not announce any appointments prior to Dec. 15. There is no reason to believe that he will depart from this resolve because of the somewhat precipitate return of Mr. Murphy.

At the Hylan headquarters applications for places are being carefully tabulated as they are filed. There is known to be a long list of applicants for every place in the gift of the Mayor-elect. All are said to be from individuals, none from organizations on behalf of a member or other favored aspirant. In some instances applicants have filed indorsements from political leaders or organizations with their applications, but the name of Tammany Leader Murphy is said not to appear on any indorsement so far.

Judge Hylan was aroused yesterday by an editorial in a Brooklyn afternoon paper in which the municipal ownership program of the incoming administration was assailed and in which Judge Hylan was reminded that the disposal of the Court House site, which the incoming administration threatens to develop for some other purpose, and the proposed abolition of the Water Supply Board rested with the Republican Legislature and the Republican Governor. Then followed this summing up:

"After all, it is said and done, Albany dominates the situation. The Mayor himself will be removable by the Governor on charges."

"I notice in the editorial comment with reference to the program for municipal ownership of the incoming administration and the question of making serviceable use of the Manhattan Court House site, which has cost the people more than $14,000,000 to date, the suggestion that Albany dominates the situation in New York, and that I would be removable by the Governor," said Judge Hylan.

"If that editorial was written as a threat intended to block any progressive program the new administration may have in view for the aid of the people of this city I want it known that such threats have no terrors for me. I intend to serve the interests of the people to the best of my ability, and as far as it lies within my official powers to do so."

Among those who called on Mayor-elect Hylan at his headquarters yesterday were former Congressman Jefferson M. Levy and a delegation of real estate men, headed by Robert E. Dowling. The real estate men said that they had pledged their co-operation to Judge Hylan in his attempt to bring about budget reductions, and that they would submit some suggestions in writing at a later date.

Former Controller Bird S. Coler expressed surprise yesterday that he had been mentioned as a likely candidate for Police Commissioner, and one to whose advice Judge Hylan gave attentive ear.

"I have not spoken to Judge Hylan since election night, when I congratulated him upon his great victory," said the former Controller. "I know nothing about this talk of my being a candidate for Police Commissioner. I have been ill and out of touch with politics, and have not asked Judge Hylan to name me for any place."

FUSION COMMITTEE EXPENDED $573,995

E. S. Harkness, the Largest Contributor, Gave $10,000—Suffrage Party Spent $142,968.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The Fusion Committee of 1917 expended $573,995 in its unsuccessful attempt to obtain the re-election of Mayor Mitchel, according to the campaign expense statement of the committee filed with the Secretary of State today. The statement said that the receipts were $589,912. The opinion had been freely expressed in New York City that the campaign of the Fusion forces cost more than $1,000,000.

The receipts of the committee included a loan of $49,500 from William Hamlin Childs. Among the largest contributors were Edward S. Harkness, $10,000, and $5,000 each from Vincent Astor, Jacob H. Schiff, T. L. Chadbourne and Daniel Guggenheim. Mayor Mitchel's name did not appear as one of the contributors. Among the smaller contributions was one for $250 by Charles E. Hughes.

The William A. Prendergast Committee reported it had received $35,895, all of which was expended. George W. Perkins gave $7,000; Samuel A. Lewisohn, $10,000; William H. Raab, $3,000, and Samuel Guggenheim, $1,000.

The Woman's Suffrage Party of the City of New York reported receipts of $151,504, and expenditures of $142,968.

The campaign expense statements must be filed within twenty days after election, Monday, for the filing of the statements. Thus there is left one more day, Monday, for the filing of the statements. The statement of the Hylan managers has not yet been filed.

RULE ON LIBERTY BOND TAX.

McAdoo Exempts Income from Holdings Up to $5,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—A ruling was promulgated today by Secretary McAdoo clearing up the question as to the limit of tax emption of income from Liberty Loan bonds. The exemption is held to apply to the face value of Treasury certificates, Liberty bonds, and war savings certificates up to the sum of $5,000. Income from all amounts beyond this limit is subject to graduated income taxes and excess profits taxes.

The exchange of bonds of the first issue, which were entirely exempt from all manner of taxation, for bonds of the second issue carries no right to exemption. The text of the ruling follows:

"Holders, whether individuals, partnerships, associations or corporations, of Liberty bonds, Treasury certificates of indebtedness, and war savings certificates, authorized by the Act of Sept. 24, 1917, are entitled to exemption from all income and war excess profits taxes upon the interest received on a principal amount not to exceed $5,000 face value of such obligations. If, for example, the holder owns $5,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness, $7,000 4 per cent. Liberty bonds, and $2,000 war savings certificates, he will be entitled to exemption from graduated additional income taxes and war excess profits taxes upon only the interest received upon $5,000 of the aforesaid obligations.

"It is immaterial whether the 4 per cent. Liberty bonds were issued to the holder in exchange for Liberty bonds of the first series or Treasury certificates of indebtedness, or whether issued upon a new subscription. The exemption is upon the income from $5,000 face value of the obligations issued by authority of the aforesaid Act of Sept. 24, 1917."

WAR SCHEDULES IN MAIL SERVICE

EVOLVE SIMPLE METHOD

Military Work Makes Early Posting of Letters Imperative, as Several Trains Have Been Dropped.

Beginning last night at 12 o'clock the Post Office Department put into effect a new wartime schedule for outgoing mails from New York City, which makes about seventy more or less important changes in the time of departure of the mails in the United States and Canada. The net result of the changes has been to shift the time of departure forward from thirty minutes to an hour. Several trains which hitherto carried a large share of the mail have been dropped or consolidated.

As was pointed out by postal officials yesterday the new schedule means a great deal to persons who have important letters to post. These letters must be deposited in the mail box now much earlier or a delay of from twelve to twenty-four hours will result. Bulletin 87, which will be posted today in lobbies of the General Post Office and substations, will describe in full each change, and Postmaster Patten urges that all citizens take careful note of the various changes in time.

These changes, it was said, have been forced on the Post Office by the fact that war conditions were causing a holdup on the railroads, delaying trains from an hour to two or three hours in runs of 200 miles and over. Freight congestion has forced some of the delay, but by far the greater part in the passenger and mail service is due to the greatly accelerated passenger traffic all over the country. Soldiers on leave who are going from place to place in large bodies have forced the railroad companies to practically double the length of their trains in many instances.

This increase in the number of cars carried slows up the running time of the train. The trains run late and important connections are missed. It is to avoid this missing of connections that the Post Office Department has decided on a country-wide rearrangement of mail schedules.

Some of the general changes are as follows: Mails that now go out in the evening at 6 o'clock are moved up to 4:30 for these points: Los Angeles, Quincy and Springfield, Ill.; Indianapolis and Terre Haute, Ind.; Louisville, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, Cincinnati, Columbus, and Dayton, and for Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, and parts of Ohio. The 6 o'clock mail to Pittsburgh has been eliminated.

Mails leaving at 1:30 P. M. have been moved forward three-quarters of an hour, affecting Canada, Manitoba, British Columbia, most of the Northwestern States, and many New York and Middle West cities. This affects Chicago, Detroit, and all points on the New York Central north of Albany. Virtually all the same points are affected by the abandonment of the earlier 5:30 P. M. mail service west, and advancing it an hour and a half to 4 P. M.

Mails for Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and Ottawa, Canada, are advanced half an hour, from 8 o'clock in the evening to 7:30. These are only examples of the changes made which must be inquired into by large users of postal facilities, such as newspapers and magazines, so that they may make their deliveries in bulk at post offices sufficiently early to avoid delays.

Some of the individual mail trains which have been changed or consolidated were announced yesterday as follows: Train 11 on the Pennsylvania Railroad making connections with West and Southwest, which was leaving at 2:45 A. M., will leave one hour earlier, or at 1:45 A. M. Train 105 over the Pennsylvania which left at 2:10, will continue on this schedule, but there will be a change in the manner in which the mail cars are handled on Sunday. Train 105, operated daily except Sunday, when the mail cars were put on Train 107, leaving at 2:30 A. M. Train 105 will now operate daily, including Sunday at 2:10, and Train 107 will be withdrawn.

Train 45 over the New York Central Lines for the West which left New York at 2:50 A. M., now becomes Train 43, leaving at 2:15 A. M. There will be no train known as 45 under the new schedule. Train 198 over the New York Central for the West, which left at 2:10 A. M., will be changed to leave at 2:45 A. M.

A few of the evening trains have been changed as follows: Train 45 over the Pennsylvania, which left New York at 6:56 P. M. for Pittsburgh, will leave at 5:22. Train 139, over the same road, which left New York daily at 9:45 P. M., will now leave at 9:20, except Sundays, when it will leave at 9:45 as formerly. Train 35 over the New York Central for Chicago, which left New York at 9:30 P. M., will now leave at 8:40 P. M.

The change, it was said by postal authorities, would affect in the operation of both the Post Office Department and the railroads.

HARRIS TO SUCCEED CAPPS.

Chief of Bureau of Yards and Docks Will Join the Shipping Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Rear Admiral Frederick R. Harris, Chief of the Naval Bureau of Yards and Docks, will succeed Rear Admiral Capps as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the United States Shipping Board and will represent the navy in that organization. Under the recent readjustment of the Fleet Corporation, Charles A. Piez, selected as Vice President, was placed in actual charge of construction. Admiral Harris will cooperate with him.

Admiral Harris was graduated from the Stevens Institute of Technology in 1896 and was made a Lieutenant Commander in the Navy Corps of Civil Engineers in 1903. He served as the principal assistant on construction at the new navy yard and drydocks at Charleston, S. C., and was in charge of construction of the new naval station at Guantanamo, Cuba.

In 1907 he became assistant to the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks in Washington, D. C., and in 1909 was appointed head of the Department of Public Works of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. He was transferred to Philadelphia in 1915.

TO GUARD SOLDIERS IN CIVIL RIGHTS

Judge Advocate General Crowder Appeals to Lawyers of the Country to Help.

WAR DEPARTMENT LIMITED

And Proper Protection of Vital Personal Affairs Must Come from Other Sources.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—An appeal to the legal profession of the country to regard the defense of a soldier's civil rights as the "highest cause of every lawyer" was issued tonight by Judge Advocate General Crowder.

Pointing out the legal restrictions under which his department operated, he urged that as a matter of simple justice every effort should be made to protect the interests of men who are called to the colors and consequently are unable to give personal attention to their business affairs and the material safeguarding of their families.

Since the war began, General Crowder said, several thousand lawyers have volunteered their services to the Judge Advocate General's department, but for reasons of military organization and because of the statute law it has been possible to accept only about 150. They will be charged with the administering of justice within the military forces, but meanwhile the soldiers' civil liabilities continue.

"The law," said General Crowder's statement, "cannot assail one who had risked his life that it might live. Unless the law intervenes, what will become of the family rent that would have been paid, the note that would have been taken up, the debts that could easily have been met, the suit that could have been defended, if the country had not called the soldier to its defense? To adjust these matters and give the soldier a fair degree of protection was the purpose of the Soldiers' Civil Rights bill, which passed the House unanimously in the closing days of the session of Congress, recently expired, but which reached the Senate too late for official legislative action.

"The Secretary of War has decided that it is the immediate duty of the Judge Advocate General's department to furnish every officer and enlisted man of our army with the legal aid necessary for the arrangement of his personal affairs or for their final disposition in case of death.

"More than this, however, this department cannot do. We cannot follow up a soldier's rights at local law, we cannot either help him assert or maintain them there. In many cases this must be done by the bar itself as a part of its professional obligations. To all such cases lawyers should, and doubtless will, assume that lofty, sympathetic, and patriotic attitude which heretofore they have frequently shown that they are so able and willing to assume upon proper occasion."

Pennsylvania and New York hold the record for the best enlistments, both of which States have about doubled their quota. The enlistments in the Central States yesterday follow:

Lambert Gathering That Teaches a Lesson To Buyers of Christmas Jewelry

ON a fair day not long ago, a day that seemed to have been left out of late September, the Lambert Jewelry Store was well filled with customers buying Christmas presents. They would not wait until the store, the cars, the very sidewalks, are simply packed with holiday shoppers. They would not wait until snow, rain, cold and sleet hold up traffic and make everybody uncomfortable and cross.

If you could have seen those people laughing and chatting as they picked out the presents that are to make their friends and relatives happy Christmas morning, choosing and comparing articles in perfect ease without crowding, jostling and waiting for a salesman's attention, you would, we know, have felt like making your own purchases at Lamberts at once.

Those people we speak of were as much at home in the Lambert store as in their own houses. We want you to feel at home here, too. Ask all the questions you please.

Many of our customers, having selected their presents of Diamond, Platinum and Solid Gold Jewelry and Rings, Solid Gold, Gold-filled or Sterling Silver Watches, and Silverware, have asked us to keep these articles locked in our stout steel vaults until they are wanted. That may not be until Christmas Eve, and the articles will not be paid for until called for. Let us offer the same convenience to you. Ask any salesman for all details of this plan to save your time.

SMALL GIFTS AIDED Y. M. C. A. WAR FUND

Reports Show That More Than 2,000,000 Individual Contributions Were Made.

Widow Gave Proceeds of the Sale of a Bushel of Sweet Potatoes—Heirlooms Disposed Of.

Reports to the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. show that more than 2,000,000 individuals made personal contributions to the association's war fund which late returns place at more than $50,000,000, it was announced yesterday. An analysis of the reports shows that, while contributions from large corporations were a striking feature of the campaign which closed last Monday night, millions of dollars came from small contributors in little communities throughout the United States. The estimate given out at the Council's headquarters here is that three out of every four of all of the small towns in the United States contributed. In New England, 85 per cent. of the towns contributed, meaning that practically every community of a population of 500 and over took part in the campaign.

Incidents of the campaign were narrated in a statement given out by the Council and show the human side of the gift of $50,000,000.

There was a flood of subscriptions from students and faculties in colleges, universities and preparatory schools. A boy, working his way through State College, Pennsylvania, by washing dishes, subscribed $100. A Kansas college donated the entire proceeds from the sale of the college annual.

Instances of unusual guts by women were a feature of the campaign. A woman in Brooklyn, who refused to give her name, walked into the central headquarters and gave a $1,000 bill for the war fund. A woman in a little country town near Los Angeles, at a luncheon of the local committee, took off her diamond earrings and sold them for the benefit of the fund.

In Gadsden, Ala., a widow gave her mite in a bushel of sweet potatoes, which was put up at auction. The biggest "yam" brought $10.00 and the bushel $47. The buyers then gave back the potatoes and they were taken to Anniston, Ala., to be auctioned off again.

A woman with an invalid husband, living on a mortgaged farm near Tuscaloosa, Ala., having only 18 cents in money, gave three family heirloom silver spoons more than 100 years old, which the committee displayed in a jeweler's window with a card reading "The greatest gift." The citizens of Tuscaloosa then raised their $7,500 donation to $10,000, and, in addition, raised enough money to pay the mortgage on the farm.

An Oakland, Cal., woman, owning two automobiles, sold one and gave the money to the war fund.

In Lake Forest, Ill., every school child subscribed and every household was represented on the list of givers.

A descendant of John Marshall, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, living near Richmond, Va., gave an old key-winding gold watch which the Chief Justice had carried and for which $300 had been refused.

More than 80,000 boys pledged themselves to give $10 each. One high school senior class sold its new class sweaters and turned the money into the fund. In Newport, R. I., a boy called at headquarters and slipped a roll of bills into the hand of the man in charge. When counted it was found to be $35. "One for every million," he said.

When asked if he had collected it he replied, "No, I worked for it all."

"Isn't that too much for you to give?" the Secretary asked.

"No," he answered. "I have two brothers 'over there.'"

Harry Sachs of New York City received a letter from his son on the firing line in France asking him to help the Y. M. C. A. fund. Mr. Sachs sent in a check for $1,500.

Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the National War Work Council, yesterday gave out the following statement concerning the results of the campaign:

"The response to the appeal of the War Work Council for funds to meet the needs of our enlisted men at the front went far beyond our expectations. We regard it, however, as almost providential, because since the $35,000,000 budget was decided upon events in the war zone have created such increased needs that the $50,000,000 the people have given is none too much.

"Two things are most gratifying to us, and should be to every one who gave. One of these is the receipt of scores of letters from our soldier boys telling how much they appreciate what the Y. M. C. A. is doing for them, and asking that we do not fail to extend the same care and comforts to the hundreds of thousands of other young men on their way to the front. The other is the response that came from the soldiers' appeal, which we transmitted to the American people, who, utterly without respect to color, class, creed, or financial circumstances, gave so generously of their funds."

Dr. Mott added that another gratifying feature of the campaign was the confidence in the management of the Y. M. C. A. manifested by the people, and said that this confidence would not be disappointed, pointing out that George W. Perkins and other business men had charge of the association's financial affairs.

RED CROSS SEEKS WORKERS

John Magee, director of the Atlantic (military) division of the American Red Cross, has during the last three days received applications for more than 400,000 knitted articles, and for large quantities of surgical dressings and hospital garments. The knitted goods, such as sweaters, socks, mittens, and mufflers, are to be sent to the soldiers in camps and army posts and to the men on American warships. An urgent appeal is made that the goods be ready and delivered before Christmas at the different destinations.

Adolph Lewisohn has placed at the disposal of the division a workroom at Eighty-sixth Street and Broadway, which is under the superintendence of Mrs. G. Richard Davis, and in six weeks the work has increased so that 100 more women workers are needed to receive instruction in knitting by hand and by machine.

COLUMBIA GIFT IS $48,000.

Leads All Colleges in Students' Friendship War Fund.

Columbia University's total subscription to the Students' Friendship War Fund was brought to more than $48,000 when the campaign closed yesterday. This exceeded the amount raised by any other university in the country. The quota set for the university was $30,000. Only three other universities besides Columbia reached the $25,000 mark—Yale, which finished second, with $46,000; Harvard, third, with $45,000, and the University of Minnesota, fourth, with $27,000.

The figures for the leading colleges are:

Columbia	$48,483
Yale	46,800
Harvard	45,000
University of Minnesota	27,000
University of Pittsburgh	23,000
Iowa State College	22,000
Ohio State College	21,000
University of California	20,000
University of Illinois	20,000
Purdue University	18,800
Wellesley	16,000
Vassar	14,000
Western Reserve University	11,000
Leland Stanford, Junior, University	11,000
Northwestern University	10,000
Bowdoin	4,800
Amherst	4,000
Dartmouth	2,500

The college department at Columbia raised $30,000, exceeding the quota by $800. Teachers College, with a quota of $15,000, reported a net subscription of $27,850. Barnard nearly doubled its quota, with a total of $8,033. The College of Physicians and Surgeons reported $2,300.

HELP FOR JEWS IN JAPAN.

Immigrant Society Sends Agent to Relieve Refugees There.

The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America announced yesterday that Samuel Mason, as special representative of the organization, has started for Japan to investigate conditions among the Jewish emigrants stranded in that country. Before sailing from a Pacific port, Mr. Mason will visit the Seattle and San Francisco branches of the society. Mr. Mason carries with him letters of credence from the State Department, the United States Labor Department, the Japanese and the Russian Embassies, Jacob H. Schiff, Abram I. Elkus, Louis Marshall, Simon Wolf, and John L. Bernstein, President of the Aid Society.

Mr. Mason's principal mission is to extend prompt relief to the refugees now stranded between Harbin, Manchuria, and Yokohama, Japan.

"Considering the present world conditions and the best interest of our own country these unfortunates will be aided and advised according to their physical, mental, and moral state," said Mr. Bernstein, "such as are admissible under our immigration laws will, if possible, be assisted to return to their native countries, while proper connection will be made for the others with their relatives and friends in the United States.

"For seven years Mr. Mason was general manager of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, and is at present one of its Directors and Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. It was under his guidance that the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society developed into a national organization, with branches at Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Seattle.

"The society decided upon sending a special representative to Japan in response to urgent demands for help which had come from Yokohama. There are at least 3,000 stranded Jewish emigrants between that city and Harbin, Manchuria, and most of them are women and children eager to join the heads of their families already settled in the United States. It is estimated that several thousand more are stranded at different points in Siberia. Several weeks ago the society cabled, through Jacob H. Schiff, $3,000 to B. W. Fleisher, publisher of The Japan Advertiser, to meet the immediate needs of those refugees who, according to the report of the Department of State, were in danger of being exploited. A temporary home has been opened for them in Yokohama, and Mr. Mason is empowered to take such further steps as will assure their safety."

AMERICAN DESERTER SENTENCED TO DEATH

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—While the death penalty has been imposed on an enlisted man of the American Army, who is of German birth, on his conviction of desertion, it was indicated today at the War Department that the findings of the court-martial would be overruled and sentence commuted to a long term of imprisonment.

The soldier was stationed at Panama, and there appears to be little doubt that after his desertion he endeavored to make his way to Germany, presumably for military service there. He was charged after his apprehension, however, only with desertion, and the question of his intention to join the enemy forces was not developed at his trial.

It has not been the custom in any army, even in time of war, to impose the death penalty for desertion unless the act was in the face of the enemy or unless there was evidence to show that the purpose of the offender was more than merely an attempt to evade military service. The view of the court-martial which tried the soldier in question evidently was that there was intent to join the enemy, but as that was not made clear in the trial proceedings, the commanding officer of the Panama garrison recommended the court be overruled, and that a term of imprisonment be substituted.

While there is reason to believe that officials here concur in the views of the comander at Panama, it is plainly evident at the War Department that there is no inclination to show mercy to men who desert in the face of the enemy or to enemy aliens found in the ranks as spies.

GUEST ON SUNKEN WARSHIP.

Symington Seeks Reimbursement for Loss on the Indefatigable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Through a claim for damage for loss of personal effects, it developed today that Commander Powers Symington, U. S. N., the American naval attache at London, was a guest aboard the British Battleship Indefatigable at the time of the Jutland battle in May, 1916. Commander Symington's claim covered all his personal belongings aboard the warship, from which he had to scramble to another vessel when she went into action.

The Controller of the Treasury, to whom the claim for damages was submitted, ruled against allowing any indemnity, because of legal "red tape," but it was informally indicated that reimbursement ought to be made. The claim was previously ruled against by the Auditor for the Navy Department.

Another claim, similarly refused, was put in by Colonel H. L. Newbold to recover $2,200 which he advanced on his own salary and those of his clerks while acting as military attache at Constantinople before we severed diplomatic relations with Turkey. Colonel Newbold was obliged to pay a premium of from 250 to 290 per cent. to obtain Turkish gold with which to pay the salaries.

Since this expenditure involves "extraordinary expenses, for which the ordinary appropriations for the army are not available," the Controller of the Treasury has informed Colonel Newbold that he will have to appeal to Congress for relief.

MEN OF THE DRAFT PRAISED BY HUGHES

Tells Thomas Hunter Association There Is Every Reason to be Proud of Them.

SURROUNDINGS ARE GOOD

"They Are Drawn from All Parts and Races," He Says, "to Fight for All."

Charles Evans Hughes, Chairman of the New York City District Board of Appeals, in the course of a speech at the twenty-second annual reunion and dinner of the Thomas Hunter Association, at the Hotel Astor last night, paid a glowing tribute to the men of the draft armies. He did not mention names, but many present regarded what he said as an answer to the attacks recently made on the American forces by Mrs. Grace Humiston. Mr. Hughes, who spoke with authority, declared that conditions in these camps were splendid and said it was due the people of America that they should know that their soldiers are being well cared for, that the conditions surrounding them are good, and that they have every reason in the world to be proud of the men who comprise the personnel of the great draft armies now in the making.

Supreme Court Justice Bartow S. Weeks, President of the Thomas Hunter Association, which is made up of men who attended the famous old Grammar School 35, presided, and the other speakers were ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard, the Rev. Dr. Warner W. Giles of Orange, and Major Wallace McCutcheon of the British Army. All referred to the war and agreed that it must be won by the patriotic efforts of all the people of the United States, who must, as Dr. Giles put it, "stand as one behind President Wilson until the victory comes."

Mr. Hughes, who is a graduate of the old grammar school, was the first speaker. The first part of his speech was reminiscent of the days of 1874 and 1875, when he attended the school, after which he made his plea for unity on the part of the people.

"America," he said, "has today the priceless privilege and opportunity to win the war for democracy. For several months I have been at work doing what I could to aid in the selection of America's remarkable draft army. Until this time we may have talked about a melting pot, but we never really knew what a melting pot was. Today we know, and out of this great melting pot is to come our weapon of greatest strength. We today have grounds for the most serious thought, and there is none of us, I hope, but who feels deeply the peril and uncertainty of this hour.

"But there is nevertheless a great deal for which we should be devoutly thankful. There is today in America an unexampled spirit of co-operation everywhere manifest among our people. The nation is today co-ordinating its strength and resources as never before, and we are producing an army which, in a peculiar degree, comprises all the elements which have made this country great. Do not misunderstand what it means to have men drawn for service who represent every race and every stock. To not for one moment think that men from one part of the city are drawn to protect those of another part. They are drawn from all parts and from all races to fight to the best of their ability for all. It is now all for all.

"We are all fighting together and we are all in it. And America will come out of this war with a new sense of freedom, a new sense of unity, and of devotion to a common cause. I bring good news to you from our camps. The men are well treated and they are properly and sensibly cared for. They are being well trained and everything that is being done in their behalf is a credit to our country. The conditions in those camps are good, and I want to say that my work in connection with the drafting of these men has strengthened my confidence in the permanence of the foundation of our democratic institutions.

"The Allies are waiting on the United States, and the question as to whether this war will be won or not is a question that will be answered by the United States. Our resources and our men are the resources and the men which at this time must be depended upon to win the war. Let us as one man go forth to the battlefields of Europe that autocracy shall be no more and that America shall be safe to continue her course in the interests of human liberty."

Dr. Giles pleaded for a united nation behind the President and said the time has come when France and our other allies must be saved. Russia, he added, is out of the war, but despite all that has happened in that country the United States and their allies should be patient with that unfortunate land.

"I beseech you, whether you be Democrats, or Republicans, or Prohibitionists, or what not," said Dr. Giles, "to stand as one behind the President of these United States. I have a boy of 18 years who is going to fight in this war, and the peril of his comrades and himself on the fields of Europe is peril enough for them. We must remember collapsed Russia. And remembering Russia, let us have nothing to do with socialism."

Mr. Gerard said he indorsed every word said by Mr. Hughes and Dr. Giles as to the seriousness of the present situation, and he agreed with them that the issue rests with the United States.

Testing a New Traffic Signal.

The Police Department last night began testing a new signal in place of the semaphore in order to attempt a reduction of street accidents. The new device is a revolving flash light, flashing red and green as signals to "stop" and "go." The signal is the invention of Foster Milliken, an engineer, and is being tried out at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street.

WOMAN SUES MRS. MELLEN.

Wife of Former New Haven President Charged with Alienation.

The complaint in a $100,000 suit against Mrs. Katherine Lloyd Livingston Mellen, wife of Charles S. Mellen, former President of the New Haven Railroad, for alienating the affections of Henry Douglas Brown, assistant manager of the Hotel Vanderbilt, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Margaret B. Brown. The papers were served on Mrs. Mellen at the Vanderbilt, where she has made her home for some time.

Mrs. Brown in her complaint refers to Mrs. Mellen as "a married woman, possessed of large means, living with her husband," who "well knew the plaintiff to be the wife of said Brown." Mrs. Brown alleges that Mrs. Mellen wrote many letters containing expressions of devotion and affection to Brown, gave him presents, and constantly sought and obtained opportunities to be in his society when the plaintiff was not present. The plaintiff says she pleaded with Mrs. Mellen to cease her attentions to Brown, but that her entreaties were regarded with "scorn and contempt."

The Browns were married Jan. 6, 1914. The plaintiff says she lived happily with her husband until Mrs. Mellen won him away from her.

Patriotic Rally of School Teachers.

The American Defense Society, the Teachers' Interests' Organization and several other societies will hold a patriotic rally of school teachers at the De Witt Clinton High School on Tuesday night at eight o'clock. Among the speakers will be Thomas W. Churchill of the Board of Education, Cleveland Moffett and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

HOLIDAY CHEER FOR TROOPS IN CAMP

Clubs, Societies, and Private Families Will Entertain Soldiers at Dinner.

Elaborate plans have been made by many individuals and organizations to provide Thanksgiving cheer for soldiers and sailors stationed in or about New York City. Many officers and privates will be dined in the clubs and in the hotels, and numerous families in this city and in the cities of New Jersey have invited at least two soldiers to share their Thanksgiving meal.

The camps will practically be deserted except by the guard, and these soldiers will enjoy an old-fashioned dinner prepared by the army cooks. Hundreds of soldiers at Camp Upton will be the guests of farmers and families of nearby towns.

The National Service Commission of New York City will entertain several thousand soldiers at dinner in the Twelfth Regiment Armory. After the meal there will be what the commission describes as a get-together meeting, which will take on some of the features of an old home week. The dinner will be served by volunteers and workers in Mrs. Donn C. Barber's canteen service under the National League for Women's Service. The dinner, which will be served at 5 o'clock, will be preceded by a band concert and a vaudeville entertainment.

Police Commissioner Woods has obtained from Washington a list of all army and naval officers stationed in and about New York, and he has written to all asking that they notify their men that many of the clubs of the city are open to them all. To the men who are in doubt as to what clubs to go to, Commissioner Woods suggests that they call at Police Headquarters, where all information will be given.

Pledges of clubs and societies to entertain were obtained by the Patriotic Service League, which has been making plans for dinners for the men in uniform for several weeks. It has already received invitations from private families asking 3,500 soldiers and sailors to share the family meal. These invitations have already been sent through the officers to the enlisted men and have been accepted. In most cases the invitations were general in character, but there were some families that asked for men from different States. One family without children that formerly lived in Kentucky has asked that five Kentucky soldiers dine with them. In another case Western men were designated. So far the league has provided for 6,000 sailors and soldiers.

Record of Government Departments at Washington Since War Began.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Twenty thousand employes have been added to the Government departments in Washington since the declaration of war, the Civil Service Commission announces. The commission estimates that the population of the capital has increased 40,000.

The War Department has added 5,200 employes to its Washington offices and the Navy Department about 3,500, including 800 women who enlisted as yeomen and who are doing clerical work. In order to provide living accommodations for the added employes, the Government has rented many new buildings, including apartment houses.

Including the new employes in Washington, the Civil Service Commission has certified for appointment since April nearly 125,000 persons in the field and departmental service.

URGES CO-OPERATION TO CUT LIVING COST

Speakers, at Conference, Tell of Benefits in Selling Food Direct to Consumers.

FISH CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Dealers Will Acquaint Housewives with Prevailing Prices Through Food Administrator.

A conference of the Consumers' Co-operative Societies of the Eastern States began yesterday morning in the Public Library at 228 East Twenty-third Street. The purpose of the conference is to take steps looking toward the national unification of consumers' societies of the country. The societies of the Central States met in September and formed a federation. The morning session was devoted to organizing and appointing committees.

These societies buy at the cheapest price the necessities of life and distribute them to the members without profit. In some localities this saving comes as a discount from dealers who make agreement with the local society or through stores organized by groups of consumers and managed by them for the good of members of the organization. Forty stores are represened at the conference.

In his opening address Dr. James Peter Warbasse, President of the Co-operative League of America, said that the world is witnessing a debate of the question whether the people shall continue to maintain a privileged class who may live by the toil and industry of others. Co-operation must take the place of profit-making and antagonism, he said.

"In our own country," he said, "the motive of profit-making business is supreme. Co-operation has scarcely yet begun. The people are ready for it. Never was it so much needed. We have taken the first steps only. There are in the United States about 1,000 co-operative consumers' societies. These scattered units are the seed out of which the movement must grow. But as yet the second necessary step for a co-operative movement has not been taken. These societies are for the most part struggling alone. In their isolation they are making their mistakes, enjoying their successes, and carrying on the unequal contest with the forces of business. Most of them are destined to fail because of their isolation. The time has come for the second step in this country. It was never more pressing. The American co-operative movement will enter upon a career of success that will astonish the world when these isolated societies are once federated into a single organization."

Labor Indorses Plan.

James W. Sullivan, said to represent Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, declared that the Federation had indorsed the plan of the league in selling foodstuffs direct to the consumer. He declared that labor is sure that the plan of co-operative buying will reduce the high cost of living.

Scott H. Perky, Secretary of the league, said that one trouble was that the co-operative societies had kept apart from each other. He said harmonious action was needed.

Much interest was displayed yesterday by consumers and dealers over the action of the Joint Food Commission in fixing the prices for cold-storage turkeys for Thanksgiving. There is an apparent scarcity of fresh-killed turkeys on the market, and, according to F. Q. Foy, price expert, 90 per cent. of the turkeys sold in this market last week were cold storage.

Mr. Foy said that good turkeys should weigh about eight pounds, be plump-breasted, full of thighs, with the back well covered with flesh, and the fat evenly distributed.

Henry Moskowitz, City Commissioner of Markets, is having cards printed giving the price of turkeys agreed upon, and these will be distributed to the retail trade for display in shops.

John J. Dillon, Chief of the Bureau of Food and Markets, said that the prices for turkeys fixed by the commission were higher than those that had prevailed in the wholesale market. He said that Texas plains at wholesale had been 20 to 23 cents; while the Food Administration had fixed the prices at 23 to 25 cents a pound. Mr. Dillon said also that the United States Government had bought 300,000 pounds of turkeys, and 200,000 pounds of beef for the army and navy through contractors, instead of getting them direct from the wholesalers. Had the Government bought direct, he said, much money could have been saved.

George T. Moon, Chairman of the Wholesale Fish Commission, said that the fish dealers were planning an advertising campaign to acquaint housewives with the various phases of the fish market. He said he will supply Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator, with the daily prevailing prices of fish and information for housewives about the best ways to prepare fish. One fish dealer told Mr. Williams that no one should eat two eggs in the morning. An egg and a fishcake would prove more nourishing, he said.

Hope to Benefit Consumer.

Many of the large retail and wholesale dealers in the grocery business are contemplating a system of selling that will, it is said, materially cut down overhead charges and be of material benefit to the consumers. This plan has been introduced here by S. W. Roth, editor and publisher of the Retailers Journal and the Wholesale Grocer of Chicago. Mr. Roth yesterday said the system is one of economy with the purchaser getting the major benefit. It reverses the usual order of business with the retailer, which is 75 per cent. credit and 25 per cent. cash. In some stores where the system is already working, Mr. Roth says that the entire credit business has been wiped out, and that by the customers themselves, who get the benefit of the saving. A charge of 1 cent for each dollar is made by the grocer for carrying the cash accounts for a month. This pays part of the cost of bookkeeping and clerk hire and it falls entirely upon the customer who wishes to have goods charged. Under the present system the charges for carrying accounts are proportioned out so that the cash as well as the credit customer each bears a share of this carrying charge.

Deliveries are cut down by an added cost of 5 cents a package, no matter how large or how small in size. This also encourages the cash and carry plan of selling, Mr. Roth said. In the final analysis, the deviser of the plan said, the customer saves from 12 to 20 cents on the dollar; the retailer makes the same profit, and increases his business with less overhead charges. The reason for this increase in business, he said, is obvious, for the storekeepers putting the plan in operation can lower prices, for he is under less expense than the stores about him. The wholesaler reaps the benefit through the increase in sales.

THREATENS TO SEIZE MICHIGAN COAL MINES

Garfield Warns Operators of Federal Power—Orders Relief for New England.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Complaints reached Dr. H. A. Garfield, Fuel Administrator, today that some of the Michigan operators had refused to supply coal as directed. He sent this telegram to W. K. Prudden, the Michigan State Fuel Administrator:

"If Michigan operators refuse to ship in accordance with prices fixed by you under my authority I will take possession of the mines. Serve notice to that effect if necessary, prefacing same by statement that action is by order of the United States Fuel Administration."

Dr. Garfield served a similar notice yesterday on operators of Oklahoma, who announced that they would not meet the orders of the Fuel Administration.

To relieve the coal shortage in New England Dr Garfield today directed all coal mines which are under contract to supply New England customers with coal by water carriers to deliver their maximum monthly requirements. The order will become effective Dec. 1.

The order also gives preference to New England shipments of coal by rail over all shipments, except coal requisitioned for railroad use and for the Government. Producers holding New England contracts subject to the order are directed to file with the Fuel Administration within ten days complete data as to their contracts.

Explaining the necessity for the action Dr. Garfield said:

"The quantity of bituminous coal moving by trans-shipment at Atlantic tidewater ports to New England ports is inadequate for the needs of the portion of the New England States supplied through such New England ports. Unless the quantity of coal so moving to New England is increased immediately there will be great difficulty in deliveries to New England after the beginning of Winter of sufficient bituminous coal needed for the operation of the industries producing army and navy supplies, for public utilities and for domestic use."

Authority is given in the order to James J. Storrow of Boston, New England Fuel Administrator, to supervise the distribution of water-carried coal after it reaches New England ports. The order provides:

"In any case in which the New England Fuel Administrator is of the opinion that by reason of this order an unduly large quantity of bituminous coal is being received by any person or corporation as compared with the need of others, the Administrator may order that the party receiving the excess shall sell such quantity thereof to others designated by the Administrator."

HOOVER REPORTS GAIN IN FLOUR PRODUCTION

Also Announces That Prices Are Adjusting Themselves to Fixed Scale for Wheat.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Marked increase in flour production and normal deliveries of wheat by farmers were noted today by Food Administrator Hoover, in his October report to Congress. He reported that wholesale and retail flour prices were rapidly adjusting themselves to the fixed wheat price.

"Country deliveries of wheat," the report said, "show a large increase over those of last month, and an analysis based on previous years' percentages indicates that the normal percentage of this year's crop has left the farm. A large part of the movement of wheat is being directed from the point of origin to the mills, eliminating the transportation burden caused by shipment to the terminals and reshipment from there to the mills.

"With very few exceptions mills are being supplied to the extent of their need, and an even distribution of wheat among them is being maintained. Mills are also running at a higher percentage of operation than is usual at this time of year, and the production of flour as compared with that of a year ago shows a marked increase.

"The price of flour is generally at the mills fairly reflecting the wheat price, and the wholesale and retail flour prices are rapidly adjusting themselves to the stabilized wheat price.

"The policy of encouraging seed reserves and of forming mill reserves where exhaustion of supplies seemed imminent without them has been extended.

"A voluntary agreement has been made in certain sections of the country, notably on the Pacific Coast, by which the grain corporation assumed charges on wheat carried in country elevators and warehouses in return for an agreement to permit the grain corporation to direct the disposition of such wheat. The purpose of this agreement is to preserve wheat for mill reserves, and also to prevent the country dealer from lowering his price to the producers because of charges which may accrue on wheat awaiting car service."

Receipts of $40,438,000 from grain sales and expenditures of $43,446,000 for grain purchases during October were reported.

Bread prices advanced 55 per cent. during the sixteen months ended Oct. 1, while the price of flour advanced 249 per cent. in the same period, but on Oct. 1 had declined to 128 per cent. above the July, 1916, price, according to a chart presented by the baking industry today to the Food Administration. The analysis shows the average cost of other bread ingredients advanced 194 per cent. during that time, but on Oct. 1 had declined until they were but 119 per cent. higher. Shortening increased 102 per cent., fuel 65 per cent. and sugar 32 per cent.

PACKING INDUSTRY UNDER RESTRICTION

Meat Prices to be Lowered and Profits Curbed, Division Food Chief Announces.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Regulation of the packing industry, effective as of Nov. 1, so that the price of meat to the retailer and consumer may be both stable and cheaper, was announced today by Joseph P. Cotton, Chief of the Meat Division of the United States Food Administration.

In accordance with the announced policy of the Food Administration to abolish speculation and unfair profits, Mr. Cotton in his statement to the packers declared that profits in the meat business must in no case exceed 2.5 per cent. of the sales. Moreover, the annual earnings of the five big packers cannot exceed 9 per cent. on the average capital necessarily used in the business.

Detailed rules and regulations are to be issued to define the general principles outlined and to prevent diversions or concealments of profits, and packers accounts are to be subject to inspection at all times, Mr. Cotton said. He also declared his intention to protect the small packers.

"The five large packers," said Mr. Cotton, "stand in a different class. They have vital and important services to perform to the National Government in this war. Upon them rests the burden of preparing the bulk of the meat food products which our army and the armies of our allies require.

"It has been determined that the meat business of the large packer shall be subjected to the same restriction as that of the small packer. That is, a 2.5 per cent. profit on total sales, with the additional requirement that the total annual earnings from his meat business shall be limited to 9 per cent. on his average capital necessarily used by him in that business, including borrowed capital. This profit is to be net after expenses are paid for Federal taxes. Interest on bonds and borrowed money and dividends may not be treated as expenses, but must be paid by the packer out of his profits.

"The meat business on the investment which the 9 per cent. profit is computed includes slaughtering and packing of meats and all foods which are mainly of animal origin. It includes the operation of cars and marketing branches and the business in byproducts of live stock. It does not include products not primarily of animal origin or highly elaborated products containing more or less animal material, such as soap, tanner leather, glue or fertilizer."

Mr. Cotton declared that on the specialty business the large packer should not be allowed to make a total profit excessive of 15 per cent. on their investment.

The five large packers referred to are Armour & Co., Cudahy & Co., Morris & Co., Swift & Co., and Wilson & Co.

GRAPES SPOILING IN SPAIN.

War and Lack of Tonnage Prevent Their Shipment.

On account of the war and the lack of tonnage thousands of bunches of of Malaga grapes are spoiling on the piers at Almeria, Spain, as the United States is almost the only country to which the fruit can now be exported. Under normal condition the grapes, packed in small barrels with sawdust, were brought to New York, Boston, and Philadelphia in fast passenger liners which made the trip in eight to ten days. Now they have to be sent on slow freighters. As a result a quantity of the fruit is in poor condition on arrival and is condemned by the Board of Health of the port. A British freighter arrived recently at an Atlantic port with 33,000 barrels of Malaga grapes in her hold, but the fruit was in such condition that much of it had to be destroyed.

PRAISES JEWISH WAR WORK.

Secretary Baker Writes to Commend Welfare Board.

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker has addressed to Colonel Harry Cutler, Chairman of the Jewish Board of Welfare Work in the United States Army and Navy, for which the campaign for $1,000,000 is being conducted under the leadership of Jacob H. Schiff, this letter of indorsement:

"Colonel Harry Cutler, Chairman Jewish Board for Welfare Work, Eddy Street, Providence, R. I.

"Dear Sir: Mr. Fosdick has told me of the effective activity of the Jewish Board for Welfare Work in co-ordinating the various Jewish agencies which have sought recognition for work inside our military camps.

"In order to prevent duplication of effort, it was necessary to deal with a single agency, broad enough in its scope and organization to comprehend other groups seeking to do the same kind of work.

"For that reason we were very glad when such men as Jacob Schiff, Felix Warburg, and yourself came forward with this plan for a Jewish Board for Welfare Work, and I am only too glad to congratulate you on what has been accomplished, and to wish you every success in your co-ordinating activities.

"Cordially yours,

"NEWTON D. BAKER,

"Secretary of War."

SUFFRAGISTS HONOR LEADER

Women Voters Present Wrist Watch to Miss Belle Howard.

At the Café Boulevard last night the Suffragists of the Ninth Assembly District held a dinner to honor the district leader, Miss Belle Cecil Howard, and also to commemorate the victory gained by suffrage at the polls. The speakers were Miss Katherine D. Blake, President of the teachers' section of the party, and Mrs. Harriett A. Tupper, who presided.

The dinner was at first designed to be public, and newspaper men were invited. But after it had started a consultation among the women present determined that it would be better to hold the affair as an executive session and reporters were barred. A gold wrist watch was presented to Miss Howard.

HERO LAND OPENING A BLAZE OF BEAUTY

A MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE

Arts of the Theatre, the Opera, and the Brush Unite to Please and Mystify.

Hero Land, the great bazaar in aid of the war charities, opened last night. Before the hour set for unbarring the doors the police ordered them thrown wide because of the thousands waiting in the cold. By 8 o'clock the four floors of Hero Land were crowded.

Hero Land is backed by sixty-seven of the leading war relief organizations, and is under the direct auspices of the League of the Allies. Among those engaged in the project are many of the social leaders of New York and Washington. The wife of the President and Arthur James Balfour are the Honorary Patrons. More than $150,000 was expended in preparing the spectacle described on the program as "The Greatest Spectacle the World has Even Seen for the Greatest Need the World has Ever Known."

Next to the magnificence of the scenery of the staging, the most impressive feature of the bazaar was the gathering of beautiful women, most of them in costume. Mixed in the crowds were the uniforms of all the allies, even of Russia. The spirit of the war dominated it all. In the basement ran a reproduction of a section of trench in front of the Hindenburg line, and on the top floor were grouped guns and trophies taken from the Germans and the wreck of a Zeppelin and of an airplane that tried in vain to bombard London. Between those two extremes were the Great Ball Room, taking up most of the first floor, with its boxes, stage and booths. Most of the second floor is occupied by "Bagdad," in charge of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney; the third floor accommodates booths and hundreds of exhibits, while on the fourth are the official French, Canadian and English exhibits.

Opens With American Night.

It was "American Night" for the opening. The program was carried off in brilliant style, and many dinners were given in the various restaurants conducted by well-known hotel managements. There was a large delegation of officials and society folk over from Washington. Caruso sang, and many theatrical stars gave their talent to make the opening the success it was. An international chorus of 1,000 voices, under the direction of Harriet Ware, sang on the stage on the first floor. "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by Mary Lawton; "The Hymn of Free Russia," by Miss Mary Jordan; the "Italian National Hymn," by Miss Florence Perini; "Rule Britannia," by Miss Eleanor Cessoris; "Marseillaise," by Mme. Christine Eymael, and "The Star-Spangled Banner," by Miss Jordan. There was exhibition skating, feature motion pictures, performances by scores of theatrical folk, including a delegation from "Chu Chin Chow," headed by Tyrone Power. There was something to see and to hear everywhere from the time the doors opened until they closed, early this morning.

It would take volumes to do justice to the beauty of the exhibits. The most striking of all was Mrs. Whitney's "Bagdad," occupying almost an entire floor. There was a striking resemblance to the scenes of Bagdad. At the entrance there were black slaves and screeching peacocks, real ones, grouped about the oil jars that once held the fate of the Forty Thieves. There was, of course, a "Persian Garden," with many young women under veils; there was a booth for every country that was located anywhere in the same part of the world as ancient Bagdad, and mysterious caverns and caves with beautiful invitations without and promises of more beauty within.

The trench, which ran the length of the building, was crowded from the start. Its twists and turns were exact reproductions made under the direction of British Army officers, with sandbags and bricks and mortar and cement. The British tank, sheltered in an addition built to the Grand Central Palace, was to have fired real machine guns in an actual charge over the top of the trenches, but its operation was delayed for want of a permit from the Fire Department.

For the Fatherless Children.

While lacking the grandeur of some of the exhibits, one of the most interesting was a booth for "The Fatherless Children of France," where there were for sale dolls donated by the wife of the President, Marshal Joffre, Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French Ambassador, and by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. Miss Lusita Leland was in charge of this booth. She said last night that she hoped to have Mrs. Wilson at the booth on at least one of the sixteen days the bazaar will be open. Among the exhibits is the first sack that carried flour to the destitute Belgians.

The Appui Belge booth has a large consignment of goods sent from Paris by the directresses of the fund there. Mrs. J. West Roosevelt and Miss Charlotte K. Harding were in charge of this booth.

Governor and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman were the guests of Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt at dinner, and afterward went to the booth of the Committee for Men Blinded in Battle, of which Mrs. Hewitt is Chairman. Assisting her and grouped about the fifteen-foot lighthouse marking the booth were Mrs. Amos Tuck French, Miss D. H. Richardson, Virginia and Harriet McKee, Miss Mary Lawrence Post, Miss Vera McNair, and Mrs. George S. Trevor. One feature of this booth is a collection of captured German helmets.

The Militia of Mercy, of which Mrs. John Hays Hammond is Chairman, distributed a book, "The Defenders of Democracy," having portraits of President Wilson, Colonel Roosevelt, Cardinal Mercier, General Pershing, and General Cadorna, with a tribute by Lord Northcliffe to President Wilson.

General J. Franklin Bell was the guest of honor, with his staff, at the booth of the American Godmothers' League. Here wool was sold at reasonable prices for making knitted things for soldiers and sailors.

A striking exhibit was the Canadian Log Cabin, of which the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire are the patrons. Mrs. Frank Duff Frazier was in charge of the exhibits, including costly furs from Canada, old Indian beadwork, maple cream candy, and Indian rugs and blankets. Almost every one went to see the collection of official Canadian war pictures shown on the fourth floor under the direction of Major Boehm. These pictures have become famous in Canada, where hundreds of persons recognized relatives in the pictures. Soldiers are shown leaping out of the trenches, going over the top with smiles on their faces. Captured Boches by the score are there, and German dead—most of the dead men shown are Germans.

A Lesson for Those at Home.

"This picture was shown with splendid effect in Canada," said Major Boehm. "We showed that here were men serving for three years under the most arduous and terrifying conditions, and for practically nothing, while men were on strike in Canada as to whether they should work eight or nine hours a day or get a few dollars more a week."

A pen used by President Wilson in signing a number of war orders in the last six months was donated to the Authors' League booth by Pearl Doles Belle last night. It will be auctioned, and no bid of less than $1,000 will be accepted. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Parker Butler were the guests of honor at the Authors' Booth last night.

The police were required to move along the crowds which gathered to see the work of the blind at the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund booth. Hundreds stopped to see blinded soldiers manufacturing electrical goods, a trade which they had been taught by the Double Duty Finger Guild, established by Dr. Schuyler S. Wheeler. The fund has founded two institutions at Neuilly, near Paris, where blinded soldiers have been made self-supporting.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, in charge of the Melting Pot in the Jewish War Relief Section, was assisted by several well-known actresses, among them Peggy O'Neil and Fritzi Scheff. Mrs. Nathan Straus, Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, and Mrs. Benjamin Stern are among those donating exhibits.

The booth for Aid for Destitute Belgian Women and Children and Destitute Belgian Soldiers was decorated in Flemish style, the work being directed by Mrs. John W. Alexander. Maxine Elliott and Constance Collier assisted at the booth.

Posted in prominent positions about Hero Land were posters headed: "What Becomes of the Money?" These posters attracted much attention, in view of the recent investigations of war charities. They said:

"Every cent taken in at this bazaar is turned over to the Guaranty Trust Company, which has an office on the second floor.

"Collections are made twice a day by Guaranty Trust Company employes, who check up the gate receipts, cash registers, vouchers, etc.

"Each charity is credited with the total amount taken in at its booth, but no money is paid out to any charity until its accounts have been audited and approved.

"Each charity will be paid one hundred cents on the dollar of all receipts taken at its booth, and will be required to make a special accounting of the use to which the money is put.

"The organizations which have underwritten the expenses of the bazaar will, in addition, receive their pro rata share of the total profits of the bazaar, subject to the same strict accountability."

Some Notables in Attendance.

Among the well-known persons seen in the boxes were Governor and Mrs. Whitman, Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Brig. Gen. W. H. Wheeler, Colonel G. C. Brewer, Brig. Gen. W. A. White of the British Recruiting Mission, Lady Lister-Kaye, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., Charles D. Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, Mrs. William Astor Chanler, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Delano, Marquis and Marquise de Polignac, Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Simon Baruch, Mrs. Oscar S. Straus.

In the middle of the evening Governor Whitman walked to the front of the stage and delivered a short speech, with a brave and successful effort to make his voice heard above the mingled sound of thousands of voices.

"We call this Hero Land," he said, "but the real Hero Land is where brave men are giving their lives for the most holy cause in which men ever fought. The real Hero Land is over there in the trenches of France, where the soldiers of freedom have gone forth to battle. Brave Frenchmen, Belgians, Britishers, Italians, and now, at last, the sons of Uncle Sam, stand shoulder to shoulder, and our hearts tonight go out to the fine American men who are following the Stars and Stripes."

There was great applause when the Governor said:

"The boys who have gone from the United States, and especially those from the State of New York, are your friends and my friends, your brothers and my brothers, your sons and my sons, and for them this great bazaar is being given. What we give here is very little; what they give there is all they have to give, for those boys of New York are ready to lay down their lives for freedom over there, and God bless them, every one. I beseech your help and your support for this great effort which is designed to help those who themselves are heroes."

Hero Land will be closed today. It will reopen tomorrow morning.

ALL THE TOOLS OF WAR IN THE BRITISH EXHIBIT

Devices Used by Pro-Germans Here to Send Needed Materials to the Kaiser Are Shown.

The most complete and most absorbingly interesting of all the exhibits at Hero Land is that of the British Government, on the fourth floor of Grand Central Palace, in charge of Mrs. William Astor Chanler, assisted by a number of British army officers. It shows tools of war—the tools of the Germans and the Allies.

There is the wreckage of a Zeppelin that tried to bomb Buckingham Palace; there is a Fokker airplane brought down on the western front by a British aviator; there are samples of scores of rifles of different nations, and small cannon and trench mortars. There are uniforms of all the belligerents, blood-stained coats of friends and foes. There are U-boat torpedoes that missed their mark and were picked up after their venom was spent. There are air bombs that didn't explode and pieces of air bombs that did explode.

Strikingly interesting to Americans who have heard and read so much of the work of German agents here is an exhibit of several scores of parcel post packages taken by the British from neutral ships, and containing rubber and other materials badly needed by the Germans. There is almost something ridiculous in the thought of Germans shipping a parcel post package containing a few ounces of rubber, yet that it was done is shown by the packages, still intact, preserved as they were seized.

Many of them were mailed from New York. Rubber in every form was in the packages. One German actually sent a package containing one rubber shoe, another contained one package of dental rubber, and dozens carried crude rubber. There were similar packages shipped from Brazil and others from Java. They all showed how the Germans needed rubber and the completeness of an organization to get it, if only in picayune amounts.

One ingenious German shipped a package from Hoboken, marked "photos." Tearing the paper of the package showed the ordinary corrugated paper board used to protect photographs, and there was a picture. But in each ridge of the corrugated board there was a wire of pure nickel.

One of the British officers said that from one neutral ship had been taken more than 100,000 parcel post packages shipped from the United States to Germany with contraband. He said that many of the American concerns placed on the much-discussed British blacklist owed their presence to the discovery of their participation in this parcel post business. "Most of them now," he said, "are on your blacklist, too."

One ingenious German contraption looks like a milk can. It is in effect a big thermos bottle, in which the Germans kept food hot while carrying it to the front trenches. The British officers said it was a most efficient utensil.

The airplane on view is one of the most modern of German make, with the machine gun shooting through the propellor. It sustained very little damage in its fall, and looks as if it were ready to shoot into the air.

What looks almost like a reversion to mediaeval instruments of warfare is a German trench gun made of wooden staves, wrapped with wire. It was used to hurl grenades into English trenches.

About the only whole thing left in the wreckage of the Zeppelin is a water-cooled German machine gun. This Zep was brought down on the outskirts of London after it had taken part in an almost futile raid upon the English capital.

Off in one corner of this exhibit is a .303 Lewis gun, an American invention, of which the English and French have made such good use. There is a large exhibit of bombs used by the English, of which the names of some are: Incendiary bomb, N. E. R. L. 16-lb. bomb, 20-lb. cast-iron bomb, N. E. R. L. cooper bomb, H. E. R. L. 100-lb. bomb, No. 2 long exploders, No. 3 smoke signaling bomb, 33½-lb. heavy bomb.

There are three German liquid fire machines, which look like blowpipes used for ventilation purposes. The machine is turned by a crank which blows out of the front of it the gas which lights as it passes the mouth of the machine.

By the side of German guns is a 88-mm. gun captured from the Turks at Gallipoli. Then there is what the British call a "nasty thing," the Granatenwerfer, a spring gun used by the Germans for throwing trench grenades.

There are a number of British trench limbers torn by shell and shrapnel until they were retired from use. One captured relic is the remnant of a German gun of about five inches, which had been struck by a British shell, which bit off the German gun four inches from the breech.

The British Government exhibit includes a collection of almost every known form of shell-timing device.

MT. HOLYOKE WOMEN URGED TO WAR WORK

$100 AT AUCTION LUNCHEON

Mrs. Gilpatrick Presents Evidence of What 1,000 Earnest Girls Can Do by Work and Saving.

"You are the only people I have ever known who could eat their cake and keep it too," said Mrs. Rogers Bacon of the National League for Women's Service, who was a speaker at the luncheon of the New York Alumnae Association of Mount Holyoke College at the Central Branch of the Young Woman's Christian Association, 610 Lexington Avenue, yesterday. It was a war luncheon of the latest kind. Each alumnus who came brought a lunch box, daintily wrapped, and these were sold by auction before the feast began. They went at varying prices, the lowest 40 cents and the highest $2. Each guest ate the luncheon some one else had brought and for which she had paid, and the returns were $120, of which $100 was clear. It will be used for war work.

Mount Holyoke college girls and alumnae are working hard for the war. They hope to co-operate with other colleges in supporting a working unit at the front and they have been performing great feats of food conservation and other patriotic work this Summer. Mrs. Walter H. Gilpatrick, President of the General Alumnae Association, told yesterday of work done by the girls at the college.

"The high cost of living put a severe strain upon Mt. Holyoke," said Mrs. Gilpatrick, "and the college was facing a deficit of $26,000 in the Spring when the girls first began their conservation work. To aid in cutting down expenses they proposed that during the Spring term they give up butter at dinner. This was done, and the economy of 1,000 people, students and faculty, resulted in a saving of $1,000.

"A call for volunteers who would give an hour's time a day for farming was made, and 800 out of 960 girls volunteered. The gardener said it was hard enough to manage men, and he did not know what he would do with women. However, the girls went to work, and there was so many of them that all kinds of work was done about the place, and the erstwhile reluctant gardener said finally that one girl could do more in an hour than any five men he ever saw.

"Forty girls volunteered to carry on the farm work during the Summer. These girls raised 600 bushels of potatoes, besides planting one-half an acre with tomatoes, one-half an acre with beans, one-half an acre with squash, and an acre with corn. Incidentally the girls who made the sacrifice of their Summer had a glorious time. They found that it was best to do their farm work in the early morning hours. They got up at 4:30, and had the rest of the time for themselves. They tramped many miles; the girls who had canoes used them, and all went swimming. I saw one of them at the end of the Summer, and she had improved so and gained so much flesh I did not know her. When the college was opened in the Fall, our farmerettes had their corn in condition, so that for the Fall term there was green corn for the table three times a week. What was not used for the table they dried for Winter use.

"During the Summer the milk man of the town was unable to get help for his work and proposed to the girls that they work for him. They accepted the offer, milked his cows, canned the milk, and delivered it on the milk route. They were to keep that up until at least the middle of this month, with permission of the school authorities, when it was expected that other help would be obtained. On July 4 our farmerettes gave a parade, which was a delight to South Hadley. The girls made a magnificent record with Liberty bonds, selling $49,500 in a week, and all in the college. It meant economy. One girls said she would do her own laundry work to save money. All the spreads were given up or combined. The junior class gave up their class rings, which made a saving of $400. The Trustees and Faculty took half the amount. The bonds sold were all in small denominations, $1,000 being the largest, and arrangements were made so that payments could be made in small sums. Many of the girls are going to turn over the bonds they bought to the Alumnae Association for the upkeep of Alumnae Hall, which costs $3,500 to run.

"The Mary Lyons Room at the college has been turned into a surgical dressing room where great quantities of dressings have been made. The girls are taking up courses in nursing and in stenography and typewriting as a preparation for war work, and they knit all the time. It has now been forbidden at meal times."

Miss Elizabeth Perkins of the American Fund for French Wounded told of the rehabilitation work which Mount Holyoke hopes to go into, as she had seen it carried on by the fund at the French front. She told of the five motor kitchens belonging to the Fund which follow along behind the army ready to help the destitute people in the districts where the Germans are driven out. She said the Fund workers were prepared for this last drive in France and for the extra help that would be required of them. She told of eating horse steak and the war bread, the loaves strung on a rope and carried to their destination thrown over the back of a mule.

"Of course the bread is a little germy and a little muddy when we get it," she said, "but it is very good. You cannot imagine the absolute destitution of those people. No home, no food except that given them by the soldiers, no way of working and unable to plant their lands, which are growing now only little red flags which mark the places of unexploded shells which the soldiers have not had an opportunity to dig out. And with all this, when I ask the women if they want peace I have never had one who did not say to me: 'Never peace without victory.'"

Smith College is looking after ten villages in France, and we have twenty-five. It takes $175 to rehabilitate a family, give them chickens, rabbits, perhaps a goat, and most of the things must come from over there. You can get a stove, the kind to which they are accustomed in Paris, and they like the French pots and pans, which they know how to use. Fruit trees must come from there, too. We have set out 3,000 of them.

"We do not want to pauperize the people, and we charge nominal sums for many things, a sou for milk, perhaps. They do not wish to be pauperized. In one village where I was I went to a house and asked for food. I had had nothing to eat since my morning coffee. The roof of the house was wet and the floor was wet, and the man I found there said he would see if his wife could find me an egg. He was the Mayor of the village. He had his wine cellar still, and his wife cooked me two eggs, but when I wished to pay they refused. They would take nothing from the Americans, who had done so much for them. They said, however, that if I could send them a pair of blankets they would be useful. There was an officer staying with them, and he needed blankets; for themselves it did not matter.

"They need such things as condensed milk from here and clothes. Every one needs clothes and all the warm things they can get. Nothing could be colder than the north of France. Our workers there go to bed wearing all the clothes they can get, and they have not been really warm once since they have been at work. One thing that we want is a motor dispensary that we can take from one place to another."

SWANN TO RID CITY OF BAZAAR IMPOSTORS

Plans Inquiry of Fetes That Show Expenses Disproportionate to Receipts.

All of the so-called patriotic bazaars or war charities that show expenses disproportionate to net receipts or suspicion of having been exploited for the personal benefit of private profiteers in the names of soldiers and sailors will be investigated by the District Attorney and the Grand Jury, District Attorney Swann announced yesterday.

"Thousands of dollars have been diverted from the pockets of the people by swindlers posing as the representatives of charity and patriotism, while our soldiers and sailors here and abroad have received no benefit at all," said Mr. Swann. "These impostors also injure the worthy efforts of men and women conducting legitimate enterprises. We are going to make it impossible for these impostors to impose upon the public in future. Then the honest, patriotic bazaar or war charity may continue to work for our soldiers and our allies without interference by impostors and the givers may have reasonable assurance that their funds will be applied in the proper way."

It was announced at the District Attorney's office yesterday that information had been received that one man had made a profit of $2,800 by putting on charity fêtes.

Waldemar De Bille, executive director of the Army and Navy Bazaar, who has notified the District Attorney that he will volunteer to go before a grand jury tomorrow and tell what he knows of the management of the bazaar, which netted but $754, telephoned from his home at Greenwich, Conn., yesterday, according to the District Attorney's office, that Lt. Donald Fox had first suggested the idea of the bazaar. Fox has been indicted.

Following the complaint made by officers of the Seventy-first Regiment to the District Attorney that a large amount of the proceeds of a benefit to aid dependents of the members of the command had been withheld under the terms of a contract with Forsyth and Fisk of 200 Fifth Avenue, their attorney, Alexander Mayper, notified Mr. Swann yesterday that his clients had voluntarily agreed to refund their share received as commissions on contributions they had obtained for the regimental bazaar.

Mr. Swann said that George F. Sweeney, manager of the advertising for the program of the Army and Navy Bazaar, had refused to make a similar refund, which he had received under the terms of his contract. The Grand Jury will resume its investigation tomorrow.

State Senator Charles C. Lockwood of Brooklyn said yesterday that at the next session of the Legislature he would introduce a bill to compel all fairs, bazaars, and entertainments given in the name of charity and not conducted by responsible incorporated bodies, to be licensed, and making provision for the auditing of their accounts. "It is time," said Senator Lockwood, "that frauds perpetrated under the guise of philanthropic patriotism should be suppressed."

MORE GOLD AND CASH IN RESERVE BANKS

Increases of $54,200,000 in Investments and $31,800,000 in Net Deposits.

$112,329,700 TO THE ALLIES

Of These New Advances Britain Received $55,000,000 and France $40,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Gains of $20,400,000 in gold reserves and of $21,900,000 in total cash reserves, together with increases of $54,200,000 in investments and of $31,800,000 in net deposits are indicated by the weekly bank statement issued by the Federal Reserve Board as at close of business Nov. 23, 1917.

During the week the Government redeemed large amounts of certificates of indebtedness, thereby strengthening the reserve position of the banks. On the other hand, heavy withdrawals of Government deposits from depositary banks apparently increased the pressure of the banks, causing an increase of discounts, largely at the New York bank.

The latter bank reports a decrease of $28,000,000 in reserve and of $27,800,000 in Government deposits. Its investments show an increase of $17,100,000, while an adverse balance of $58,900,000 shown the week before in account with other banks has been turned into a favorable balance of $9,500,000.

The bank disbursed during the week $112,329,750 to the Allies, $55,000,000 going to Great Britain, $40,000,000 to France, $15,000,000 to Italy, $1,329,750 to Russia, and $1,000,000 to Belgium.

Boston's decline of $14,300,000 in reserve is due largely to the heavy withdrawals of Government funds, while Chicago's decline of $12,300,000 in reserves is accompanied by an increase of $21,700,000 in investments.

Bills discounted on hand show an increase of $168,200,000, all the banks except Minneapolis and Dallas reporting considerable increases under this head. Of the total discounted paper held, $449,500,000, as against $319,600,000 the week before, is represented by member banks' collateral notes. Over 80 per cent. of these notes, or $365,500,000, secured by Liberty bonds and United States certificates of indebtedness, the New York bank alone reporting $299,200,000 of this class of paper on hand.

Aggregate holdings of acceptances increased about $6,000,000, the larger increase shown for New York being offset in part by net liquidation reported by some of the Western banks. Government short term securities decreased by over $130,000,000, chiefly at the New York bank.

Other classes of earning assets show but little change for the week. Total earning assets stand now at $979,100,000, and constitute 1.458 per cent. of the banks' paid in capital, compared with 1.387 per cent. shown the week before. Of the total, discounts constitute 67 per cent.; acceptances, 21.4 per cent.; United States securities, 11.4 per cent., and warrants, .2 per cent.

Increases in paid in capital aggregating $445,000 mainly through admission of new members are reported by four reserve banks. Since Oct. 12, the gain in paid in capital amounts to over $6,000,000, corresponding to a combined capital and surplus of about $260,000,000 of newly admitted members.

Government deposits decreased $22,500,000 with considerable shifting of funds and concentration at New York, Chicago, and San Francisco. Member banks' reserve deposits show a decline of $53,800,000, Boston, Chicago, and San Francisco reporting the largest decreases.

Outstanding Federal reserve notes of $1,102,287,000, show an increase of $63,867,000 for the week, and are secured by $623,948,000 of gold and $532,411,000 of paper pledged with the agents. The banks report a total of $1,015,812,000 of Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation, an increase of $43,307,000 for the week.
